Eye Witness Describes Tragic End of Mrs. Stillman

Verdict of Accidental Death Returned by Jury Considering Motor Fatality on Keene Road

Finding Is That Driver Was Overcome By Sudden Illness and Temporarily Blinded, Rendering Him Incapable of Managing Car.

CONFLICTING TESTIMONY IS GIVEN BY ELEVEN WITNESSES EXAMINED

Jurymen Recommend Erection of Danger Signs at Curves on Roads—Husband of Dead Woman Describes the Tragedy.

After hearing the evidence of eleven witnesses and deliberating for an hour yesterday evening, the jury returned a verdict of accidental death at the inquest of Mrs. W. I. Stillman, who was killed in a motor accident three miles from Peterborough, near the Duffus homestead, on the road to Keene, on June 25. The cause of death was declared to be a fracture at the base of the skull, caused by an accident to the car driven by T. L. Diamond who, the jury found, was overcome by a sudden spasm of sickness which temporarily blinded him and rendered him unable to control the car. It was also recommended that danger signs be erected near the curve where the accident occurred, and at similar points. The text of the jury's finding follows:

The said Mrs. Stillman's death was due to a fracture of the skull caused by an automobile accident on the 25th day of June, 1926, about four miles from Peterborough on the Keene Road. According to the evidence of Mr. Diamond who was driving, owing to a sudden attack of blindness, he lost control of the car. We are also of the opinion that the proper officials should have dangerous turns of this description well marked for the safety of automobile traffic.

The inquest was held in the Police Courtroom. The Coroner, Dr. T. W. H. Young, presided. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., examined the witnesses. C. A. Payne of Campbellford and Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., held watching briefs for Mr. Diamond and Mr. Stillman respectively.

The following jurymen answered their names: J. Lynch (foreman, Robert Smith, John Gillespie, G. H. Hutchieson, W. J. Martin, J. Angus McPherson, Walter Fisher, Harry Crane, Fred W. Jopling, Chris. W. Hughes, Thmas H. Hooper and G. G. Evans.

W. I. Stillman

William I. Stillman, the first witness, who still bore traces of the calamity and had to be carried in a chair, described the events that preceded the tragedy. On June 25, the party left Campbellford in order to come to the circus in Peterborough. In the car were himself and his wife, Diamond, owner and driver of the car, and Mrs. Diamond, and Miss Mary McGregor, niece of the Diamonds. They left Campbellford at 11.55 and journeyed at a high speed, until the accident occurred three or four miles, he believed, from Peterborough. After the accident, he became unconscious. When he came to himself, he saw a man standing alongside him, who told him what had happened. Stillman again became unconscious. On recovering again, he asked for his wife. He was told she was dead. On hearing the news, he relapsed into unconsciousness once more. When he regained his faculties he found Dr. McCulloch attending to him.

Some time before the accident, he said, he noticed from the speedometer that the car was travelling at the rate of 40 and 45 miles an hour. He was sitting beside the driver. They kept up a high speed pretty near all the way. As a result of the accident, his right arm and right leg were broken and his body was badly bruised. He was black and blue all over. He had been in St. Joseph's Hospital for ten weeks and was still a patient there. He and Diamond were friends. On arranging to set out an the journey, he suggested that Diamond should provide the transportation, while witness would pay the enrance money into the circus. He gave $4 to Diamond to pay for the tickets for himself and his wife. After the accident, Diamond sent the money back to witness while the latter was in hospital.

Harry Redmond stated that he lived one mile south of the scene of the accident and was the first to arrive on the spot after the accident happened. He saw the car coming round the bend of the road. It was travelling very fast and it took the ditch, running thirty feet along the wire fence and hit a tree. Mrs. Stillman was shot out by the left door. When he got to her, she did not move. He helped Mr. Diamond out. Mr. Diamond was still in the driver's seat and seemed somewhat dazed. Mrs. Diamond had slid under the seat of the coach. He got the little girl out and asked if she were injured. She said, "No." The car was wrecked. He knew the district well, having lived there all his life. He identified several photos of the scene of the tragedy. In answer to Mr. Hatton, witness said he thought 25 miles was the highest speed at which one could safely round the curve of the road.

Dr. McCulloch

Dr. J. Malcolm McCulloch said that while at dinner on June 25, he received a call from the Clinic informing him that an automobile accident had occurred on the road to Keene and asking him to proceed there and have an ambulance brought. On arriving there, he saw a woman who was covered with blood. On approaching her, she pointed to another lady lying on the ground, and said "Attend to her first." On examining Mrs. Stillman, he found she was dead, having suffered a fracture of the base of the skull. He then attended to Mr. Stillman, putting the broken leg in splints.

He expressed the opinion that there were two reasons for decreasing speed at that point—the down grade and the curve. Dr. McCulloch whimsically asserted that he had been trained to caution by a wife who drove from the back seat.

Mary McGregor.

Describing the fatal journey Mary McGregor said that it did not seem as though the car was going very fast. She had been in cars that travelled 45 miles an hour, and the car on June 25 did not appear to be travelling at this high rate of speed.

Asked by Mr. Hatton "Who drove the cars at 45 miles an hour?" Miss McGregor naively replied "I'd rather not tell."

Thos. Heffernan.

Mr. Heffernan, who was one of the first to render assistance to the unfortunate party, said the car passed him previous to the accident. He judged the car was going at a speed not exceeding 40 miles an hour. He had seen many cars travelling just as fast. He did not think it safe to travel round the bend at more than 25 miles an hour.

Mayneard Coward, said Diamond passed him about four miles from the scene of the accident. He said he thought Diamond would be travelling about 35 miles an hour. Diamond did not reduce speed while passing.

J. Walsh told the jury his home was six or seven hundred yards from the scene of the calamity. He telephoned at 1.15 for the police and ambulance. The bend was danger-

15,000 Race For Diamonds In New Field Of Transvaal

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 2.—South Africa's latest diamond rush brought 15,000 persons, including 120 women, in full running kit or bathing costumes to a farm in the Transvaal district. Prospectors in one field have already found diamonds worth $180,000.

Among the sprinters were several runners with good track records. One syndicate employed thirty university athletes as runners.

More than 35,000 claims were pegged out and the population of the district was increased from a few hundred to about 50,000 almost overnight.

SEEK EXHIBITS FOR LOCAL FAIR

Kiwanians Will Interview Manufacturers at Toronto Exhibition.

PRODUCED IN CANADA.

A delegation from the Kiwanis Club is going to visit the Exhibition at Toronto on Thursday with the view of interesting the manufacturers exhibiting there in the proposition of bringing their exhibits to Peterboro for the Kiwanis Produced-in-Canada Fair to be held in the Armouries in October. In fact the committee has already been in touch with some of the outside manufacturers by correspondence and they have not only expressed themselves as willing to exhibit at the coming Produced-in-Canada Fair but some of them are very grateful for the opoprtunity, realizing that their exhibits would be seen by not only the Peterboro people but also by those within a radius of at least one hundred miles, as this coming Fair will be extensively advertised throughout the surrounding territory and will undoubtedly bring in large crowds from the outside.

EXCESSIVE RAIN FLOODS ALBERTA

Every River in Southern Part of Province Is Rising.

CALGARY FLOODED.

CALGARY, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—With every river in the province rising to a greater degree than has yet been seen this year, even at the time of high water in Spring, and reports of cloudbursts from the south, Calgary and district, together with all of Alberta south of Edmonton, have witnessed in the last two days more rain than the country has had at one time for the past six years.

Up to late last night in Calgary, and since Monday morning, three inches of moisture had fallen. Subways in the city were flooded. The Bow River had risen two feet six inches and the Elbow twenty-three inches.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.— (United Press.) — Frank E. Campbell, at whose funeral parlors Rudolph Valentino lay in state, has begun to advertise for customers. Prominent advertisements on the front page of New York newspapers invite attention to the ornaments of the gold room, its specially woven tapestries, hand-made French carpeting, gold piano and lavish furnishings.

MORE EVIDENCE DISCLOSED IN BALLOT INQUIRY

LAC LABICHE, Alta., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—Efforts made by J. A. Simmoneau, district returning officer of the Lac La Biche rural poll to prevent Frank Fisher, the poll clerk, from giving evidence that H. D. Hamel, J.P., post-master and mayor of the town, had marked a ballot which he obtained from Simmoneau on behalf of one Joe Besestt, and that he had influenced the putting in of some five other ballots for persons who did not vote in person at the 1925 federal election at that poll in the Athabasca riding, were disclosed by Fisher, recalled as witness before Mr. Justice Clarke. Fisher's evidence was given following a dramatic denial by Simmoneau that there had been any stuffing of the ballot boxes either by Hamel or by any other person in which Simmoneau denounced Fisher as "a liar." Recalled by R. D. Tighe, counsel for the Commission, Fisher said:

"Simmoneau came to see me about Wednesday of last week. He came to my store. There were people in the store and when I asked him if he wanted anything he said he wished to see me in private."

"What happened then?" asked Mr. Tighe.

"I took him into the office at the rear of the store," proceeded Fisher. "He said he had heard I was going to tell everything that happened at the election. He said I could take his word of honor that it was safe for me to deny everything as the poll book was lost and could not be found."

"Did he say how he knew that?" asked Mr. Tighe.

"Yes, he said he had spoken to Mr. Gagnon, the returning officer, a few days before Gagnon's death and Gagnon had said there was nothing to fear because the poll book had been destroyed and it would never be found."

"Did Mr. Gagnon tell Simmoneau why the poll book had been destroyed?"

"He said it had been destroyed to protect us. Simmoneau said I need not fear. I needn't tell what had happened as there was no way of finding out what had been done. I asked him what he was going to do about Marcisse Boucher, the interpreter at the poll, and he answered 'Oh, I will fix him all right. I will see him tonight'."

Fisher was subjected to gruelling cross-examination by Hugh C. Macdonald, K.C., counsel for C. W. Cross, but stuck to his story.

The Commission left Lac La Biche for Edmonton Wednesday and will hold its next meeting at Fort Saskatchewan on September 8th.

Foreigners on List

The Boyle Road poll near Boyle on the Alberta and Great Western Railway yesterday provided Mr. Justice Clarke with the final mystery of many mysterious p[illegible] which have come under his notice as Commissioner conducting the investigation into the alleged irregularities in Athabasca Riding in the Federal election of October, 1925.

William Blair, enumerator of the poll, said the Voters' List was prepared by George Gagnon, a son of the late Izaac Gagnon, the returning officer. Blair got the name of six resident farmers in the polling division and then secured forty-three other names, these being laborers who were working on road construction work in the district. Most of these men were foreigners. The poll gave Cross 25 votes and Kellner 5.

V. Duplessis, the district returning officer, said the poll was not held at the designated place, but at the camp where the roadmen stayed, and tthe clerk at the camp wrote the names in the poll book.

Curfew Law Bothers Cops Can't Tell Old From Young

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—United News.)— Bobbed hair, rolled stockings and short skirts are interfering with the police department's attempt to enforce the 10 curfew for girls, under 16 years of age here. After two nights of work among late promenades the police reported to their chiefs that they could not tell the young ones from the old ones because they all dressed alike.

WILL NOT ADMIT UNITED STATES TO WORLD COURT

MEMBERS PROTEST.

GENEVA, Sept. 2 — Opposition to the United States reservation that the statutes of the permanent court of international justice could not be amended without the consent of the United States was strenuously offered by Right Hon. Sir George Foster at the conference of members of the court considering the reservations yesterday.

This condition is embodied in reservation No. 4, which also provides that the United States may withdraw from the court at any time after adherence to the international tribunal. The conference had agreed to reservations 1, 2 and 3, and were discussing No. 4 when Sir George rose to the point that the U. S. reservation, if accepted, would prevent members of the League of Nations, to which the United States has no obligations, from ever amending the court statutes without permission of the U.S. The Canadian senator remarked that the league members might deem an amendment necessary in the future, and he doubted the wisdom of the United States inhibition.

Jugo-Slav Support

Sir George's position was warmly supported by M. Markovitch, former minister of justice of Jugo-Slavia.

M. Markovitch held that if the U. S. merely wanted to participate in the procedings for amendment, there could be no opposition; but if she wanted the power of veto, the reservation was unacceptable.

Latins Intervene

The session was rapidly getting snappy in tone when Latin-America through Senor Buero, of Uruguay, and Senor Zumeta, of Venezuela, intervened, demanding precise information as to whether amendments to the statutes required unanimity or a mere majority. The Venezuelan delegate declared that if unanimity were necessary, the U. S. condition could not be approved. Senor Buero favored a general policy giving the most favorable solution to the wishes of the United States.

The subsequent discussion brought out the fact that no provision exists specifying whether unanimity is obligatory.

M. Rolin, of Belgium, referring to the U.S. reservation of the right to withdraw from the court at any time, warned the delegates that members of the league who were members of the court would not have a like privilege.

The conference adjourned until 4 p.m.

SPAIN WON'T WAIT FOR COUNCIL SEAT

Will Withdraw From League Without Hearing Decision.

PARIS, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—The Havas Agency's Geneva correspondent says Spain will withdraw from the League of Nations without awaiting the decision of the Council regarding her demand for a permanent Council seat. Official notification to this effect, he adds, will be given the League within twenty-four hours.

PUPILS' STRIKE IS THE OUTCOME OF OTTAWA ROW

Students in Capital City Demand Reinstatement of Gray Nuns.

CHAIRMAN HOLDS FIRM.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press). — An indignation strike was declared yesterday by the pupils of one of the capital's separate schools in answer to the action of the Catholic School Board in refusing to permit Grey Nuns of the Immaculate Conception from occupying positions as teachers. At 9 o'clock, the hour at which the children were to return to their classes upon the completion of their summer vacation, 200 pupils congregated outside the school of Our Lady, in a noisy crowd, and refused to enter. It was declared they would not register for their classes until their old teachers—Grey Nuns of the Immaculate Conception — are re-employed.

S. M. Genest, chairman of the School Board, and who has clashed with English-speaking members of the board over the teacher question, declared he would give no ground to either the pupils or their parents. Many of the latter gathered outside the school of Our Lady, with the "strikers."

Proper Education.

"We are ready to give the pupils proper education under properly qualified teachers," Mr. Genest said. "The Grey Nuns of the Immaculate Conception will never teach in any of the schools under the jurisdiction of the board."

The pupils were reported as registering as usual at all the other separate schools in the city.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN NICARAGUA

SEVERE LOSSES.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press). — Government troops have fought a battle with revolutionary forces near Coseguina, on the north-west coast bordering on the Gulf of Fonsca. The engagement lasted many hours and ended in the defeat of the revolutionists, with large losses on both sides.

Government reports place the losses of the Government troops at 60 killed and the revolutionists at 40, but no estimate has been given of the wounded.

Committee Chairmen Can't Muster Quorums

After waiting for half an hour, Chairman Greene of the Parks committee, with Mayor Holloway and Alderman Hancock, were just going home when Alderman Turner arrived, making a quorum.

When the business of the Parks committee had been attended to, Ald. Hancock left, and Ald. Turner's Fire, Water and Light committee was left without a quorum and had to postpone the meeting.

Aldermen Cotton, Phelan and Ackerman are out of the city and they caused a shortage of two members on each committee. Ald. Denne was present, but is not a member of either committee.

The Parks committee opened the tenders for a memorial gate for Mrs. Nichols, to be erected at Jackson Park. The masonry contract will be let to Henry Bros. at $514.00 and the gates will be supplied by the Montreal Architectural Iron Works for $315.00.

Other tenders were: For masonry, J. H. Sherwood, $664; for gates, William Hamilton Co., $4.25; Canadain Orilton Co., $425; Canada Ornamental Iron Co., $945; Orchitectural Bronze and Iron Works, $380.

Thieves Take Fresh Pies Leave Watch and Money

CHATHAM, Sept. 2—After ransacking drawers and gathering up many articles of silverware in the home of Mrs. Victoria Clark, Colborne street, thieves ate a newly baked pie and carried off another. The burglary was perpetrated in broad daylight while Mrs. Clark was taking her children for a walk. The thieves entered the dwelling by forcing a door. It is believed they were disturbed, for they neglected to take a gold watch and a sum of money lying on a dressing-table in one of the bedrooms.

AGREE ON TERMS OF SETTLEMENT OF DEBENTURES

Old Grand Trunk Pacific Bonds Will Be Replaced By C.N.R.

AT TWO PER CENT.

Stock Will Be Reduced By Means of Sinking Fund.

LONDON, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press Cable).—Through the intermediation of a special Advisory Committee consisting of several London financial leaders, including Reginald McKenna, a settlement has been reached between the Canadian National Railways and the holders of the 4 per cent. Grand Trunk Pacific debenture stock, which was classed as worthless by the Royal Commission, which some years ago valued the Grand Trunk properties for the Canadian Government.

The settlement, which has been signed by Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadian National Railways, provides for the issue of new debenture stock to bear interest at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum, and this will be exchanged, pound for pound, for the old G. T. P. stock, about $35,000,000 of which is still outstanding. Thus the holders of the old stock will receive par for their holdings, except for a portion which, under the terms of the agreement, will be redeemed within the next ten years at prices ranging between £60 and £100 per share, the exact amount to be fixed by tender.

These redemptions will be made from a sinking fund created by the setting aside annually of 2 per cent. of the new stock issue. The whole arrangement, however, must receive the ratification of the Canadian Parliament ,this stipuation having been incorporated in the settlement signed by Sir Henry Thornton.

Thirty-Four Millions Outstanding

The 4 per cent. stock which the present settlement aims to redeem, was issued by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and was guaranteed by the Grand Trunk Railway but not by the Canadian Government. The authorized issue was $50,000,000, and of this $34,879,252.78 is now outstanding. Up to March, 1919, the G.T.P. paid to these debenture holders $12,363,358.88 in interest. The arbitrators subsequently found that the company had never earned this interest and that, therefore, it had been paid from borrowed money.

Ever since the Grand Trunk properties were merged with the Canadian National and taken over by the Canadian Government, there has been persistent agitation in the Old Country for compensation from the Canadian Government, for the holders of these shares, but both the King and the Meighen Governments successively rejected that appeal.

ELECTION TIME IS NOT PROPER FOR INQUIRY

Sir Francois Lemieux Makes Statement at St. John Sitting.

NEEDS SUPPORT.

Depends on Press and Public To Make Investigation Effective.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—A statement by Sir Francois Lemieux, Commissioner investigating the administration of the Customs Department, featured the opening of the Saint John sitting to-day.

"I have always believed, and it is the sentiment of eminent members of the clergy and of independent citizens of both parties, that during the turmoil of an electoral campaign, it was not the proper time to hold such an investigation," he stated in part.

"I accepted the Commission to conduct this investigation because an eminent man in public life, Sir Henry Drayton, was of the opinion that this investigation should not be held for political ends but should have a national character and be made in public interest, in order to prevent frauds committed in the administration of Customs. I would not have accepted the gratuitous and honorary task under any other conditions."

Sir Francois said he relied "upon the moral and powerful help of the press to make a profitable and effective inquiry," which would help him to make report suggesting, "if necessary, changes in the personnel of the Customs or practical new legislation."

Mr. Calder, K.C., who concurred in the remarks of the Commissioner, complained that the public was not assisting the Commission in obtaining information.

Later the Commissioner ruled that Mr. Calder's application for the appearance of William Duff, former member for Lunenburg, had not been sustained and could not be entertained.

. . . VOICE OF THE LOWLY AND OPPRESSED . . . ADVOCATE OF THE FRIENDLESS . . . RIGHTER OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE WRONGS.

A NEGLECTED ASSET.

(By F. M. DelaFosse.)

One of my earliest recollections of Peterboro is connected with a drive along the Douro side of the Otonabee River to Lakefield. The impression then left on my mind of the extreme beauty of the scenery has not by any means been effaced by the many times that I have since driven over the stony and oft-times mud-strewn roadway. When I look about me and see the great taste displayed by our citizens in beautifying their lawns and gardens, it strikes me as surpassingly strange that a community so evidently enamoured of the beauty of grass and flowers should allow such a wonderful asset as the driveway along the river to remain neglected. Of course, the land belongs to the township of Douro, and presumably the county authorities, as well as the township fathers, would have to be consulted in the matter of placing it in a proper state of repair. But the city might well take a hand in the matter, as well as the corporation of Lakefield, seeing that it could so easily be made one of the most picturesque roadways in Ontario and one which would make city and county alike additionally attractive to the summer tourist.

WATCH IT GROW.

The loyalty of Toronto citizens to the Canadian National Exhibition is perhaps the greatest factor in the marvellous development of that institution.

True, all Ontario rallies to the support of the Exhibition, but after all it is the unswerving faith that Toronto folks have in the "Ex" that has made it the world's greatest annual fair.

Everybody in Toronto is an Exhibition booster. They talk Exhibition to every one with whom they come in contact and in every possible way they co-operate with the management in bringing about results that are the amazement of visitors.

The Examiner believes that something of this same loyalty is being developed here in connection with the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

The people of this district are proud of the Peterborough Industrial, proud of its growth and progress and proud of the attendance record set up last year, and the pride will be shown in a renewed eagerness to assist the directors in making the 1926 Exhibition a record-breaker in every department. Boost the Peterborough Industrial and watch it grow.

NO HALF-HEARTED EFFORT.

Quebec is tackling the problem of securing safer driving conditions in no half-hearted manner, as is evidenced by the statement issued by Judge Choquette of Montreal, that drunken drivers will be given a year's jail sentence.

Already the licenses of several hundred motorists convicted of recklessness have been cancelled and the Quebec authorities are evidently determined that the only way to effectually eliminate careless driving is to chase the offenders away from the wheel.

When the speeder reflects that he is in danger of losing his privilege of driving, and the man who has been taking a chance by handling a machine while under the influence of liquor realizes that a repetition of the offence may cost him a year in jail the result is very likely to be a noticeable improvement on the highways and an appreciable decrease in the number of accidents.

Quebec is doing the job thoroughly and the benefit of such vigorous efforts will not be long in making itself appreciated.

EXTENDING THE SEASON.

Judging by the number of United States tourists on their way home from the lake district, there is still much to be done along the line frequently suggested by The Examiner of advertising the charms of an Ontario visit in September and October.

There is really no reason why our tourist season could not be extended if judicious publicity were used.

The fishing at that season of the year is usually better than earlier in the summer.

Yet the beginning of September sees a rush out of the district on the part of summer visitors.

There must be thousands of people across the border who could be persuaded to visit Ontario in the autumn if something were done to give them an idea of just how delightful a holiday in this Province can be in September or October.

A campaign to reach these polential visitors The Examiner is confident would be attended by success that would completely justify the experiment.

FAME AND REAL MERIT.

The death of a famous screen star recently has given emphasis to the whole situation as to men and women of that class. To be told that the deceased idol had earned a million dollars for appearing in five pictures during a little over a year of time is a distinct shock to a sound sense of real values. The conviction is irrestible that he could not possibly have earned that vast sum, and out of that conviction grows the logical deduction that there is something wrong with a system which makes it possible.

It may be conceded that there is room for creative genius on the part of those who appear on the screen but the one just criticism directed against the whole business of making moving pictures is that very little of that nature has yet appeared. Obviously, this is not because the rewards are inadequate. In the whole course of civilization and commerce no such opportunities for quick fortune-making have occurred as attach the so-called art of acting before a camera. Apparently the essential requirements are a "screen face", a winsome figure, and the ability to respond to direction. In the case of a man, it is a distinct advantage to have the reputation of being "a sheik," whatever that may mean. If there is any genius displayed at all in the matter, it is, with few exceptions, the possession of the director; for the actor merely does what he is told to do. His part is almost wholly automatic. The best actor is the man or woman who responds most effectively to the signals given. He or she may not even know the plot and purpose of the picture. Therefore, to pay so enormously for work of that brainless class is contrary to all the accepted canon of value and proportion in every other relation in life.

It may well be said that popular demand and popular interest in moving pictures has not only made all this possible, but in some degree unavoidable, since the men and women who answer to the specifications are rare. The argument is not, however, convincing. If the business of satisfying such a universal demand is so profitable as to permit one of these automatic actors to be paid more for appearing in a single picture than a college professor can earn in a lifetime, it should give its patrons something better, than they are getting. There is no escape from such a conclusion.

We have heard a great deal about the demoralizing effects of the screen drama. Probably much of it is sheer rubbish. As a recreation, the moving picture fills a useful place, and has given rest and joy to unreckonable numbers. If it does any serious harm, it is among those who find in it the suggestion of unearned and speedy fortune; and, by contrast, the prosaic and slow process of nearly all other ways of winning high reward. That would seem to be a thing capable of remedy at the hands of the men who control the industry.

We should look for our heroes among those who really do something for their fellows. There is not a trace of sacrifice suggested by the life and activities of those men and women who figure on the screen. Quite the contrary. They are very ordinary people for the most part, and, instead of self-denial for the common good, there is much of the opposite nature in their lives. To make popular idols of such creatures of clay is, as has just been said, a reproach to our sense of values. It is not a good thing to see tens of thousands struggle for a final glimpse of a successful automaton, and to have his name given unusual prominence, while really heroic men and women are permitted to pass away almost unnoticed and unsung.

It merely shows how unmeaning and unappraising is the thing we call popular judgment. The situation is not bettered when one realizes that the next most profitable vocation is that of a prize fighter.—Ottawa Journal.

BACK TO SCHOOL.

(An Editorial for Young People.)

If Shakespeare were alive today, he would have to revise his description of the "whining schoolboy, with his satchel, and shining morning face, creeping like snail unwillingly to school." While it would not be true to say that all young scholars welcome the prospect of resuming their duties, there cannot be many who feel any apprehension over the matter, and there must be quite a few who are glad at the thought of meeting their classmates once more and settling down seriously to work. Schools today are not the forbidding places they used to be. It was the custom, not so very long ago, to try to knock knowledge into the heads of the scholars with the hickory stick—and there are people belonging to the older generation who still maintain that that is the most effective method. Children were then made to learn willy-nilly, rather than persuaded to do so by gentle means. Present-day methods are quite different, and very much better. Sympathy, instead of the cane, is relied upon for results, and the consequence is school is no longer a place of dread, but a pleasant institution where knowledge is dispensed under the most agreeable conditions.

The long summer vacation draws to its close, and we trust it has been a very happy one for all our young readers and that they will return to school refreshed and strengthened. Now, at the beginning of the school year, is the time to plan and make good resolutions. "Well begun is half done." Those who wish to come out with a good record at the end of the term—and who does not?—should begin at once to make sure of results. It is not by any spurt of energy at the end, but by steady effort right from the beginning, that school tasks are successfully accomplished and the rewards won. Let each day see its appointed work taken in hand and disposed of, and there can be only one outcome, gratifying to pupil and teacher alike. "The race is not always to the swift." Mere brilliance will not carry one through, if perseverance and effort are lacking.

If some find the discipline of school irksome, let them remember that discipline is a prime necessity of ordered existence. Discipline does not end with school days, but lasts right to the end of life. Education is impossible without it. The very purpose of education is, in fact, to discipline away all that is crude in the human make-up. Go back to school, then, eager for instruction and welcoming discipline. Make the best use of opportunities and reap the sure rewards of industry and sincerity.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Mr. Beaubien of Provencher is one man in Canada who might be expected to have a good word to say about bad roads.

A farmer who turns up at a political meeting after a day spent in the harvest field can justly claim to be known as a good citizen.

The result of the election cannot interfere with the success of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition and this year is certain to win a fresh triumph.

Among the things in connection with the campaign that need not be credited, sagely declares a contemporary, are the election returns.

The politicians will find themselves in competition with the fall fairs for the balance of the campaign.

The trend of tourist traffic is beginning to move south. We have not yet succeeded in convincing them that September is an ideal month to be in our lakeland.

A made-in-Canada exhibit, such as is being arranged by the Kiwanis Club, should be of great educational value.

Let us see. Who is the latest politician to claim that he was misquoted by the press?

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—There was a very slow demand for cattle in the midweek market. There will be no market on Monday, Labor Day holiday, and the packing houses will not be working on that day. Cattle shipped in over the week-end will have to be carried over until Tuesday's market. There are 700 or 800 left over cattle, and these are cleaning slowly at lower prices.

All small meats are strong, a few extra choice veal calves selling up to $14.00.

Calves strong, $13.50 to $14 for tops. Grassers are selling at $6 a hundred.

Hogs firm, $12.75 off cars, $11.75 f.o.b., with a premium of $2.42 per head for selects.

Good lambs stronger, $13.50 to $14 tops. Buck lambs, $11 to $12, culled lambs, $9 to $10.

Lambs—Choice, $14; medium, $11 to $12; cull, $10.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—The export business transacted in the Montreal grain market yesterday was fair. There was some demand for Canadian Western barley and sales of several loads of No. 3 grade were made at 9 1-2c to 10c per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, c.i.f. Montreal. A moderate amount of business was done in car lots of grain and prices were unchanged.

Prices for all grades of Spring wheat flour were steady at the recent declines noted. The volume of business was good. The trade in Winter wheat flour was quiet but values were firm.

An active business was done in all lines of millfeed and the undertone to the market was steady. Extreme dullness marked the trade in standard grades of rolled oats.

The market for baled hay was without any new feature to note, prices being steady with a small trade pasing.

The feature of the egg trade was the stronger feeling that developed in the market for fresh extras and prices for all grades were advanced 3 cents per dozen. This was attributed to the small supplies coming forward and the light stocks on spot. The receipts were 1,185 cases.

An easier tone prevailed in the butter situation and prices were fractionally lower. The enquiry was extremely dull. The receipts were 2,436 packages.

A small trade was done in cheese and the undertone to the market was easier. The receipts were 8,316 boxes.

The undertone to the market for beans was steady with a moderate amount of business passing. Sales of car lots of choice white handpicked were made at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—Wet weather spoiling the harvest in Canada had much to do yesterday with giving a lift to wheat values here. In addition big deliveries of wheat on Chicago September contracts 1,743,000 bushels appeared to have gone into strong hands. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 3-4 to 1 1-4 net higher, corn unchanged to 1-4c up; oats at 3-8 to 3-4c gain, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Profit sharing in the corn market showed most of an early advance in price. Until the final hour corn showed a strong tone, owing more or less to wet weather. Oats derived firmness from other grain.

Provisions were responsive to a downturn in hog values.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—Cattle, 13,000; fed steer market strong to 25c higher; weighty kind up most; $1.00 paid for yearlings and 1,204 pound steers, with 1,396 pound offerings up to $10.90 and 1,404 pound steers $10.70; other classes excepting calves largely steady; vealers 50c lower at $14.00 to $14.50.

Hogs, 17,000; light and medium weight hogs generally 25c to 50c lower; heavy butchers and packing grades steady to 25c lower; 230 to 260 pound butchers mostly $12.25 to $13.60; strong weight butchers downward to $11.00; desirable packing sows $9.50 to $10.50; bulk better grades slaughter pigs $13.00 to $13.50.

Sheep, 18,000; fat lambs steady to 25c lower; bulk westerns $14.35 to $14.40; choice kind held late at $14.85; heavy buck lambs around $11.50; sheep steady, bulk fat ewes $5.00 to $6.75.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 1-4.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-4.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

ARISTIDE BRIAND.

Aristide Briand, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, is a perpetual cigarette smoker and a lover of country amusements. He always smokes the cheapest brand of French cigarettes.

Briand owns a big estate in Normandy, where he spends every week end. During the fishing season he never misses an opportunity to escape from his government duties and the report is current that between bites he prepares his public speeches, which he never writes, contenting himself with a few scribbled notes or signs decipherable only to himself. Briand dislikes to change clothes, his biggest punishment is when for official luncheons or banquets, he has to dress up. He is really happy only when he has no such worries and can walk in the farmyard with a pair of wooden shoes.

HISTA UNCLE

He stood there by the bloomin' door.
Ah, he was just a tap.
And he can opened it because
He didn't owe a rap.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

CORRECT ENGLISH A VALUABLE ASSET

"Good manners and correct English are valuable assets," said a newspaper writer not long ago. "A very wise man once said that your morals are your own, but your manners belong to the public. Few people are consciously vulgar or unkind, but often an impression of crudity and rudeness is given simply because they are in ignorance of the right thing to do or say.

"There are certain expressions and words which while not always ungrammatical quickly reveal an uncultivated person. One of the most common is the use of 'yeh' instead of 'yes;' another which, unfortunately, is heard many times a day is 'don't' for 'does not.' One never says, 'she don't,' but always 'she does not.'

"'Between you and I' is often heard and is used frequently by people of good education. This, however, does not mean that it is correct. Instead, one should say, 'between you and me'."

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Growing old is an awful waste of time.

No use in crying over spilt milk. Consider yourself lucky for not spilling the beans.

Saving for a rainy day is fine. But buy your coal now so you can give winter a warm welcome.

Hit yourself in the nose and see if you don't think Dempsey is going to earn his money.

Strange, but a drouth will dampen a farmer's enthusiasm.

Be careful about vacation letters. Sling too much ink and you may blot your reputation.

Your brakes won't stop the car behind you.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A PRETTY GOOD DAD

He never has told his dad about it
(For dads must worry along without it),
But he's decided, as youngsters will
When they're all alone and the house is still,
That Dad (though in lots of ways he's funny
Concerning dancing, and cards, and money,
And lots of things that he thinks are bad)
Is, after all, a pretty good dad.

He didn't exactly think it over,
But once, one night when he couldn't sleep,
It sort of hit him all in a heap
That he has to work quite hard, a father,
And kids are more or less of a bother,
And he sighed a bit, but his heart was glad

He never has said a word to Mother,
Though he thinks he will some day or other,
And of course he couldn't tell Father now,
He wouldn't know when, he wouldn't know how,
And he'll tell the world—but not his dad—
It's a pretty good father he has had!

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

COURSES IN BIOGRAPHY
By Dr. Frank Crane.

The important part of history is biography.

Men epitomize periods. If you fully comprehend the man's life you will understand the forces that shaped his character and the influence of his personality upon the time.

In these you have the key to the deepest comprehension of the important elements of his period.

If you understand the life of Abraham Lincoln you know the history of America's frontier days and of her Civil War.

If you know Robert Clive and his career in the Orient you grasp the kernel knowledge of England's conquest of India.

If you appreciate all of the life of the little Corsican, Napoleon, you pierce the soul of the history of the times that enveloped him.

Such men condense the currents of change and the spirit and ideals of the mass of people in their epochs.

Dates and dry-as-dust facts are of slender importance for the future. Motives, ideas and reactions are of primary significance.

One focuses the attention upon the dead phase of history, the other upon the living phase which helps illuminate the road of history that is in the making.

Not only is biography an aid to a correct understanding of an age, but it is the most fascinating avenue of approach.

First and last we are interested in men.

Personalities rather than ideas hold our attention.

Biography is history in its most assimilable form.

Following the path of personalities we arrive most easily at the correct sensing of the moving forces of a time.

In view of this it is interesting to note that courses in biography are being offered by the history departments of three colleges.

The institutions which have taken up the experiment lie in widely separated sections of the country.

Whittier College in California, Duke University in North Carolina, and Wittenberg College in Ohio, offer biography courses.

History is "the study of studies" and biography is the most interesting method of attack.

It is to be hoped that other colleges and schools will take up the plan of instituting such courses.

TO RE-INTRODUCE ACT EXTENDING TIME FOR THE CIVIL SERVANTS TO COME UNDER SUPERANUATION ACT

Afford Opportunity For Consideration of Temporary Civil Servant Question.

NEXT SESSION.

Pensions Should Be Based on Merits of Servants' Work.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press). — Sir Henry Drayton, Acting Prime Minister, in a statement issued last night, announces that at the next session of Parliament the Government will re-introduce the Act presented by it shortly before dissolution, extending, for one year, the time in which civil servants may elect to come under the Superannuation Act.

"This will afford an opportunity," declares Sir Henry, "for proper consideration of the question which has never yet been considered, but highly essential, and that is the question of those civil servants who, although working for years and years, are still technically looked upon as temporary. The position of each employee in each and every department must be considered on the actual merits and apart from any technical distinction."

The text of Sir Henry's statement, which makes reference to the case of employees of the Soldiers' Settlement Board, is as follows:

"A large number of representations have been made with reference to the position of members of the Civil Service who do not as yet enjoy the benefits of the legislation, respecting the Civil Service Superannuation Act. It is pointed out that, by reason of the classification of employment, that is, the so-called 'temporary' as against 'permanent,' and also by reason of the fact that the employees of certain departments are not under the Civil Service Commission, numbers cannot avail themselves of the option given to other members of the Civil Service coming within the provisions of the Act.

"Many in the service whose employment is designated as temporary are in fact permanent. The question of superannuation and pensions ought to turn entirely on the merits, class of work, length of service and the like, rather than on any technical distinction as between temporary and permanent employees. This certainly was the intention of Parliament in passing the Act in 1924, as is shown by the following discussion reported in Hansard:

"(A) 'Sir Henry Drayton: What is the meaning of the change made in paragraph (C) by the insertion of the words, "for the purpose of this Act?" I suppose that would enlarge it so that permanent temporaries could come in?

"'Mr. Malcolm: There is a similar provision in the existing Act.

"'Sir Henry Drayton: I am referring to the words, "for the purposes of this Act.

"'Mr. Chevrier: That is intended to take care of certain employees.

"'Sir Henry Drayton: It would cover what we might call "permanent temporaries?"

"'Mr. Chevrier: Yes.

"(B) 'Sir Henry Drayton: What is the effect of Section 22?

"'Mr. Malcolm: This is to enlarge the score of the Act. The only employees covered by this section are those who come under the Civil Service Act or who have been exempted therefrom by Order-in-Council. This section provides that all such civil servants shall come under the provisions of this Act to the same extent as ordinary permanent employees unless they are assigned by the Civil Service Commission upon certificate of tem-

TYPHOID MENACE FOLLOWS STORM

New Orleans Is Told of the Plight of Many Sufferers.

CONDITION SERIOUS.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 2.—(Associated Press.)—Disease, treading in the wake of the tropical hurricane which swept in from the Gulf of Mexico last week, already has brought fever to more than three-score storm victims, reports reaching New Orleans yesterday said.

Ten definite cases of typhoid at Montegut and nearly 50 cases of undetermined fever were reported by Father Joseph M. Coulombe, priest of the Sacred Heart Church there, and Clarence Fraser, Indian guide, who came to New Orleans seeking aid for storm sufferers.

Bayous over which most travel into the section is conducted in normal times are blocked by mashed sea grass and debris, and dynamite has failed to clear the routes for boats.

Such water as is available for drinking purposes, the priest said, was swamp water, and with the clogging of the bayous typhoid has broken out and food is so scarce that persons were forced to subsist on crabs and fish taken from polluted bayous.

VIRDICT OF ACCIDENTAL

ous if one did not know the road well, travelled fast around it. To anyone who knew the road, it could be safely negotiated at 30 or 35 miles an hour. If the road was wet he always slowed down to 10 or 15 miles an hour while rounding the curve. There were many cars on the road on the day of the accident.

Albert Lowe said his was the first car to reach the stricken party. Diamond had passed him on the road. When Diamond passed him there were about half a dozen cars ahead of them.

J. C. Birmingham said he left Campbellford at 11.30. At 1.15 he was at the location of the fatality. He also was passed by Diamond. He could not estimate the speed at which Diamond was travelling.

N. F. Maker.

Provincial Constable Norman F. Maker described the situation as he found it, after hurrying out to the wrecked car in response to an urgent summons.

The car in its mad career had struck the fence, uprooted the post, and crashed against the tree. Mrs. Stillman was dead. Mr. Stillman was receiving attention from Dr. McCulloch. Witness asked Diamond how the accident happened. Diamond answered that he did not know. Diamond also said he had been travelling 30 miles an hour.

After the ambulance had taken away the injured, witness commenced investigations. Following the track from where the car left the road till it struck the tree, he paced the distance at 30 yards. The width of the travelled roadway, from grass to grass, was 16 feet. At the bend the width was 17 feet. The post was 8 ft. 6 inches in length, and 22 inches in circumference. Three feet of the post had been in the soil. The grass patch from the roadway to the tree was 12 feet. The angle made by the bend was one of 75 degrees. There was a great deal of loose gravel on the road, which added to the difficulties of steering. At the time he commenced the investigation he looked at Stillman's watch, which had been taken on for safety by Mr. Walsh, and he found the time was 1.35. He thought 25 miles was the highest speed at which the bend could be rounded with safety.

T. L. Diamond.

Mr. Diamond said he remembered nothing of the actual impact. He was dazed, and something came over his eyes. He slowed down when he found himself becoming overpowered—he never exceeded 30 miles an hour at any time. The traffic on the road was heavier than usual on the day of the accident. He did not pass half a dozen cars on the whole way. There was no agreement between him and Stillman as to remuneration for the ride. Stillman thrust $4 into his hand on the morning of the trip. He did not want the money and tried to return it to Stillman. After the accident he sent the money back to Stillman. He went over 30 miles an hour on one little stretch of the road in demonstrating to Stillman the difference between the Buick which he formerly owned, and the Chrysler which he now owned. He had never been cautioned at any time for speeding. He felt the symptoms come over him just before the accident. It was as though he had become suddenly blinded. Ten days before the accident he had a similar attack. He went to the doctor who told him he had been working too hard and was like a machine without sufficient oil. He could not say whether he had put his foot on the brake or on the accelerator. He attributed the accident entirely to the weakness that took possession of him.

Mrs. Diamond was in the court room throughout the inquest but was not called upon. She was in a highly nervous condition and had to be given attention several times during the

MAYOR-ELECT IS A PRINTER

Sir Rowland Blades Will Succeed Sir W. Pryke In Mansion House.

AN M.P., TOO.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Rowland Blades, M.P., is to be the next Lord Mayor of London, in sucession to Sir William Pryke.

Sir Rowland is head of a well-known firm of printers, Blades, East and Blades, which was founded by the present principal's grandfather. He served as Sheriff of London in 1918, and received his knighthood when the King and Queen visited the City that year in connection with the celebration of their Silver wedding. The war was then still in progress and the Royal visit to the city was almost the ony public event to mark their Majesties' silver wedding. In 1922 Sir Rowland was created a baronet. In the ordinary course a Lord Mayor of London is rewarded with a baronetcy on retirement.

Sir Rowland has represented the Epsom Division in Parliament since 1918.

DECORATE GRAVES.

Campbellford L.T.B. Lodges Hold Annual Decoration Service.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 2.—The Duke of Clarence L.T.B. Lodge No. 35 and the Duchess of Clarence Lodge No. 429 held their annual decoration services at Mount Pleasant on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. The lodges, headed by the flute band, marched to the cemetery where Mr. Cottrell, chaplain of the Marmora Lodge adressed the gathering, after which the graves were decorated. The members of the lodge also placed flowers on the War Memorial in memory of lodge associates.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

The Examiner is authorized to say that there is no truth whatever in the statement that Mr. Burnham intends to stand as an independent. He says: "Let it be a straight fight between those who, as Mr. Dunning said, "We are ready to fight for the Empire" and those who say, "We will wait and see" at the bidding of the Nationalists and other separatists.

BETHANY PERSONALS

BETHANY, Sept. 2.—Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Galbraith, of Port Hope, and the Misses Hannah and Emma Staples have returned from a motor trip to Kingston and other points east.

Misses Marjory and Daisy Jakeman have returned to their home at Ballantyre after a pleasant visit with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jakeman.

Mrs. Clarence Buller and children, of Brantford, are visiting Mrs. Buller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reynolds, Sr.

Mr. Arthur Jemison was a visitor to Port Hope on Saturday.

Mrs. Rehill and her son and daughter, of Peterboro, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Crerar on Friday evening.

Miss Isabel Black, of Peterboro, and Miss Muriel Matchett, of Cavan, assisted at the recent concert given by the Y.L.M.S. of the United Church in aid of the piano fund.

Mr. Clarence Neil was a visitor to Peterboro on Saturday.

Mr. Leonard Cavano, of Michigan, is making a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Cavano.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mahon and children, of Peterboro, visited friends in the village on Saturday.

Mr. Will. Hunter motored to Millbrook on Monday evening and called on acquaintances there.

Mrs. Roy Russell and children, of Cobourg, are visiting Mrs. Charles Davis.

Master Clayton Card, who was wounded in the leg by the accidental discharge of a rifle while on his holidays at Maynooth, has been brought home from the hospital and will soon be able to be about as usual.

Miss Gladys Fierheller has been engaged to teach Fallis School for the coming year.

The school opens here on Sept. 7, with Mrs. Ida Carscadden as principal and Miss Olive Nelson as assistant.

—The—

Constitutional Crisis

The constitutional issue is pure political buncombe, designed to divert attention from the King Government's administration of the Customs Department, upon which issue it was ignominiously defeated in the House of Commons.

Here are the vital stubborn facts:

1 In September, 1925, Mr. King was granted dissolution by His Excellency Lord Byng, on the representation that he must be given a chance to secure a clear working majority. He stated at Richmond Hill that if such a majority was not forthcoming, he would not attempt to carry on.

2 In the old Parliament thus dissolved there had been 234 members, of whom 117 were Liberals, 66 were Progressives or Independents and 51 were Conservatives.

3 In the new Parliament, elected in October, 1925, Mr. Meighen had by far the largest group—almost half the total membership of the House. Out of 245 seats the Conservatives had 116, the Liberals 101, the Progressives 24, Labour 2, and Independents 2.

4 Instead of immediately resigning, as he should have done in view of the ground upon which he had been granted dissolution, Mr. King asked for and was granted leave to carry on, on the assurance that he would leave the fate of his administration to Parliament itself.

5 On Friday, June 25th, three separate motions by so-called independents, in support of which Mr. King's Government marshalled its last ounce of strength, were decisively defeated and the original motion of censure, to which the foregoing had been moved in amendment, was still awaiting decision in Parliament when Mr. King asked His Excellency for dissolution on Monday, June 28th.

6 To have granted Mr. King a dissolution under such circumstances would have been a direct denial of the right of Parliament to pass upon the vote of censure then pending.

7 Following Mr. King's resignation, Parliament by a majority of 10 did actually adopt a direct vote of censure on the King Government, and declared it unworthy of confidence or office.

8 It was Mr. King's refusal to follow British precedent in co-operating with the incoming administration to pass supplies and complete the sessional programme that left Mr. Meighen no alternative but to ask for dissolution.

9 Mr. Meighen followed the same course as that adopted by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1911, when he saw that it was impossible to carry on and abruptly dissolved Parliament.

10 If His Excellency had recalled Mr. King to office, he would have done so in the very face of Parliament's vote of censure.

11 Under Mr. King's interpretation of the constitution a Premier need never resign, but could demand dissolution after dissolution, despite the verdict of Parliament or the electorate, and the Governor General must perforce accept his advice.

This is the story. It calls for no comment—it speaks for itself!

The Conservative Party stands solid as a rock for sound British constitutional practice, the maintenance of the British connection, and the right of Canada to enjoy the blessings of stable Government.

GRAIN IN DUMMER VERY LIGHT CROP

Oats Are Especially Poor This Year—Warsaw News.

WARSAW, Sept. 2. — Very few have their summer harvest all in. Most of the grain is cut. The rains washed off much of the rust, but much of the grain, especially of the later sown oats is very light. There are big heads, but nothing much in them. The sheaves are very light. Generally, the earlier oats are good. There are a few splendid crops of all grains.

Threshing was delayed by the rains last week, but they are at it again. John Payne at present is away south of the village, and Sidney Watley away north.

Most of those who are threshing now are threshing wheat, and will finish later.

A change has to be made in the Institute programme. Mrs. Grover, who was to have addressed the ladies at the October meeting, has found it better to come in September. She will give her address on "The Moral Question," in the Institute Rooms on Thursday, September 9th. As Mrs. Grover is kindly coming and giving her services, a large attendance is requested.

Miss Grace Bullock and a friend from near Detroit spent a few days visiting her sisters near Warsaw.

Miss Pollock, nurse-in-training in Belleville Hospital, spent a few days visiting Mrs. Herrington.

Rev. Dr. Brown from Peterborough took Mr. Herrington's work on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peters are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Webster at Cottesloe. Mr. Peters was the second cheese-maker in Warsaw.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC.

Scholars of Apsley District Churches Gather at Loon Lake.

APSLEY, Sept. 2.—A very happy and enjoyable afternoon was spent on Monday last by the scholars of the combined Sunday Schools of St. George's and St. Stephen's Churches and the Loon Lake Station, when a picnic was held on the shores of Loon Lake. The Revs. C. Spence and J. W. Ogden conveyed the children from Apsley in their cars to the lake where they were met by the scholars from the other two stations. The afternoon was spent in games and sports, and a substantial meal was served at five o'clock in the open, the weather being ideal for the occasion. When the children returned to the village a display of fireworks wound up the youngsters' enjoyment.

Some excitement was caused in George Stephens' store the other day when a huge spider was noticed on a bunch of bananas. George quickly despatched it with a club. It was later presented to Mr. Spence, who pronounced it a tarantula. He has mounted it on cardboard and it is now on view at the Parish Hall.

The rainfall for the month, nearly 6 1-2 inches, has delayed harvesting operations and done a lot of injury to the grain, rust being very prevalent. The marsh clay harvest prospects are gloomy, and unless a spell of dry weather comes it will be impossible to get into the marshes.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's father, Don Jose, terribly disillusioned by the shameless mesalliances of his faithless wife, leaves this legacy of advice to his son: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love when it pleases you. Take it scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time, envied by all men, adored by all women. Lucretia Borgia, at the peak of her notorious power in Rome expresses a desire to meet him. Meanwhile, two admirers fight over him.

Most men, Pedrillo told himself would have been a bit anxious about that situation. The sister of a powerful duke and the mistress of that same important noble, both madly in love, jealous, angry because he had kept them waiting—Pedrillo thanked his stars that he did not have to face them and make explanations.

He should have known that Don Juan never bothered to explain anything, but let his conduct explain itself.

Juan, facing the two women from the doorway, looked at each and spoke meaningly.

"Love lent my feet wings," he said, and each one, taking it for herself, let anger slip away from her and contentment take its place.

He looked at them both again, and smiled, but his smile was not for them. For the situation, rather. For an instant his thoughts ran as Pedrillo's had run. The sister of a powerful duke—the beloved of that same important nobleman—and behind the closed door the wife of that same haughty Roman.

Involuntarily he glanced back over his shoulder toward the door of his private rooms. Too bad that the third woman could not join these two for the moment! Imperia, catching that glance, took a hasty step toward that other door, but Juan was quicker than she, and stopped her flight, catching her hand. He pressed it and glanced toward Trusia. Nodding, the older woman sank into a chair, and Juan went to the girl's side.

"Your brother has learned that you are here, and is on his way to see if it is true."

Terrified, she opened her lips to speak, but he shook his head at her, cautioning her to be silent, and frightened, she let him escort her to the door.

There he took her hand in his and kissed it. Looking up at her, he whispered ardently:

Shyly she nodded, turned and ran out. And Juan, his eyes bright with amusement, turned back to the haughty Imperia.

She, too, was amused, delighted with the manner in which Don Juan had got rid of Trusia, curious to know what he had said to her. Her amusement soon vanished.

He bent over her, as he had bent over Trusia, and he spoke of the same man, and in the same way.

Imperia rose hastily, as terrified as Trusia had been. It was well enough to enjoy the presence of Don Juan, but after all, one had to think of one's bread and wine. Unconsciously her hands flew to the ropes of pearls twisted about her throat, the Duke's latest gift. She turned to go, hesitated an instant—if only she could be sure of Juan's love she would throw the pearls at the Duke's feet and be rid of him. Another glance at Juan told her anew what folly that would be. Yet even in her flight she could not help stopping for an instant, could not help losing her fear for a moment in happiness, as he bent to kiss her hand, murmuring:

She nodded, and then, suddenly terrified again, hurried out to her pelanquin.

Juan, lazily stretching his arms over his head, sauntered back into the room from the anteroom door. Now, if only the women in the bedroom would go—

Juan!" she called, softly. He shrugged his shoulders. If he could meet just one woman who knew when to leave! He went on into the inner room, stood, bored, while Eleanora, wife of the Duke Margoni, threw her arms around him and kissed him eagerly. He must be rid of her, at once!

And again he resorted to his ruse. The Duke Margoni is even now at my gates." Then he whispered, Tomorrow at the same hour."

She nodded, turned to go. Juan sighed with relief.

Relief based on ignorance of the fact that Imperia had just returned hastily to his house, cold with fear, to hide behind the heavy tapestries of the anteroom door. Also on ignorance of another fact—that the Duke Margoni was making his lie a truth, and was indeed at the gates at that moment.

CHAPTER III

Thinking that Eleanora had taken her leave, Juan sauntered across the room, paused with his back to the door and stood looking at one of the trifles on his table, a tiny lamp picked up in the ruins of an old city, which had always interested him.

Margoni, without knowing it, served us well," he remarked. Pedrillo, nodding, glanced toward the door, and stood as if petrified. For there in the doorway stood Margoni himself, bristling with rage. And Juan, quite unconscious of the disaster that threatened, commented quite audibly, Pompous old donkey!" and went on fingering the little lamp.

Pedrillo coughed loudly, warningly. Juan glanced up, followed his servant's slight jerk of the head, and turned to see Margoni, his face fairly purple with anger, glaring at him.

Pedrillo shivered. What on earth would Don Juan do? Juan had no such doubts of his own ability. Smiling, he strode forward, hand outstretched, to greet the duke.

Margoni ignored his friendliness.

"I have been told that the Duchess, my wife, is here," he said, and his voice was thick with anger, so that he could hardly speak.

Juan, smiling, assured him that he was mistaken, thinking that he was telling the truth, that Eleanora had already gone. Meanwhile she was moving frantically about the bedroom, not knowing just where her husband was.

Margoni, glancing about the room, saw the bedroom door, and through it caught a glimpse of his wife. Too furious for words, he made a strange sound, more like the snarl of an irate animal than any human sound. Juan, realizing what had happened, followed the Duke's glance to the bedroom door, looked away—and straight into a mirror, which reflected Imperia peeping between the curtains at the anteroom door!

A sardonic smile flashed across his face. Then, turning to the Duke again, quickly, he caught the man's arm.

"Do not let her see you!" he exclaimed, swinging the man around. Margoni, amazed, forgot to be angry. Juan pointed to the mirror, and the Duke, obeying the gesture, saw what Juan had seen—Imperia huddled fearfully behind the heavy curtains.

TRIPLE FUNERAL HELD YESTERDAY

WOMEN HURT.

PORT COLBORNE, Sept. 2.—A triple funeral was held from the home of Henry Cronmiller, 344 Fares Street, yesterday. While hundreds looked on, few of them with dry eyes, the bodies of Reuben Cronmiller, killed in an automobile crash on Sunday, and his sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Nevitzeral, drowned the same day in Muskoka, were borne to their last resting place in Overholt Cemetery.

Full military honors were accorded Reuben Cronmiller, the service being conducted by the local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association. Six veterans acted as pallbearers, while six railroad men acted for Angus Nevitzeral, and six cousins for his wife.

The funeral was the largest ever held in Port Colborne, and hundreds were unable to gain admittance to Holy Trinity Church, where services were conduced by Rev. M. Schmidt.

Extra police were necessary to keep back the crowds at the Cronmiller home, while two women were injured when crushed by a truck that worked into the funeral procession while crossing the West Street bridge.

PICNIC LUNCH POISONS 130

Ptomaine Poisoning Develops After Peoria Christian Endeavor Outing.

TWO DYING.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 2.—One hundred and thirty persons were poisoned here yesterday afternoon at the annual City Union Christian Endeavor picnic. Ptomaine poisoning developing from picnic lunches is believed responsible. Eighty persons were reported ill, some seriously, while the remainder recovered after first-aid, treatment. A half-dozen of the more serious cases are in such condition as to prohibit their removal from homes to the hospitals of the city, and in two of the cases life is despaired of.

The cause of the poisoning is tainted meat loaf and potato salad prepared for the picnic.

Some thirty more persons were stricken late last night. None of these was in a serious condition.

PROPOSAL TO CONFER FREEDOM OF MANCHESTER ON PREMIERS CARRIED AMID UPROAR IN COUNCIL

Overseas Ministers Will Visit 'Cottonopoles' Next Month.

HEATED DEBATE.

Labor Member Opposes Proposal, But Lord Mayor is Firm.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press)—A proposal to confer the freedom of the city on the seven dominion premiers who will visit Manchester in October while in England to attend the Imperial Conference caused an uproarious scene in the city council yesterday afternoon before it was finally carried.

A labor member of the council denounced the proposal as "wholesale giving away of the freedom." It had been urged, he said, that the conferring of these freedoms would bring trade to Manchester but he was of the opinion that the freedom of the city was not for sale for a hypothetical increase in trade.

The Lord Mayor declared that he had made the proposal after consulting some of his colleagues and if a mistake had been made he was responsible. The proposal was put to a vote amid protests and carried, the meeting breaking up in disorder.

WEDDING BELLS.

GRYLLS—BROWN.

LAKEFIELD, September 2. — A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Regent street, at 3.30 p.m., yesterday, when Mayme Kathlyn, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Brown, was united in marriage to Samuel Adams Grylls, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grylls.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. A. Kemp, in the presence of the immediate families of the contracting parties.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a becoming gown of white georgette and crystal beads over white satin with the conventional veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and sweet peas. She wore silver shoes and white silk hose.

Following the ceremony lunch was served to the wedding party after which the happy couple left by the 6 o'clock boat for the Breeze, Stoney Lake, the summer home of the groom's parents, where the honeymoon will be spent.

The reception rooms were decorated with a profusion of beautiful flowers sent by the bridegroom's uncle, from New Liskeard, which arrived in splendid condition, and were much admired.

The popularity of the young couple was evidenced by the numerous beautiful and costly gifts which they received, among which was a handsome wicker jardiniere stand from the choir of the Regent Street United Church, of which the bride was a valued member. Pre-nuptial events included a miscellaneous shower on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Charles Grylls. On their return from their wedding trip the happy couple will reside on Queen Street.

LIBERAL MEETING HELD AT BENSFORT

A very enthusiastic rally was held at Bensfort last night by J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate, accompanied by John R. Marshall. Mr. Wood was elected chairman, and in a few opening remarks said that the Liberal policy was in the interest of the farmer more than the Conservative policy, so he felt it his duty to support his party, as he termed the party which works to aid the farmers.

Although Mr. Marshall was raised a Conservative, he stated that he was a Liberal by conviction, for after considerable thought he came to believe in Liberal principles. "There is a growing spirit of Liberalism amongst the industrial workers, for they are beginning to think for themselves, and on the side of the employers they are commencing to see the Liberal viewpoint and to feel that the Liberal policy is for the unification of all classes.

"Conservative candidates do not say they voted against the Robb budget; they want everybody to feel that they did not oppose it. Penny postage in the first place was introduced by the Liberal Government, and again it was a Liberal Government that brought it back. The opponents say, 'Why did they not do more?' That is their only answer, and I ask them in turn, would they have done as much?" said the speaker.

Mr. Marshall said that Mr. Meighen was not sincere in his war policy, for he had one announcement for Toronto and another for Hamilton and Quebec. In dealing with the Customs scandal the mode of investigation was described beginning in 1924, when the King Government started it, and engaged Inspector Duncan, and in the fall of 1925 sent him to the Merchants' Protective Association to carry on his investigations. Mr. Stevens' actions then came in for considerable criticism in the scandal, and since accepting a Cabinet position. The Conservative Government a few years ago, when Dr. Tolmie was made a Cabinet Minister, a $5,000,000 contract was awarded in the city of Vancouver, and since Mr. Stevens was sworn in a $3,500,000 contract has been let in the same city. "That is Conservatism," said the speaker. The industrial question was also dealt with, especially the implement, iron and steel industries. The iron and steel industries were shown to be in a thriving position, although the other side claimed different, for in the first months of this year a forty per cent. increase has been shown in iron industry and eleven per cent. in steel. To-day the Algoma Steel Company has a large contract to make rails for a United States railroad.

J. J. Duffus.

The policy of the Liberal party was explained in a very concise way by Mr. Duffus. The propaganda of the Conservative party was condemned as injurious to this country because he believed if you want to make a success of anything you have to do some boosting and not all knocking. Last election propaganda was sent out in the pay envelopes of the workers, and Mr. Meighen in the last four years has practiced a policy of obstruction. Obstructing all the splendid measures that have been brought in.

In discussing the Robb budget, Mr. Duffus read Mr. Meighen's statement in the House when being questioned by Mr. Raymond of Brantford on June 2nd, 1925, whether he would raise the tariff on implements or not. "I undoubtedly would and say so emphatically," was the statement made. After describing the cry raised by the General Motors when the last budget was brought down, the speaker said that General Motors had divided $34,000,000 amongst its shareholders in the first three months of this year.

Mr. Duffus took up the cudgels against the simon-pure Conservative party in its discussion of the Customs scandal and pointed out that smuggling has been going on for years under both parties when they were in power, and although he is determined, if elected, to see that the guilty are all punished, he thinks it little becomes the Conservative leaders to lay all the blame on the Liberal party, for they are not so simon pure as all that when they accept into their party men who were read out by Sir Robert Borden, men who have slandered the good name of politicians in the eyes of their families and have made statements on the platform with their leader which have been proven untrue, and men who made thousands of dollars out of war contracts and war scandals. When the Liberal Government did introduce legislation to stop smuggling, making it a jail offence if a person was caught with more than $200 worth of smuggled goods, the Conservative majority in the Senate pulled to pieces the legislation making it ineffective, concluded Mr. Duffus.

TO RE-INTRODUCE

porary employment and are still serving under such certificate.'

"The matter was brought up more than once during the late session of Parliament, when the Hon. Mr. Stevens, not once, but several times, asked the late Government whether it was the intention of the Government to bring in an amendment to the Act extending the period during which the Civil Service employees could make their election. After the change of Government, I introduced an Act extending the period for one year, which received only its first reading.

"In my opinion the position in which the matter has been left is entirely unjust. It is idle to say that the civil servants have had two years within which to make their election of coming under the provisions of the Act or not, for the simple reason that many civil servants are looked upon as temporary, although in fact permanent, and therefore have had no right of election. It is the intention of the Government to re-introduce the Act extending the period of this election for one year at the next session of the House. This will afford an opportunity for proper consideration of the question which has never yet been considered, but highly essential, and that is the question of those civil servants who, although working for years and years, are still technically looked upon as temporary. The position of each employee in each and every department must be considered on the actual merits and apart from any technical distinctions.

"As to the necessity of such action, and merely as an example, I refer to the case of employees of the Soldiers' Settlement Board. The question has been raised as to whether the employees can come within the Act at all. So far, the only apparent action that has been taken in connection with all the employees of this Board is the Order-in-Council of May 20th last, when seven employees were designated as eligible to take the benefits of the Act. It is rather difficult to see why this action has been so circumscribed and on what ground other employees are excluded. Proper policy would place the benefits of superannuation on a basis as equal as possible. One would think that any department from such a basis which would exclude the returned soldier unjustifiable. Nevertheless, although some 97 per cent. of the male staff of the Soldiers' Settlement Board are returned soldiers, the Order-in-Council designating seven employees, as a matter of fact only includes one returned soldier. The department cannot be looked upon as merely temporary. There are some eighty millions of public moneys outstanding, payments of which run for a period of twenty-five years. There are employees in other departments whose cases call for action just as much as do the cases in the Soldiers' Settlement Board."

LADY LOCATES LOST SEAMEN

Mrs. Roper Is Mother of Seamen's Church Institute, New York.

SAILORS DIFFERENT.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press). — Mrs. Jennie Lord Roper, house mother of the Seamen's Church Institute, New York, was a visitor in this city recently. She began work in her birthplace, Saint John, N.B. When she undertook the work in New York, where she mothers an ever-changing group of some 830 men, she was told that the job was indefinite, to find out for herself what she should do. "And to-day," she went on, "I am really a court of appeal. When anything goes wrong or needs lubricating, they call on me. I devote a good deal of my time to locating lost seamen. In five years I have located 3,000 men. We sent bulletins all over the world with the names of missing sailors and the people who are seeking them. The sailors read their names posted up in foreign ports and write to me. In this way we have been able to re-unite families and friends that the war and accident have separated. Great vigilance must be observed, however, to save the home folks from being beset by impostors."

"Sailors are different to-day from what they used to be. They read more. They have been educated by the moving picture; and due to the advent of steam, they touch port oftener than the old salts used to. After my long acquaintance with the old type of sailor, I sometimes find myself as much at sea with them as the mother of the demure Victorian miss would feel with a modern flapper daughter. But the old fine spirit remains."

Paris Says—"Long Sleeved Frocks"

The popular crepe back satin frock assumes additional prominence as the season grows. Simple and distinguished is this model which maintains a flat back and front, with the sides revealing a flared movement by circular sections set in over the hips. The severe line of the long sleeves is broken by a circular frill extending from below the elbow to the wrist. The round neck is finished with a collar having long ends looped and tied in front. No. 1307 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. Size 38 bust requires 3⅞ yards 39-inch material. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

Lady Is Successful In Landing Big Lunge

One of the largest maskinonge caught around this district for some time was landed by Mrs. H. A. Sisson of 254 Aylmer Street this morning in the upper Chemong Lake, a few yards out from shore. Mrs. Sisson, who is staying at the cottage of Walter Fitzgerald, caught this maskinonge, which weighs 24 pounds, is 46 inches long and has a girth of 22 inches, with a double spoon heron bait, something very unusual for this season. The big fish put up a hard fight and it was finally landed from the shore.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE DESCRIBES A SMART FALL COAT

Madame's collection of Fall coats is practically completed. She has been working steadily on coats lately, as she wanted to have a comprehensive collection of them in her fashion opening.

"So many of my steady clients come to view the collection and then order their entire Fall wardrobes afterward," Madame observed. That's why I have to include everything, for one needs to have one's principal frocks in mind before deciding on a coat."

This means a lot of rush work after Fall modes are really established. Madame has a positive knack for sensing fashions before they come out, so the things she does are always in advance of the mode, and so individual as to be smart for a number of seasons —if her clients ever want to wear anything that long. Some of them do occasionally, when they are so attached to a garment that they simply can't give it up.

To return to coats, Gaby and I had an argument today as to what coat in the collection was most typical of the Fall mode. We seemed to have different ideas at first, but soon decided on the design I am showing here.

"You see capes are really such a prevailing fashion that I think you'd have to choose one with a cape," Gaby commented.

"Then surely one of the outstanding features of Fall coats is the deep-set armholes," I added.

"That being the case," that smart black kasha with the double cape set into raglan seams combines the outstanding features of both," Gaby announced.

So we decided on this very modish garment for the typical coat. It is trimmed with Persian lamb, as many of the Fall coats make discreet use of short-haired furs for trimming.

Then too it has the typical silhouette, which is widened above the waistline, and perfectly straight from there down. This wideness is achieved usually by a cape, or by sleeves which widen considerably toward the armholes.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

THE WEBSTERS

There was a delightful comaraderie between Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Webster. Mrs. Webster had been Miss Grace Fletcher, the daughter of a minister of Hopkinton; the great American statesman had married when his future was already assured and thereafter they shared the fame that came to them.

"My dear love——" writes Webster, from Washington, recounting his actions for the previous day, "Mrs. Brown gave her first party last night and having occasion to go to the President's I called on my return. It was the assemblage fully much of a Washington party of last year. Mrs. Johnston was there and spoke of you with great kindness and inquired for you very particularly . . . Many other ladies (and gentlemen too!) asked after your welfare with much apparent interest and one of them pronounced you a favourite of the whole city."

Two days later came another missive, containing another report and:—

"My dear love . . . I send you a little package in which, when you have taken all the warppers off and opened it, you will find two little bits of articles designed as presents (the, were diamond pins). One of them if you will like, you will place in your own cap; and the other in Col. Paige's ruffle. Give him a box on the ear and tell him to be a good boy . . . If you do not fancy yours you can return it to me in the same little box and I will take it back again. . . . Now adieu, my love, "D. W."

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1926

Women should be especially careful in all their affairs, whether domestic or public, for they may have unusual anxieties.

Reform movements of national scope are to arouse antagonism when pushed by women, who will organize along new lines, it is prophesied.

This is not a fortunate rule for love affairs, for, while romance will be coveted by women they will find men unusually unresponsive, while this configuration prevails.

Money and business will engross the male mind, under this sway, the seers foretell, for there will be much to arouse their energies.

Speculation will be alluring, for the time is near when certain misfortune to foreign nations will affect financial conditions.

It is well not to make any business venture today and to postpone all important initiative for sudden developments are to change the outlook on world trade, it is prognosticated.

Under this rule labor may be restive and discontented. Strikes will attract attention of those who seek to cure social ills.

This is not an auspicious rule for elderly persons, for all the signs appear to presage a demand for physical strength and youthful energy.

Warning is given that not only Mexico but Peru, Colombia, Venezuela, Italy, Germany, China and Japan come under a sinister planetary direction which may test Uncle Sam's diplomacy.

Great care of the health is enjoined as the autumn advances for the stars presage much illness.

Saturn and Mars are to be in a threatening aspect with the autumn ingress, it is foretold. Severe storms that symbolize the mental condition of many inhabitants of Earth may be expected.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect changes of various sorts in the coming year. Journeys by water may be lucky.

Children born on this day probably will have an extraordinary love of the sea. These subjects of Virgo may expect lives of novel experiences.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

MAY

The youthful name of May is peculiarly difficult to discuss. There are two explanations of its existence. Some etymologists claim that it is the final contraction and endearment of Margaret and translate it to mean "a pearl."

But though May is undoubtedly one of the innumerable forms of Margaret, coming through the Scotch by stages of evolution from Maisie and Maidie, it is so much simpler and more logical to believe that May is really one of the calendar names bestowed in honor of the fifth month of the year. It is the name of springtime and blossoms and nesting birds, and as such, has a place of distinction all its own. It has no antecedents, under this theory, and cannot be contracted more than it already is.

The fad for naming babies by the name of the month in which they were born probably brought May into vogue. The sudden spring to fame of April as a feminine name is another instance, and August is so honored by Augusta.

It is a curious fact that no other language has an equivalent for May, whether she is a derivative of Margaret or a separate entity. Only the Scotch, which evolved her by the former theory, possess her; even England had to accept her as a new name in the language.

Because of her possible dual origin, May is the lucky possessor of two talismanic gems. Either the pearl of purity or the emerald of prophecy will prove a lucky stone for her. The former gives her charm and friends; the latter, intelligence and prophetic vision. Sunday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

The pearl, the jewel of youth and purity, is the talismanic gem for this day. Believed to endow its wearer with charm irresistible to the opposite sex, the pearl was also credited by the ancients with the power to endow its wearer with such poise and coolness that none would dare approach her.

The onyx, today's natal stone, protects its wearer from the ardors of unwelcome love, and endows him with coolness and poise.

Light blue is today's lucky hue. Especially should it be used in decorations for weddings and social functions given for the young.

The white rose is today's lucky flower. It is the flower of youth and brings good fortune to all whose years number less than thirty.

ONCE UPON A TIME — HOW THE SEA BECAME SALT—VI — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

RED ROSE "is good COFFEE"

CLOCK PRESENTED BY BATTALION CLUB

Vice-President of 21st Batt. Club Is To Be Married.

The regular monthly meeting of the 21st Battalion Club was held in the Sergeants' Mess at the Armories last evening, with a full list of members present.

It was decided to charter a 'bus for the conveyance of the Peterboro members to Belleville, where the 8th annual re-union will take place on Friday, October 15th.

The erection of the proposed memorial to the Peterboro men of the Battalion who fell in action was discussed at length, and the realization of the effort to this end will be attained.

The Secretary was asked to send a letter to the Padre, the Rev. W. E. Kidd, congratulating him on his appointment to the rectorship of Ancaster.

An interesting event took place at the conclusion of the business part of the meeting, when a handsome clock was presented to Vice-President George Melton by his old Peterboro comrades of the 21st Battalion, to mark the happy occasion of his marriage.

Colonel Hall, in making the presentation, said that it gave him very great pleasure to present the clock, on behalf of the club, to their vice-president, as a small token of esteem with which Mr. Melton was held by all the Peterboro members of his old unit. He emphasized that without exception, no one had worked harder than the recipient in making the Club the success it was. The Club was a real live issue, and it could boast of the record of monthly meetings held without a break. Mr. Melton had been "over the top" a good many times, as the honorable scars which he will carry to the last roll call would testify. In this, his last and greatest adventure, he was sure that he voiced the feelings of the Club, when he wished health, wealth and prosperity to their latest member to take the plunge into the sea of matrimony, and a safe return from the raid he was making on Kingston and Montreal.

F. T. Hart endorsed the Colonel's remarks and said that Mr. Melton would appreciate the fact that every member who was approached by the committee, Messrs. Wallace, Newman and himself, subscribed willingly, which showed the affection with which Mr. Melton was held.

Mr. Melton, in reply, said he was deeply touched by the reception afforded him, and he thanked them all for the magnificent present, which he did not deserve, as he had only done that which every member was doing, namely, to make the Club go forward from success to greater success.

The clock, which is of solid walnut, was supplied by Warne Bros., and was engraved as follows: "Presented to Mr. George Melton by his Peterboro comrades of the 21st Battalion, C.E.F., on the occasion of his marriage, September 4th, 1926."

RUPTURE RELIEF

DON'T WEAR A TRUSS THAT DOES NOT HOLD WITH COMFORT, SO SAYS VISITING EXPERT

Rupture (as defined) is not a tear or a breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but it is a stretching or dilation of a natural opening. T. Y. Egan, of Toronto, rupture appliance specialist will visit PETERBORO, WHITE'S HOTEL, 173 CHARLOTTE ST., SATURDAY (Hours 8 a.m. till 9 p.m.) 1 DAY SEPTEMBER 4.

The "Curatrus," as now used with new "Airtex" shield, will not only retain rupture perfectly, affording immediate and complete comfort, but is intended to assist nature in her work of closing the opening in the shortest time known. These new rupture aids have received highest approval wherever shown. If you are tired of that binding and uncomfortable old truss and would you like to be done with same. Then investigate this method and learn the wonderful opportunity for help it offers. Remember, it is different from everything else and is accomplishing wonderful results where all other appliances have failed. It is modern, and abreast of the latest scientific developments. Mr. Egan has testimonials from our own section for inspection. If interested call; he will show you same without charge. Ask at hotel office for Mr. Egan's room. Tear this out. Also at LINDSAY, BENSON HOTEL, SEPTEMBER 3.

MEIGHEN MAKES MANY SPEECHES DURING ONE DAY

Sixteen Addresses in Two Languages in Megantic District.

MEETING DISTURBED.

Appeal of Priests Bring Calm To Final Gathering.

LAKE MEGANTIC, Que., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—It was midnight when Premier Meighen addressed his main meeting here last night. Previously he spoke to a gathering of women on the constitutional question. He told the main meeting that for the first time in a number of years the Conservative party from coast to coast was united.

When the Premier began to speak in English, his sixteenth speech of the day, there were hurrahs for King and counter hurrahs for Meighen. The parish priest who was in the audience, appealed for a fair hearing for the Premier, and the disturbance ceased. Mr. Meighen said no good purpose could be served by discussing old animosities.

"I have not desire to hold post-mortems on the past,' he added, and continued that far from embroiling Canada in future wars, the most ardent desire of the Conservative party was the preservation of peace. He hoped that Canada had seen the last war.

"We never wanted war," he said. "We took the only course because we thought we had to do it to make sure of our own ultimate safety." Later, he said, "If Canada signs a treaty, that treaty was must in honor observe, but Canada should keep just as free as she can be free of all obligations, leaving this Dominion to decide what shall be our course, what shall be our duty."

Prices In Mines Firm Standard Exchange Active

TORONTO, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).— Prices were generally firm in trading on the Standard Mining Exchange. The market was fairly active, but devoid of feature.

Hollinger made a net advance of ten cents to 19.40, while Dome and McIntyre each lost five to 10.30 and 25.95 respectively. Lake Shore and Teck Hughes were unchanged at 14.60 and 4.58 respectively, Kirkland Lake was up one cent to 1.12, and Wright Hargreaves one to 8.66. Gold Hill lost another two cents to 42. Tough Oakes was up one cent to 47, and Vipond one to 1.85.

In the silvers, Coniagas dropped 25 cents to 4.25 in light trading. Keeley and Nipissing firmed four cents to 1.07 and 6.84 respectively. Castle Trethewey was up two to 1.39. Amulet was two cents higher at 1.36, Noranda five at 19.20, and Hill Top 2 1-2 at 15.

Toronto Market Dull Most Prices Stronger

TORONTO, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—International Nickel gained 1 1-2 points to 38 1-4 and Canada Steamships Common advanced 1 3-4 to 29 in a rather dull session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Prices were fractionally stronger in most of the issues.

Brazilian Traction eased 1-4 to 117 1-8 in comparatively light trading, while Consolidated Smelters firmed one-half to 251. The latter was very active. Abitibi, which closed unchanged at 90 1-2, was quite active. Industrial Alcohol was up one-quarter to 21. Winnipeg Railway advanced one-half to 57 3-4, and British Columbia Fishing the same to 21 1-4. Imperial Oil was active, but sustained a net loss of one-eighth to 37 1-8, British American gained one-quarter to 57 3-4, while International Petrol was off three-eights to 34 1-4. McColl was up seven-eights to 22. Page Hersey Preferred firmed one-half to 101. Dome and McIntyre were each off ten cents to 11.30 and 26.00 respectively. Hollinger was up ten to 19.35, and Pioneer gained 6 to 84.

Wheat Values Higher Due To Rains In Canada

CHICAGO, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press.—Wheat values showed early trend upward today, influenced by continued rains in Western Canada. Opening unchanged to 1-2 higher, wheat scored gains all around. Corn and oats were firmer, corn starting unchanged to 1-2c up, and subsequently showing a general advance. Provisions went lower.

Fear that storm delays to threshing in the Prairie Provinces will become serious and that heavy crop damage will also result, was expected today by many wheat traders. In this connection it was pointed out as significant that Winnipeg prices were again relatively firmer than Chicago, and that the Liverpool market was displaying unlooked for strength.

Uncertain Price Trend Due To Speculative Influence

NEW YORK, September 2. Canadian Press. — Opposing speculative forces struggled for control of today's stock market with the result that there was considerable confusion in price movements.

Optimistic sentiments expressed by George F. Baker, veteran banker, helped to create a bullish enthusiasm despite his reiteration of the belief that no stock dividend would be paid in the near future on U. S. Steel common which slumped from 151 1-2 to 194 1-2 but raillied above 150 by early afternoon.

Pools were again busy in a number of ordinarily inactive specialties such as General American tank, International nickel and Owens bottle.

Motors suddenly leaped into prominence in the early afternoon when bullish demonstrations were started simultaneously in several of the low priced issues such as Chrysler, Dodge, Pierce Arrow and Packard. Revival of activity in the Coppers was predicted on the belief that the foreign demand for Red Metal will be materially increased when the financial stabilization schemes in Italy, Belgium and France are carried into effect.

Railroad shares started upward at the opening but ran into heavy profit taking sales as the session progressed. However, several new high records were again recorded in that group.

PRAISES COLLECTION.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 2. — (Canadian Press)—Harriet Monroe of Chicago, Ill., editor and founder of "Poetry: A Magazine of Verse," while in the city en route to Vermont paid a visit to the Royal Ontario Museum. She was amazed to find such a wonderful collection of Chinese antiquities there. She knows much of this sort of thing, as her sister lives in Peking, in an old temple whch has been a treasure house and is now a real and beautiful home, incongruous as it sounds.

Dr CHASE'S OINTMENT

WAS GIVEN SHOWER

On Monday evening about sixty young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther, Customs House, George street, to present a shower to Miss Margaret Riddle whose marriage to Mr. Percy Luther takes place this week. The early part of the evening was spent in song singing with Mrs. Bugg presiding at the piano. Miss Phyllis Pink delighted the company by dancing the Highland fling. The surprise of the evening came when a beautifully decorated wagon was drawn in by little Elsie and Dorothy Lemmon, who looked very pretty as miniature bride and groom. Much fun and laughter followed when Miss Riddle and Mr. Luther opened the presents and read the verses that accompanied them, after which the company all sang "For Thy Are Jolly Good Fellows." Miss Riddle and Mr. Luther thanked their friends for their gifts, which were very numerous and useful showing the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Refreshments were then served and dancing was indulged in until an early hour in the morning.

RINGWORMS IN SMALL PIMPLES

Turned to Blisters. Lost Sleep. Cuticura Heals.

"I had ringworms on different parts of my body. They first appeared in small pimples, then gradually got worse and turned to blisters. The ringworms were in circular form, several of them being as large as a fifty-cent piece. They caused continual irritation, also loss of sleep.

"A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some. They gave instant relief and in the course of a short time the ringworms were completely healed." (Signed) Miss Margaret Mitchell, R. R. 1, Shinimicas Bridge, N. S.

EXECUTIVE ASKS POWER TO TREAT

Coal Miners' Leaders Wish To Commence New Negotiations.

ASK DELEGATES.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(Canadian Press.)—The executive officers of the Miners' Union this afternoon decided to recommend to the Congress of Union delegates now in session that the executive be given full power to enter negotiations for settling the coal dispute and to agree upon a settlement should one be reached in a new conference.

CARS ENTERS HOUSE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 2.—(CP).—When she went to spen an evening at a friend's house with her three children, Mrs. G. Dorion sat down to await their return. But something else came instead. A motor car, colliding with a parked car, was swung into the house doorway and a section of the door injured Mrs. Dorion's arm.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO HON. BOIVIN

Conservative Leader Visits Home Town of Late Minister of Customs.

THREE ADDRESSES.

GRANBY, Que., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—In the County of Shefford, Premier Meighen yesterday paid tribute to the memory of Hon. G. H. Boivin, former Minister of Customs in the King Government, who represented Shefford in Parliament.

"I remember Granby," he said, "not only as the birthplace of my wife, but also as the home of one who for many years I counted as my friend, though a political opponent."

"I bear to him," added Mr. Meighen, "a tribute of respect and fond memory."

Mr. Meighen pursued that he had to criticize certain acts of Mr. Boivin as Minister of Customs. "Of the words I spoke, there are none I wish to retract," Mr. Meighen said, "but before his memory I bow with respect as will all who knew him as I did."

On the way to Granby from Chandly, Mr. Meighen spoke at Marieville and Ste. Pie, the latter being the most Liberal section of the County of Bagot.

He charged Liberals with having raised false issues in the last election. Particularly, he said, had Liberals held that if Conservatives were returned, there would be a war with Turkey.

"The Conservative party," Mr. Meighen declared, "has its face against war just as solidly as has the Liberal party," and the best way is to preserve our position with the British Empire. "There is more security for Canada in the position in which she is to-day," Mr. Meighen said, "than in any other position which can possibly be imagined.

"And the party I lead will direct its every effort in its conduct of external affairs, in its conduct of affairs within the Empire, that this Dominion of Canada may move along the ways of peace and know the way of war no more."

Mr. Meighen accused Mr. Mackenzie King with having raised the constitutional issue to divert attention from the finding of the Customs Committee.

"Those who are trying to raise the constitutional issue," Mr. Meighen said, "are those, if you will look them over, who are never satisfied unless they are working up home agitation about our relations within the Empire."

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food; but not until we perfected "ironized yeast" — which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to make yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

CRESCENTS LOSE TO PORT HOPE; ELIMINATED FROM O. B. A. A. RACE BY LOSS IN SUDDEN DEATH GAME

MEET DELORO.

Sudden Death Game in Third Round To Be Played Here.

By a score of 6 to 5 at Port Hope yesterday, Crescents ceased activities in the O.B.A.A. intermediate race, dropping out of the hunt after engaging the lakeshore champion in a sudden death engagement that was a hotly-contested battle from start to finish. With Biffer Ranger forming the pivot, the Crescents' infield put up a finished exhibition of defensive baseball and gave the Port Hope veterans their hottest fight of the season. The old ball game swayed in the balance right up to the Crescents' half of the ninth when a hit would have tied up the contest. And throughout a hard and gruelling contest, Casey Masterson stood up well. He faced ball players of long experience with the willow, and in the inside tricks of the game, but the youngster never faltered. He was given fine support particularly by Ranger who took ten chances without a slip.

As a result of the Port Hope win the team will play Deloro here next Saturday afternoon at James Stevenson Park. It, too, will be a sudden death game, and local fans are in for an interesting afternoon. The Port Hopers have several players including Bob Chalk, Alex Hills, Guy and Friar who came up with the old Midland League and were prominent in the early days of Jake Solomon's Central Ontario League. Bob Chalk boasts that he still retains portions of the uniform he wore here many years ago when the fiery catcher served Port Hope with the big mit. The team played well behind Brockenshire yesterday, and showed strength with the bat.

Play By Innings.

Crescents went out in short order in the first, when Joe Jones fanned, McCarney skied out, and Scully was retired from short.

Friars, first up for Port Hope, was pegged out by Ranger, and Guy popped to Corbett. Hills hit over Freddy Jones for a double and Hutchings shot one over McCarney for three bases, Hills scoring. Ware tapped one between Masterson and Scully to score Hutchings. Micks was passed. Ranger threw out Chalk.

Masterson led off the second with a single and went out at the plate trying to score on Corbett's triple. Masterson hesitated at the third corner long enough to lose the decision to Chalk. F. Jones was hit by the pitcher and then pulled Chalk for a throw to second. It was high, allowing Jones the bag and Corbett to score. LeBarr also was deadheaded. A passed ball advanced Jones and when Rishea made Hills back up on a hot grounder nobody covered the bag and Jones scored. The pitcher threw out Joe Jones.

Masterson retired the Hopers in order taking two taps to the box, while Ranger had the third killing.

In the third McCarney popped to the pitcher, Scully was safe on the shortstop's fumble and Ranger walked. Masterson grounded out and Corbett fanned.

Port Hope took a one-run lead in their half which Guy opened by bunting down third. Hills dropped a fooler in short centre. Hutchings flew out to Ranger and Ware walked, filling the bases. Micks lined over third to score Guy and Chalk's infield out to Ranger scored Hills. With Sleeman at bat Ware attempted to steal home but Rishea played the pitch well and got the runner. There was some nice baseball in this frame.

Bases Filled.

The fourth was a heart-breaker for Crescents. F. Jones lined a single to left, LeBarr bunted neatly and Rishea hit down short filling the bases. But on Rishea's clout, the foxy Guy caught Jones off the base. Joe Jones struck out and McCarney went out at first.

Stellar fielding by Ranger and Corbett retired the homesters in their half with two runners left stranded.

The fifth saw the Hopers put over a double killing to stop the Crescents and again the Crescents came back to retire the side leaving a brace of runners on third and second.

Side Struck Out.

Brockenshire did some fine gunning in the sixth when he struck out the side in a row. Port Hope with three safeties got only one run. The pitcher was retired when Rishea dropped the third strike. Friar singled to left, Guy bounced one over Corbett. Rishea caught Friar going into third, but when Hills singled to centre, Guy came home. Ranger threw out Hutchings.

Rishea fanned to start the seventh Joe Jones hit through second and stole, and scored on McCarney's long sacrifice fly to right. Scully beat out a hit to short and Ranger flew out.

Ware hit between third and short, the ball bounding over Corbett, and he stole. Micks walked. On an attempted double steal, Ranger came in to take the throw from the catcher and pegged to Scully to get Ware. Chalk struck out. Sleeman singled to score Hicks. The pitcher fanned.

The eight saw Masterson, hit by the pitcher, go out at second when he tried for the bag as Chalk dropped the ball. Corbett flew out but F. Jones double. LeBarr struck out.

Ranger took Friar's fly and Corbett threw out Guy. Hills hit through short and took second on a passed ball. Masterson threw out Hutchings.

The Final Rally.

Rishea was retired by Guy in the ninth but J. Jones was safe on the second baseman' fumble. McCarney took a chance and heard the third strike called. Scully nailed a screamer into left to score Jones, and got a lucky break when the throw in to second was dropped. With two out and the tieing run on second Ranger engaged in a battle of wits with the pitcher, and a verbal bout with the umps, but lost the decision when he sent up a high fly to Alex Hills and the game was over.

HEAVY CHAMP TAKES DAY OFF

Dempsey Spends Restless Day While Laying Off Training.

VISITS ORPHANAGE.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey spent a nervous and restless day just because he was laying off.

Although Dempsey called yesterday his day off, he certainly covered a lot of ground. After loafing around his bungalow all morning, Dempsey visited the children's seaside home yesterday afternoon to spread a little sunshine into the hearts of 300 crippled and orphaned children. Dempsey warmly shook hands with all of the 300 boys and girls and had something to say to each.

Dempsey will swing back into training to-day.

TORONTO TAKES TWO FULL GAMES FROM READING

NEWARK SECOND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press) — Reading lost two more games at Toronto yesterday, the Leafs, International league leaders, winning 2 to 1 and 8 to 0. The double win added half a game to Toronto's margin at the top. Faulkner and Satterfield were the victorious twirlers, Satterfield holding the tailenders to one hit in the second game, a seven inning contest.

Newark kept their hold on second place by defeating Syracuse, 13 to 8. Eight runs in the second and third innings gave the Bears a good start. The Stars finished strong, but the lead against them was too big for them to overhaul. Baltimore came out of a slump to take a 9 to 6 decision from Buffalo in a heavy hitting fixture. Thirty hits were made off the combined deliveries of six twirlers in this game.

Rochester pounded four Jersey City twirlers for twenty-two hits and won handily, 21 to 3. The losers played poorly, having six errors chalked up against them.

DELORO LOSES IN EXHIBITION

GAME IS CLOSE.

MARMORA, Sept. 2.—The odds went against Deloro in their home exhibition game with Point Anne on Wednesday so that they retired the losers of an interesting game by the score of 10 to 5. The visitors were strengthened by the inclusion of Ouellet of the Belleville Seniors, who pitched throughout.

Pointe Anne registered three runs in the opening frame in which good hitting figured. Deloro came back with two counters. Bond doubled, stole third, and came home on A. Quinn's single. Ralph singled, advancing Quinn to third. Jack hit into a double play, E. Green tagging Ralph and throwing out Jack, Quinn scoring. J. Quinn hit to the pitcher, retiring the side.

In the second, neither team scored, the visitors bringing off a second double play. In the third, Point Anne again failed to register.

Jack jumped high in the air for a wonderful catch of Goyer's hit while Quinn caught Green off third with a nice peg. In Deloro's half, A. Quinn tied the score with a triple over first and a romp home on an overthrow.

In the fourth the score was left unaltered. With the bases loaded Jack was out stealing home. Point Anne again took the lead in the fifth. Goyer treated his boys with a powerful drive to right field which took him to second. Josh Maracle doubled over third, and Soup crossed the plate. In the sixth Ralph replaced Shea and the Cement lads retired in order. In Deloro's half, A. Quinn walked, the first of the game; Ralph hit to right field, advancing G. Quinn to third. Ralph was out stealing home. Jack's double brought in Quinn. Point Anne again broke the tie in the seventh. E. Green singled, Gaulin walked, Goyer doubled to right, scoring Green. M. Green safe on Hughes' error, scoring Gaulin. Maracle advanced Goyer to third. Bennett hit into a double play, Ralph to Quinn to Hughes. Bonthren was thrown out by Jack. Deloro retired in order.

In the eighth, A. Quinn made a good running catch, Deloro got the single run of the innings. Bond singled, A. Quinn fanned, Bond stole second; Ralph singled, advancing Bond to third, and the latter scored on Strachan's muffed ball. Point Anne made the game safe in the ninth, scoring four runs without response. The waning light, causing the home infield several errors, materially assisted in this score. The dullness of the afternoon was responsible for one of the smallest attendances of the season. Score by innings:

CARDS TIGHTEN HOLD ON FIRST DEFEAT PIRATES

Win Final Game of Series From Pittsburgh at St. Louis.

PITCHER RELIEVED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press). — The Cardinals tightened their hold on first place in the thrilling National League pennant race, by knocking Ray Kremer out of the box in the seventh inning yesterday at St. Louis and taking the final game of the series from the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 to 2. Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cards regained his batting eye and smashed out a home run and a triple in four times at bat.

The Pirates got the first run of the game in the third inning, but in the sixth and seventh innings the Cards unleashed their attack and drove Kremer to cover. Reinhart held the world's champions to six hits, whereas his mates collected twelve, eleven of which were off Kremer's delivery, and one off the pitching of Koupal, who relieved Kremer in the seventh. Each team made three errors.

The Phillies pushed Boston further into the cellar by taking a 3 to 0 victory from the Braves at Philadelphia. No other National League clubs were scheduled.

NORTH DOURO WINS.

Beats Burns Bridge Easily in Final Game of Group.

DOURO, Sept. 2 — The final game in section I of the North Peterborough League was played on Friday evening at Warsaw. North Douro and Burns' Bridge clashed, the former winning 23-10. The winning team was in fine form and made some splendid plays. W. Towns on first made some fine catches, F. O'Brien on second was good. In fact it was a practically errorless game as far as the winning team was concerned. The losing team, after two or three errors in the first inning seemed to lose their morale and although they made some good plays later, they seemed unable to overtake the lead of their opponents.

The line-up:

North Douro—C. Towns, p; M. Coughlin, c; W. Towns, 1b; F. O'Brien, 2b; R. Walsh, 3b; R. Essor, ss; G. Heffernan, lf; G. Condon, cf; J. Walsh, rf.

Burns' Bridge—H. Darling, p; R. Wasson, c; D. Fitzgerald, 1b; J. Collins, 2b; A. Carlow, 3b; J. Allen, ss; W. Floyd, lf; B. Allen, c; R. Tedford, rf.

LADIES' SOFTBALL.

All Star Oshawa Team Will Play C.G.E. Ladies.

A great game of Ladies' Soft Ball will be played on the Exhibition Grounds, Peterboro, on Saturday afternoon, September 4th, between an All Star Oshawa team picked from five clubs in that city, vs the C.G.E. of Peterboro. The season is getting along and there will not be many more opportunities to see a soft ball game in Peterboro. The game is called at 4 o'clock. Admission 23c, plus 2c tax.

YANKS EMERGE FROM BACK LIST ATHLETICS LOST

Two Runs in Each of First Three Wins Game.

ALLOWS THREE HITS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—The Yanks emerged from their slump yesterday and defeated the Athletics, 6 to 4. Two runs in each of the first three innings gave the American League leaders their total. Dutch Ruether, veteran left hander, recently obtained on waivers from Washington, started his first game for the New Yorkers, and held the opposition to three hits up to the ninth, when he weakened and was replaced by Shawkey. The second place Cleveland Indians were idle, and thus the Yanks increased by half a game, they now holding a margin of six games.

The Tigers lost an 11 to 7 decision to Chicago at Detroit, a loosely played contest being staged in a drizzle. Detroit got away to a flying start, but late rallies by the White Sox grabbed off the game. Washington and Boston indulged in a free-hitting contest and the Senators won out, 14 to 12. Nine twirlers toed the mound in the game.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

NURMI HOLDS RECORD.

Sporting Editor, Examiner:

I noticed in The Examiner on Saturday night, where it said, the mile record of 4 minutes 12 3-5 seconds made by Norman Taber 11 years ago is still unbeaten. I rather think it is a mistake as Nurmi, the Finn, broke that record in 1923, when he ran the mile in four minutes, 10 2-5 seconds and he still holds it, and only recently this Summer, when running against Edwin Wide, the Swede, in Finland, he did the mile in 4 minutes, 12 seconds flat, which also beat Taber's record.

Yours sincerely,
DAVID KERR.

UNITED STATES HOLDS FRANCE QUARTER FINALS

Repulses First Three Thrusts of France For Tennis Championship.

NATIONAL DOUBLES.

Defending Title Holders Ride Over Wimbledon Champions For Heavy Scores.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 2.—(Canadian Press). — The United States yesterday repulsed the first of three thrusts by France for tennis supremacy with two crushing triumphs in the quarter finals of the national doubles championship.

Sweeping back the tri-color attack with racquets which neither gave or asked quarter, R. Norris Williams and Vincent Richards, defending titleholders, rode over the Wimbledon champions, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, to win impressively at 6-1, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3, in the first of the battles.

William M. Johnston, veteran California star, then fought back from a first set rut with his collegiate partner, Edward C. Chandler, to complete America's day of victory by overwhelming Jean Borotra and Rene Lacoste with a sensational finish, 0-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

Thus for the second time in consecutive years in the national team event the drive of France was checked before the semi-finals by battering United States racquets. And for the first time since Borotra and Lacoste amazed netdom by stopping William T. Tilden and Richards in the national indoor championship last winter, definite assurance was given the United States Davis Cup defenders still retain all the commanding power and skill under which they swept to decisive victory a year ago.

Earning the right to face Richards and Williams on Friday in the upper half of the draw, Lewis N. White and Louis Thalheimer, of Texas, for the first time since the opening of the tournament, came through with a straight set victory yesterday, winning easily over the young New York combination, Kenneth Appel and John Van Ryn, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

In the lower half Tilden and Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., played greatly improved tennis over their exhibition of Tuesday against Nathaniel W. Niles and Watson M. Washburn, crashing through the far west defence of James Davies and Phil Neer to win unextended at 6-3, 6-4, 6-4. The victors wil oppose Johnston and Chandler to-day for a place in the finals.

The St. Louis Cardinals have proved the greatest stumbling-block in the path of the Brooklyn team this year. In their contests with the Superbas the Cardinals have won 14 out of 20, including eight straight games.

FINISHES FEATURE SECOND ROUND LADIES OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Challengers For Trophy Narrowed Down To Eight Players.

TORONTO LEADS.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 2 (Canadian Press)—Several thrilling finishes featured the second round games yesterday in the Canadian Ladies' Open Golf Championship at the Elmhurst course, which saw the field from all parts of the Dominion battling for the title narrowed down to eight players. Of these, Toronto carries the strongest representation with three, including the defending champion, Miss Ada Mackenzie, of the Mississauga Club, Miss Cecil Eustace Smith, of York Downs, and Miss Margaret Walsh, of the Toronto Club. Winnipeg comes next with two contenders in Mrs. Irene Brydges, and Mrs. K. C. Allen, both of St. Charles, while Ottawa pins its hopes on Miss Helen Paget, the present closed champion, Montreal looks to Miss Dora Virtue, of the Whitlock Club, and Vancouver has a deep interest in Mrs. Vera Hutchings of the Jericho Club.

Young Dorothy Page, of Halifax, provided the feature of the day's play when she took Ada Mackenzie to the eighteenth green before acknowledging defeat. With her putter working like a charm, Miss Page took a lead of two holes at the twelfth, and only golf of outstanding character enabled Miss Mackenzie to come safely through the second round.

Helen Paget and Dora Virtue played fine golf to record easy victories over two Winnipeg players, Mrs. Pellenz and Mrs. Beairsto, the latter being the Manitoba champion. Miss Walsh was superior in her long game, and went up all the way on Mrs. Koester, Winnipeg. Mrs. Hutchings enjoyed a lead throughout, but it was not a safe one until she overcame her unsteadiness on the greens coming home, to win out at the thirteenth from Mrs. Victor Sinon, Toronto.

The only extra hole contest in the championship flight saw the elimination of Mrs. Douglas Laird by Mrs. Irene Brydges, her clubmate from St. Charles, at the twentieth, where Mrs. Laird broke under the strain, after throwing away several good chances on the green.

Miss Cecil Eustace Smith played sound golf to win at the seventeenth from Mrs. McTavish, Winnipeg, while Miss Margaret Laird, Toronto, fell a victim to first class golf produced by Mrs. R. C. Allen, Winnipeg.

Some merry battles should be waged today, when Miss Paget meets Miss Virtue, Miss Walsh plays Mrs. Hutchings, Mrs. Brydges takes on Miss Eustace Smith, and Mrs. Allen is up against the title holder, who looks to be good enough to repeat.

First flight:

Mrs. Eric Phillips, Oshawa, beat Mrs. R. Ridout, Regina, 1 up.

Mrs. W. L. Taylor, Regina, beat Mrs. Fred Anderson, Alcrest, 6 and 5.

Mrs. M. K. Rome, Toronto, beat Mrs. H. Middlemas, Regina, at the 19th.

Mrs. H. H. Fleming Winnipeg, beat Mrs. James MacKinnon, Edmonton, 3 and 2.

BALL FANS TO SEE FINE GAME

Fast Deloro Team and Port Hope Play Here on Saturday.

Baseball fans have a fine attraction for the week-end when the highly-rated Deloro team will be here for a sudden death game with Port Hope. The battle will be staged at the Jas. Stevenson Park.

It will be a third round contest in the O.B.A.A. Intermediate series, and the winner will represent Eastern Ontario in the last mad dash for provincial honors.

Port Hope played good baseball yesterday to eliminate the Crescents, and the Deloro pitchers will have to be at tip-top form to get through.

As willow-wielders the Hopers know how, when and where to hit, and they can put up a stiff defense. And as in days of yore, the Lakeshore crew have Bob Chalk and Alex Hills to keep the fans in good humor with their vocal outbursts when things go wrong.

The contest will be at three o'clock with Alex. Kay and Ed. LeBarr in charge.

WINS MEDAL SECOND TIME

Ottawa Marksman Will Get Bar To Award He Won in 1924.

RESULTS DELAYED.

OTTAWA, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press)—Corporal W. J. Livingstone, a Governor General's Footguards' marksman of Ottawa, captured the King's Medal for the second time since its inauguration four years ago, at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association meet at South March last month, it was revealed in the delayed returns released here today. This second victory will give Corporal Lingstone a bar to the King's Medal he won in 1924.

The team prize in the King's Medal Competition also goes to the G.G.F.G., the triumphant team having been composed of Corporal W. J. Livingston, Sergt. K. McGregor, Lieut. Desmond T. Burke (G.M.), and Lieut. H. W. Bishop. The team prize is a trophy presented by General Sir Arthur Currie, G.C.B., Corps Commander of the Canadian Forces in the Great War.

BUSINESS MEN FIND SETTLEMENT GOOD

Sir Joseph Flavelle and Sir John Aird Express Approval.

TORONTO, Sept. 2.—(Canadian Press.) —"I believe the arrangement which has been worked out reflects the good sense of the negotiators and that a permanently troublesome facter in national system will be eliminated" was the comment to-day on the settlement reached between the Grand Trunk Pacific debenture stock holders and the Canadian National Railways by Sir Joseph Flavelle, who was chairman of the first board of directors of the Canadian National Railways. "I earnestly hope that this most troublesome matter which has led to much misunderstanding will be terminated by parliament accepting the agreement which has been reached," he said.

"This is a fair settlement, I believe, and it should go far to kill that feeling of resentment that so many Englishmen had at the tme of the former award," said Sir John Aird, president of the Bank of Commerce.

"Much of the Grand Trunk stock had been held in English famlies for years. There is much British capital that should be coming to Canada and this should help to bring it here."

FIREMEN MEET ELECTRICIANS

Two Fast Local Softball Teams Playing Exhibition.

REAL STRUGGLE.

To-morrow night at 6.00 o'clock the Firemen are going to play the C.G.E. team in Central Park. The C.G.E. team are the city champions, and at present hold the Taylor Cup. These two teams have met several time this year, and have played two tie games, and to-morrow night's game is expected to be a real struggle. The C.G.E. team was rather at a disadvantage in the post season series as one of the pitchers was in quarantine, and to-morrow night the Electricians are determined to show the people of Peterborough which is the better team. The Firemen on the other band are one of the smoothest working teams in Ontario, and are now waiting to go into the finals for the Ontario softball senior championship.

OSHAWA LADIES PLAY FAST BALL

All Star Team Will Be Here On Saturday Afternoon.

PLAY C.G.E.

Another treat is in store for the Peterboro Softball fans, as Business Manager J. OBrien, has been very fortunate in securing an all-star team from Oshawa, where there are five teams in the city, to play here Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the Exhibition grounds. Oshawa plays for the last four years. They have been playing for the last four years. They have met some of the very best teams from Toronto, including the Supremes.

The George street entrance will be the only one open on Saturday. All cars can be parked in the inside.

THEATRE

ACTOR FOLK FACE DEATH DURING FILMING OF "SHIPWRECKED."

Before actual filming on "Shipwrecked" began, director Joseph Henaberry announced his desire to secure some real storm scenes for the picture. So, despite the warnings of veteran seamen, the company sailed from San Pedro on the old clipper ship "Indiana" on a day so ill-omened that not even a rum-runner would dare to take a chance.

Sixteen miles out in the Catalina Channel, the threatening storm broke. Buffeted by a forty mile gale and swallowed from sight by the inky blackness of the night that descended, the ship faced destruction on the rocks of Point San Vincente.

Their distress signals were not discovered until the dawn brought a lull in the storm, and the drifting ship was reached by tugs and towed to safety when barely half a mile from the rocks.

It is a tribute to the spirit and morale of the players and production staff of "Shipwrecked," which will be on view at the Regent Theatre to-day, that they managed to secure some of the most realistic sea scenes ever filmed.

MURRAY SOUGHT IN PRO LEAGUE

Former Peterborough Net Guardian May Play With Niagara Falls.

CONTRACTS SIGNED.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The rumor to the effect that "Mickey" Murray and Lawrence Aurie, of Galt, will play in London has been denied. It is understood that Gene Fraser, of Niagara Falls, would like to sign Murray.

The London hockey team, which will compete in the Canadian Professional League, will be affiliated with the Ottawa Senators, National Hockey League finalists last season, officers of the London Hockey Club announced last night. A working agreement between Ottawa and London has been arranged. Several promising hockey players who are now under contract with Ottawa will be turned over to the local club.

Six players have signed contracts with London; Clark, formerly of North Bay, and Clare Oliver, who played with New Hamburg last year, champions of the O.H.A. intermediate series, will be candidates for the position of net guardian. Four additional players have been secured, and the local management expects to sign at least another half dozen during the next few weeks.

The inaugural meeting of the Canadian League will be held at the Tecumseh, London, on Thursday, Sept. 9, commencing at 2.15 p.m.

Roller skates fitted with acetylene generators consisting of two especially constructed cylinders have been invented by a German. The skates are capable of six hours' continuous running, and develop a speed of 22 miles an hour.

PILOTS SECOND STAKE VICTORY

SYRACUSE, Sept. 2 (Canadian Press).—Ben White, of Lexington, Ky., scored his second big stake victory in as many days here yesterday afternoon when he piloted the filly, Ruth M. Chenault, to a straight heat victory in the Wet Weather track stake, carrying a purse of $14,250. On Tuesday White annexed the $10,000 Empire State stake.

The consolation division of the Wet Weather went to Nescopec, driven by Walter Cox, of Goshen. Cox scored a second victory in the 2.14 trot when he guided Dewey McKinney to the front over Tommy Murphy's Dr. Strongworthy.

For the Sake of a Few Cents Saved in Postage

Mr. Duffus' Publicity Committee declares that "the record of the King Government shines with achievements that should lead every right-thinking man and woman to vote Liberal."

And this, in the face of the Customs Scandal, characterized by the Toronto Globe, leading Liberal newspaper, as "one of the sorest spots in Canadian Political history."

"Right-thinking" men and women are being asked in return for the few cents in postage which is all the majority of Canadians have gained from the Robb Budget to condone the demoralization and debauchery of the customs service which developed under the King Government.

For the sake of a few cents saved in postage the electors of West Peterborough are asked to forget what D. M. Kennedy, Progressive member of the Customs Committee and a consistent supporter up to that time of the King Government, refused to condone.

"Wholly Without Defence"

For the sake of a few cents saved in postage, the electors of West Peterborough are being asked to entrust the administration of Canada's affairs to a government that, in the opinion of a majority of the House of Commons, had been guilty of conduct that "was wholly without defence."

The record of the King Government in its administration of its chief revenue-producing department has been proven to have been so rotten that no right-thinking man or woman who faces the facts squarely can conscientiously vote Liberal on September 14.

And to ask the electors of Peterborough to do so because they may save a few cents on the letters they write is to ask them to applaud the connivance and collusion of the King Government with crooks and smugglers.

The voters of this riding cannot be bribed by penny postage to condone the glaring offences of the King Government and they will make that clear by voting for

THORNTON PLEASED WITH SETTLEMENT

Says Interests, Not Only of C.N.R., But of Empire, Have Been Served.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2. Canadian Press. — Sir Henry Thornton, asked to ocmment on the settlement of the Grand Trunk Pacific debenture dispute in London, said:

"Apart from its legal aspects, the situation existing was one opposed, in my opinion, to the best interests of the Dominion, and moreover there might be involved even imperial considerations. I feel that not only the railway but the Empire is well served by an amicable settlement being reached."

CUSTOMS OFFICERS TELL TROUBLES

ST. JOHN, S 2 Canadian Press —Customs officials held the stage with the Lemieux Commission today, when C. B. Lockhard, Collector of Customs at St. John, and A. L. Hoyt, Customs Inspector for the district, testified. The former told the Commissioner about a case where forged landing certificates had been used in connection with the shipment of a cargo of liquor on board the schooner Arcola, cleared for Havana. He had ascertained that the certificates were forged and that the man signing them had not been an employee of the Customs at Havana for six months prior to the date of their signing. He advised the Department at Ottawa to this effect and received instructions to press for payment of the bond covering the cargo, but later these instructions were reversed and he was told to release the bond.

Inspector Hoyt described a customs station in New Brunswick, which was located seven miles from the boundary line. He mentioned this place as one which rather encouraged persons to smuggle goods into the country, rather than declare them, because of its location. A person crossing the line had to go seven miles to reach this place and make entry of whatever he was bringing into Canada.

Both officials agreed that fast patrol boats on the Bay of Fundy would have a material effect in checking liquor smuggling. Land forces should be increased and equipped with fast motor cars.

WEDDING BELLS.

POGUE—PEMBLETON.

A very pretty wedding took place in the United Church, South Woodslee, at 10 o'clock, on Tuesday morning, August 24th, when Thomas Ross Pogue, Physical Director of Central Y.M.C.A., Toronto, and son of Rev. and Mrs. Robert Pogue, Toronto, (formerly of Peterboro), and Miss Dorothy Ruth Pembleton, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Pembleton, were united in holy matrimony. The father of the bridegroom officiated, being assisted by Rev. C. A. Barnard, pastor of the church. The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a dress of cream chiffon taffeta rimmed with seed pearls and a silk net veil, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played by Mrs. Dr. Millen, aunt of the bride. During the signing of the register, Miss Jessie Bell, Stayner, sang most acceptably "Until." The church was tastefuly decorated with gladioli, ferns and asters. Miss Jean Pembleton, sister of the bride, wearing a yellow figured georgette dress and picture hat, and carrying pink roses, acted as bridesmaid, James Pogue as groomsman and Jack Pogue and Donald Millen as ushers. After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Plant, uncle and aunt of the bride. The usual toasts were proposed and responded to in a hearty manner, after which the happy couple left on an extended boat trip through the lakes, the bride wearing a chinol satin crepe dress and hat to match. On their return they will reside in Toronto. Out of town guests: Rev. and Mrs. Pogue, James and Jack Pogue, Miss McBride of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Eric Wilson of Kincardine; Miss Jessie Bell of Stayner; Miss E. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley and Miss Marjorie Knister, Windsor; Misses Mary and Doris Taylor, and Mildred Elliott, Comber. The bride and groom were the recipients of many lovely gifts. The bride will be greatly missed by her many friends in South Woodslee and district, who wish her and her husband much happiness.

DOROTHY ALLAN PARK

"A SINGER WHO TEACHES, AND A TEACHER WHO SINGS"

ARTIST PUPIL OF MR. DALTON BAKER AND MAESTRO GIOVANNI CLERICI, OF FLORENCE, ITALY

"Mrs. Park has dramatic power which momentarily takes an audience by storm, yet exercises a wonderful restraint to sing with charming softness. Were she not an artiste who knows the real art of song she might win constant applause from "the gallery" by using her full voice less sparingly. She sings with remarkable ease, taking long phrases without apparent effort, and curved with perfect smoothness."—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

"She has a beautiful, rich, pure quality of voice, and possesses to a remarkable degree that great gift in a singer, a fine sense of musical temperament."—Musical Canada.

The voice is of luscious quality in the mezzo range, golden and lovely in the soprano, clear as the notes of a thrush, and it is this surprising range and variety of tone colour that makes her voice so effective and her repertoire so extensive."—Toronto "Courier."

"The singer's exemplary diction and impeccable enunciation were an object lesson. Mrs. Park's rendering of 'O, thou billowy harvest field' was an artistic treat, and one could almost sense the pastoral atmospheres of 'In summertime on Bredon.'"—St. Catharines "Standard."

EXCESSIVE SMUGGLING OF LIQUOR ATTRACT ATTENTION AT ST. JOHN SITTING OF LEMIEUX COMMISSION

Claim Large Percentage of Canadian Money Spent Across Border.

DOZEN WITNESSES

American Cigarettes Sold in Lots at Less Than Cost.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Sept. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Leading merchants and manufacturers, officials of the local Customs Department and officers of the preventive service in the Province of New Brunswick appeared before the Lemieux Commission in session here yesterday. It was a busy day for the Commission, and when adjournment took place shortly before six o'clock, more than a dozen witnesses had been examined.

The existence of smuggling on a large scale was evidenced by the story of witness after witness. As in the Nova Scotia hearings, the smuggling of liquor was the main feature of the hearings yesterday, but evidence of the illicit traffic in American cigarettes was offered by one witness. A. F. Forest, of Saint John, declared to the Commissioner that cigarettes from United States had been offered him at less than the amount of the duty which should have been paid upon them. He described how people brought American plug tobacco to him to have it cut up for pipe use.

As in the Ottawa investigation before the Parliamentary Committee, the name of Moses Aziz took prominent position in the evidence brought out yesterday. G. F. Stewart, special Customs preventive officer, with jurisdiction in five counties of the Province, told the Commission that three preventive officers appointed under the special vote of $350,000 provided by Parliament for this work, could neither read nor write. Moses Aziz had assumed these duties and had written the necessary letters for these officers. While he conducted this correspondence, said Mr. Stewart, Moses was engaged in smuggling. Also, he had twice been convicted for offences under the Customs Act.

L. W. Sims, president of the Saint John Board of Trade, described to the Commission some difficulties which he experienced in attempting to find a Customs House on one of the main highways in New Brunswick. Motoring on the Houlton-Woodstock road, he looked for the Customs officer when he crossed the line between Maine and New Brunswick. None was in sight, nor was there any Customs House visible. Mr. Sims said that, after driving approximately eight miles from the border, he found the Customs office located in a farmhouse some hundreds of yards off the main highway. When he finally did locate this officer, the man made no examination of the car which he was driving, said Mr. Sims.

The Commission was offered a variety of evidence in regard to the liquor traffic. One witness declared that the sympathy of Canada was against prohibition enforcement and consequently Customs officers found it difficult to enforce the law. The case of the vessel, "King Daniel," which was seized with liquor on board, was referred to. The witness asserted that the owner of this ship had been forced to pay a fine of $200, while the exporter of the liquor escaped payment on the double-duty.

Mule "All Lit Up" Leads Police To Logcabin Still

NEW JERSEY, Sept. 3. — A staggering mule led four New Jersey troopers Thursday to a log cabin moonshine still, 35 gallons of liquor and the five barrels of mash from which the animal had eaten to freely. The policemen patrolling Weymouth Road between Hammonton and May's Landing just after midnight, saw the mule, ears down, attempt several unsteady steps.

It was unmistakable. The troopers parked their car and watched. The mule lurched back through a patch of woods leading them to a small clearing, in which they could see smoke coming from the rickety chimney of a log hut. The mash bubbled outside. They destroyed it, seized the liquor and still, and wondered whether the mule would lead them to its absent owner.

It didn't, but they interrogated neighbors and a warrant was issued for the arrest of William Loving, of Weymouth, who will be charged with being the operator of the still.

ADD EXTRA HOUR ON VOTERS' DAY

Date Falls Within Daylight Saving Period in Big Cities.

FOR FIRST TIME.

OTTAWA, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press.—For the first time in a Dominion General Election a very large number of voters will have an extra hour at the end of the day in which to cast their ballots. This year the date of the general election falls within the period in which daylight saving is in force in several of the larger centres of population. The Dominion Elections Act lays down the fixed rule that "hours of the day, when mentioned in this Act shall be calculated upon Standard time."

Except in a comparatively few border constituencies the hours of polling are fixed in the Act as from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wherever daylight saving obtains, this means that the polls will be open from 9 to 7 daylight saving time. Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa are among the lager cities which will be affected by this, as they will not return to Standard time until September 26. The hours of nominations next Tuesday are 12 to 2 p.m., which will be 1 to 2 p.m., daylight saving time.

A.Y.P.A. MEETING.

Peterborough District Council Will Meet in Millbrook Next Week.

The District Council of the Anglican Young People's Association will hold its next regular meeting in St. Thomas' Parish Hall, Millbrook, at 8 o'clock on Thursday evening, Sept. 9.

A short business meeting will be held, followed by a corn and weiner roast around a huge camp fire.

Each branch is requested to appear in costume if possible, and to be ready to take an active part in the camp fire activities.

The camp fire will be under the supervision of Camp Fire Chief A. Hope.

The recently organized District Council Band will be in attendance with Homer Lundy as bandmaster.

CUSTOMS PROBE DISCONTINUED DURING ELECTION

Adjourns This Morning To Meet Next in Prince Edward Island.

LIQUOR QUESTION.

Counsel Asks Commissioner To Investigate Connection With Smuggling.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Sept. 3.—(Canadian Press.)— Customs Commission has adjourned to meet at some unspecified date after the election. This morning when R. L. Calder, K.C., the commission counsel, informed them that the whole situation in New Brunswick had been revealed, Sir Francois Lemieux suspended the sittings until the vote has taken place. In doing so, he said, that he thought it was the wish of those with whom he had consulted that the inquiry should proceed no further at present.

In Prince Edward Island.

A conference will be held at Ottawa between Sir Francois and two counsels, R. L. Calder, K.C., and W. F. O'Connor, K.C. Nothing is known of the future movements of the commission, but the commissioner stated to-day that unless there was some reason for a change the next sittings of the commission would take place at Prince Edward Island toward the end of the month.

Liquor Interests.

Before adjournment, Mr. O'Connor informed the commissioner that there has been a pressing demand in the newspapers which would probably be repeated, for further investigation of the liquor interests in Canada and their relation to smuggling practices. Messrs. Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, accountants, were now engaged in examining distilleries all over the country, said Mr. O'Connor, and he had under his hands files and material in regard to their operations. As far as he was concerned, he was in a position to go ahead with this branch of the investigation at any time.

"In Ontario," replied Mr. O'Connor. He continued that this was a branch of investigation that must be treated, as he was treating it now, in public.

Mr. Commissioner said that he thought there should be an adjournment until after the election.

Seizure Recounted.

The story of the seizure of a French freight car containing 5,000 gallons of alcohol was told to the customs commission today by Officer W. J. Carr, of the Canadian Pacific Railway Police. When on a visit to Northern New Brunswick near the boundary line to protect some property he found the freight car on a siding "right alongside the barn of a smuggler," evidently under false consignment. The car had arrived a little ahead of time and the smugglers, he said, were not ready to unload it immediately. He was warned that the car would be unloaded and that any interruption would not be permitted.

"The sub-collector told me it was no use to buck the gang," said Carr. "He unloaded his revolver and washed his hands of the whole affair."

Later the officer was informed that the car would be unloaded early next morning. While he was waiting at the railway station for the unloading the chief smuggler approached and assaulted him. He placed the smuggler under arrest and seized the car.

Mr. Carr advocated more protection for customs officers at lonely posts.

DELEGATES SAIL.

Advance Party Will visit Ottawa To Study Industrial Conditions.

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press). — The advance section of the British Government's Trade and Labor delegation, which is going to Canada and the United States to study industrial conditions, sailed today on the Baltic. The party is going first to Ottawa to consult the Department of Labor. They will be joined in New York by the 1st of October by the rest of the delegation. The tour probably will take three months.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 3—A street car on Fourth Avenue was crowded with passengers returning home from theatres and political meetings. It was nearly 11.30 p.m. Suddenly there was a bump, a crash, and the sound of splintering wood and and crumpling tin.

Women screamed and men shouted. The whole car was in an uproar. All tried to get to see what terrible accident had happened—all but one man. He remained seated, apparently oblivious to the uproar.

Outside, the passengers beheld the crumpled remains of an automobile, and heard, above the noises of the night, the voice of the motorman lifted in argument with the owner of the wreck.

"Get a policeman!" suggested an interested passenger.

"Yes," echoed a dozen other, "get a policeman!"

Two men dashed along Fourth Avenue, up Granville Street, and bravely essayed the grade there in search of an officer. Two others splashed through the mud to the old Kitsilano Police Station only to find it now doing duty as a private residence. Another made his way to a telephone and called up police headquarters.

Meantime traffic was piling up behind the stalled street car. There was a medley of jangling gongs and shriekingly insistent motors.

"Well, get aboard, we can't wait any longer," observed the conductor after the names and addresses of the passengers, witnesses and actors in the affair had been gathered.

The officer, tired and weary after his day of "pavement pounding," was having forty winks on his homeward journey. He woke up to find the car deserted and stalled, and sat there patiently awaiting for it to start, while the excited passengers were searching the locality for an officer.

CANADA'S ABILITY TO RECEIVE GOVERNS IMMIGRATION FLOW

British People Are Studying To Send Out Right Type.

EXPECT PROSPERITY.

TORONTO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press). — "The amount of British immigration to this country is governed only by Canadian ability to absorb it," Sir George McLaren Brown, European manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated in an interview here to-day. The British people are studying the problem of emigration as they have never studied it before. They have experts looking out for the right sort of people to send out," he said.

Sir George stated that there is a general impression throughout Great Britain to-day that Canada is on the eve of a period of great prosperity, not so much a temporary wave as a permanent condition. He expressed his admiration for the press service of Canada to England, declaring that the press reports news but does not go out of its way to discuss political or controversal issues, and minds its own business. England is kept well posted on Canada's developments.

Sir George McLaren Brown was born in Hamilton, Ontario.

The late Russel V. Copping of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, and ex-Alderman, who died in Toronto yesterday.

Famous Neurologist Reaches New York On Way To Montreal.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—Sir James Purves Stewart, senior physician of Westminster Hospital, London, and one of the foremost neurologists of England, arrived to-day on the Mauretania. He will go at once to Montreal, where he was hurriedly summoned to handle a case. Sir James would not discuss the urgent case, saying it is a "private matter."

Sir James left England on the Mauretania an hour after he received an urgent cablegram. He motored to Southampton and caught the liner without a passport or other credentials.

The British State Department arranged while he was en route to New York that he be allowed to enter and proceed to Montreal.

Women Buy Ostrich Plumes Expect Them To Be In Style

LONDON, Sept. 3 (United Press).—Wealthy women have made a bargain counter rush on Mincing Lane, the world ostrich feather centre, because the feathers are expected to be the fashion on women's fall and winter hats. Owing to the sudden demand for the feathers, American, British and French women outbidded each other on Thursday in a spirited competition.

Prices were sky-rocketed by these auction sale methods, the prices on the various grades jumping 25 to 55 per cent.

MILK PRODUCERS STRIKE AFFECTS SICK OF HALIFAX

Patients of Tuberculosis Hospital Unable To Get Any.

SHORT RATIONS.

Farmers Firm in Attempt to Defeat Health Board Ruling.

HALIFAX, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—Householders in this city are on short milk rations, as local milk dealers, unable to get sufficient milk, were forced to cut down their sales. The situation is serious. The little milk served yesterday was, for the most part, two days old. Firm in their determination to defeat the Health Board, milk producers from the outlying districts sent practically no milk into the city. With Wednesday's supply practically exhausted and with no milk obtainable from the producers, the probability is that many consumers will be compelled to do without the staple commodity.

No Milk For Sanatorium.

Perhaps the most serious development was contained in the announcement by a local dairyman who supplies the Tuberculosis Hospital, to the effect that that institution is practically without milk. "At the hospital they use 60 quarts daily," he said, "and I was not able to provide them with a drop either Wednesday or Thursday. I just came from there a few minutes ago and there is not a drop if milk in the institution."

This statement was later corroborated by the authorities at the Tuberculosis Hospital, who stated that for two days they have had practically no milk. Yesterday they obtained a small quantity, insufficient to meet their needs. At the city home, it was stated, condensed milk had been used for the past two days.

Short Ration for Children.

At the Children's Hospital a similar condition of affairs exists. This institution has not been altogether without milk, but the quantity it has been able to obtain has been much smaller than it requires and the shortage is felt. The Victoria General Hospital, more fortunate than the other institutions, was able to secure the regular quantity both Wednesday and Thursday.

NO DEMONSTRATION.

Only Few People at Station To See Valentino's Coffin.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 3. — (United Press). — A Lake Shore Limited train bearing the body of Rudolph Valentino pulled into the Union Station here at 8.30 a.m. today. Except for a small group, mostly Italians, there was no unusual crowd on the platform. No demonstration of mourning was made.

AGAIN PRESIDENT.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—The Canadian Bar Association at its final business session here this morning, re-elected for the eleventh consecutive time Sir James Aikens, Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba, as president. Sir James thus has the honor of being head of this organization ever since its inception.

POLAND WANTS UNITED STATES IN THE WORLD COURT DESPITE DIFFICULTY OF RESERVATIONS

Man Still Alive Two Hours After He Is Declared Dead

NEW JERSEY, September 3. —Officially pronounced dead at 11.45 a.m. yesterday, by two physicians, Vincent Celad, aged 26, of Riverside, N. J., who received 13,000 volts of electricity while working on a light pole on River Road at East Riverto N. J., gasped twice and flickered his eyelids two hours after the death verdict.

Fellow workmen who resuscitated Celda two weeks ago after six hours' work, and who had refused to accept the physicians' verdict of death, were encouraged in their efforts, and asserted that they would work at least four or five hours longer before conceding that he was dead.

At 3 p.m., the work of resuscitation was still going on but without results. The workers said that they would continue.

Celda, an employee of the Public Service Company of Camden, touched a high tension wire while working at the top of a pole. Other linemen climbed up the pole and after wrapping a rubber blanket about him brought him to the ground and began their work of resuscitation.

M. Rostworowski, Polish Representative, Insists America's Terms be Accepted.

HURST SUPPORTS

GENEVA, Sept. 3.—The United States Senate's reservations to the world court were debated by the conference of court signatories here yesterday, the last half of the fifth reservation being the first major subject of discussion.

On behalf of Poland, M. Rostworowski, law professor at the University of Cracow, insisted that the reservation should be accepted in the same spirit as the others, namely, that it was intended merely to give the United States the same equality as council members, and also guarantee against an advisory opinion being given against the United States without the latter's consent. He held that this position was just.

Fromageot, of France, declared that it would be first necessary to establish whether the counsel resolution asking the Hague court for an advisory opinion must be passed by unanimous vote or by a majority vote. In the first case the fifth reservation would permit the United States to block such unanimous decision, but in the second case, the efficacy of the United States reservation would be jeopardized.

Sir Cecil Hurst, of England, while holding that the fifth reservation gives the United States a privileged position, declared "nevertheless, I am convinced that we could afford to give the United States this special position."

Pending the establishment of certain international legal points, action on the fourt reservation was held up yesterday.

Attitude Favorable.

Comment in the league lobbies indicated a favorable attitude toward the reservations, the only discussion which might have been interpreted as unfavorable having to do with efforts to make the world court's organization harmonize with the American reservations.

Observers felt a spirit existed that the United States must be brought into the world court at all costs.

Article Five.

Article five, the second half of which was to be discussed at today's gathering, states:

"That the court shall not render any advisory opinion except publicly after due notice to all states adhering to the court and all interested states, and after public hearings given to any state concerned. Nor shall it without the consent of the United States entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question which the United States has or claims interest."

It is the second half of the article which may block the way. If this is acceptable to all signatories, it is considered certain that all other reservations will be found acceptable.

The fourth reservation, not yet accepted, declares that "the United

MINERS DEBATE FUTURE POLICY

Next Forty-eight Hours Is Vital For Coal Industry.

GIVEN FULL POWER.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The next forty-eight hours will prove decisive whether the coal strike is going to be fought to a finish or whether the miners are going to make proposals which may lead to peace. After the conference of miners' delegates adjourned yesterday what is known as an "interpretation" of the feeling of the delegates took place, and the executive will act upon the results of this interpretation. There is much pessimism in labor circles over the result, because it is feared that the delegates to the conference are so bound by instructions from local lodges that they do not enjoy any more freedom of decision than members of the executive of the Miners' federation.

Meanwhile the impression is growing hourly among the miners' leaders that Churchill's friendly gesture must be followed up, and this is what the parliamentary Labor party is trying to secure as a preliminary step for peace.

Power For Executive.

The executive officers of the Miners' union yesterday decided to recommend to the congress of union delegates now in session that the executives be given full power to enter negotiations for settling the coal dispute, and to agree upon a settlement should one be reached in a new conference.

WORKMAN KILLED.

TORONTO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—When a steel beam fell upon him, striking him on the chest, Archibald Wade, a steel worker in the construction of a roundhouse in connection with the new waterfront viaduct, was fatally injured here today. Fred Hill, Midland, Ont., another workman, was also injured and was rushed to a hospital where an X-ray examination will determine the extent of his injuries.

CORONER'S JURY BLAMES SECRETARY

Brings In Verdict in Case of Publisher Found Dead.

MONTREAL, Sept. 2.— (Canadian Press.)— Henry R. Bertrand, secretary of "La Revue Moderne," a local weekly magazine, and former secretary of other businesses conducted by the late J. A. Beaudry, editor and publisher of "Le Prix Courant," a weekly review, was to-day held criminally responsible by a jury for causing the death of Beaudry on August 14. When the verdict was given Bertrand, who had watched the proceedings of the coroner's inquest from the back of the room, nodded his head, but showed no signs of emotion.

PECK'S SUPPORTERS VISIT BRIDGENORTH

Liberal Ministers Charged With Interfering With Preventative Officers.

Four Conservative speakers, E. A. Peck, V. J. McElderry, J. F. Strickland and W. H. Bradburn, M. P.P., visited Bridgenorth last night and expounded the party policy in the Forester's Hall. J. Bradley occupied the chair and introduced the speakers.

Mr. Strickland in a speech which covered all the major issues before the electors dwelt at some length on the Customs issue. It was alleged, he said, that Mr. Stevens wrongfully obtained the evidence which he placed before the House. This charge he said was refuted by a signed statement form Mr. Sparks of the Commercial Protective Association, who stated he gave the evidence to Mr. Stevens and added that this evidence was identical with that placed before the Government which refused to act upon it.

Declaring that the constitutional issue was non-existent, Mr. Strickland declared Lord Byng merely acted with common ense and common sense was, after all, the basis of all law.

V. J. McElderry.

Mr. McElederry quoted the opinion of Mr. Lucas, Progressive member last session for Camrose, Alberta, who stated that the constitutional issue was merely a smoke screen to becloud the customs scandal which had besmirched Canada. In further support of his contention that there was no constitutional issue, he quoted the following extract from the Globe which stated :"If the Governor-General erred in [illegible] to appoint his advisers, he was not responsible for the unprecedented and stressful conditions under which he was called to act, and it will be difficult to convince the man in the street that he was actuated by any other motive than the good of the country, or that self government is in danger, or that Canada is in danger of becoming a Crown colony.

Mr. McElderry reminded his hearers that the evidence of 240 witnesses before the customs investigation committee, revealed a state of affairs that induced Progressives, who had consistently supported the Government, to withdraw their support.

E. A. Peck.

Mr. Peck declared that Arthur Meighen was justified in taking office after King had resigned. He had the promise of Progressive support to complete the work of the session, and that promise was broken.

Discussing the Robb budget, Mr. Peck said it had commendable features but was not so wonderful as it was claimed to be. The reduction in income tax and automobile prices did not affect the whole people. He thought if a reduction had been made in the 5 per cent. sale tax on clothes everybody in the country would have been benefitted.

Mr. Peck riduculed the method of dealing with smugglers adopted by Hon. Jacques Bureau, former Minister of Customs under the Liberal Government. According to sworn evidence given before the committee, Mr. Bureau, on receiving complaints of smuggling at Rock Island, declared that he had spoken to the smugglers, and as they had promised not to do it again, he thought it was advisable to refrain from prosecuting them.

W. H. Bradburn.

Mr. Bradburn, who was seated in the audience, was called to the platform for a five-minute talk, and made a vigorous indictment against members of the Liberal party. He related that a Liberal candidate fighting an election in a constituency on the border of Quebec and New York asked that the preventive officers be withdrawn from the border, as he felt that unless they were called off his election was doubtful. "In the interest of the party" the men were removed that the election might be won. Mr. Bradburn asked the electors to condemn this procedure. They could do so by helping to elect Mr. Peck.

Bride Ship Brings Beauties

The "Bride Ship Metagama" continues her successful career of ferrying Scottish brides across the Atlantic to Canada and U.S.A. Here is a happy group which sailed from Glasgow to Canada on the Canadian Pacific liner "Metagama". Each bride was presented with a bouquet kindly sent by Sir Malcolm Campbell. Included in this group are Miss M. J. R. Campbell, Edinburgh, to marry. Mr. H. Peterson, Detroit, U.S.A.; Miss J. Beaton, Paisley, to marry Mr. D. Crawford, Windsor, Ontario; Miss M. J. Middleton, Banchory, to marry Mr. W. Forsyth, Alberta; Miss M. McMath, Carsphairn, to marry Mr. W. Adamson, Alberta; Miss I. J. Craig, Mintlaw, Aberdeen, to marry Mr. R. I. Dunn, Saskatchewan; Miss M. J. Davidson, Mintlaw, Aberdeen, to marry Mr. W. Milne, Manitoba; Miss F. Merrison, Govan, to marry Mr. A. M. Kilgour, Kenora, Ontario.

HOUSE BURNED.

Fire Destroys Campbellford Residence During Early Morning.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 3. — Fire destroyed the brick dwelling on Bridge Street, west of the Salvation Army Citadel, on Monday morning about 6.30. The house, owned by Mr. T. J. Horkins, was occupied by Mrs. Rountree and family, who had difficulty in escaping. The fire brigade was on the scene immediately, but the fire had gained rapid headway and little could be done to check it. The building was completely gutted.

PALACE ON WHEELS.

TORONTO, Ont., eSpt. 3.—(CP)—Even in these days of strange-looking vehicles, few conveyances have attracted as much attention as that shown, the modern caravan used by P. W. Work, president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company of Akron, Ohio, during his tour through Canada this year. The first car has its entire length devoted to living room. It is carpeted, curtained and with beautifully finished woodwork inset with mirrors. It is furnished with piano, radio, gramophone, easy chairs, and has a splendid lighting system. The second car, of equal size, is divided into compartments, a kitchenette, a small hall way, bedroom containing four berths, and a bathroom.

German Beer Prices Cut Its Popularity

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—(Associated Press).—Germany once known as a nation of beer and coffee drinkers, is turning to cocoa and chocolate.

The high price of a stein of suds, the Government reports, has cut the annual beer consumption from 102 liters for every man, woman and child to 75 liters. Coffee consumption has been cut in half, the average cost per pound being about one dollar.

If you will enamel the inside of your bureau drawers with white enamel, you will find this an incentive to keep them neat and tidy.

The colors include red, green, navy blue, black and wood tones. And our Sport Coats are displayed in the softly-blended autumnal hues.

Every Coat is silk lined and carefully tailored and finished in every detail, and carries our iron-clad guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded.

Smart New Coats

For Fall and Winter

THESE new models are sponsors of the slight variation in silhouette that is evident in the fall mode. The bloused back is very new, belts have been renewed to good effect on many coats, and capes still swing on some sport models. They are being featured at $35.00 $39.75 $45.00

In every respect these Coats represent values of the most extraordinary sort, and the exclusive variety of the styles affords selection for every occasion.

The Popularity of Tweeds

TWEEDS in a surprising variety of weaves are warm and smart, as are the heavier woollens that are often checked or plaided strikingly. Patterned fabrics are much in vogue for both street and sport. Colors turn to the warm browns and russet tones of autumn, but greens and blues are also in evidence. There is a lavish use of short haired furs, always the most becoming of trimmings.

Special Lay-Away Feature

WIN FOR CLERKS IN FIRST GAME

Beat Hydros 24-14, Coming From Behind—Adamson Hurt.

EXHIBITION GAME.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 3. — The Clerks defeated the Hydro in the first of the play-off games for the Campbellford Cloth Company Cup and the Softball Association championship at the Agricultural Grounds last night.

The score was 24 to 14, with the Clerks trailing up to the fifth, when they scored five runs to take the lead and hold it to the end. In this inning the electric boys lost the services of Adamson, their good first baseman. Adamson leaped in the air for a high throw, and Ibey, going at full speed for first, hit the big first sacker in the ribs with his shoulder, and Adamson went down in a heap, and was unable to continue in the game, and the Hydro didn't perform as well after, while last year's champions played better ball as the game progressed. Cowell and Tinney played fine ball for the Hydro, both at bat and in the field. Ibey, Cook and Wood were the big hitters for the champions, and Gay and McArthur were the bright lights defensively.

The second game will be played on Tuesday night at the Agricultural Grounds at 5.30 sharp.

The line-up:

Clerks—Ibey 2b; Thomas p; Wood rf; Cook cf; Denike 1b; Gay 3b; Blake lf; Parsons ss; McArthur c.

Hydro .. ..3502013—14 15 5

Pontiacs of Oshawa will play an all-star team here Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The locals are anxious to redeem themselves in the eyes of the fans for their defeat at the hands of General Motors in the Ontario softball elimination series, and promise to put up a real fight.

Fred Adamson, the Hydro first baseman who was injured in the fifth inning of last night's game, was, on a doctor's examination, found to have sustained three broken ribs. The accident will keep Adamson out of the game for the balance of the season, and the Hydro will be greatly weakened by his absence.

Jarvis Family Holds Rat Catching Record

LONDON, Sept. 3 — England's rat catching record is held by the Jarvis family, three of whom are girls. Bags of 700 to 1,000 rats a week are nothing out of the ordinary for the Jarvis firm.

Misses Nell and Kitty Jarvis, twenty-one and twenty-three respectively, are on the rat catching job every night in the week, often assisted by their sister Rose, who is twelve. They also accept extermination contracts where cock roaches mice and black beetles are concerned.

The girls come by their rat catching abilities quite naturally, as they were taught by their father, John Jarvis, official rat catcher to the London County Council, and to most of the government offices.

Jarvis claims to be the only rat catcher in Great Britain whose father and mother, and grandfathers on both sides have followed the same trade. His wife also has been a rat catcher twenty-five years. There are two boys, in addition to the girls who assist in the work.

CENTENNIAL MASQUERADE

Costumes at Ottawa Celebration Are Novel and Striking.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 3.—(CP).—The masquerade celebrating the Centenary brought forth a great crowd and there were some features of it that attracted special attention. One party had a representation which was not lost on the thousands at the park. Six of them were attired as members of an old-fashioned, and also modern, bridal party. The old-fashioned bride with her old-fashioned groom, led a pair of newly-weds in the accoutrements of modern matrimony. Both couples were accompanied by trainbearers.

Perhaps the most effective costume was worn by a mere girl who represented a young damsel of 1826. She wore a sweeping grey gown, with large earrings and a broad-brimmed hat, covered also with grey material. In her hand she carried a black bag, which might actually have been handed down by her great-grandmother. It was inscribed with the figures "1826" in white chalk.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 3. (CP).—In a recent decision given by Mr. Justice Kelly, in the motion brought by a man for custody of his two children (the parents having disputed over the education of the latter) the judge said: "It has always been the feeling here that a child has the right to love and companionship of both parents; the right to be brought up by both parents. We seem to be getting away from that idea and I don't know whether our proximity to the United States has anything to do with it, but it is regrettable."

A JUNIOR CONTEST.

Junior members of the Peterboro Horticultural Society are reminded of the special competition in vegetables and flowers grown by these members from seeds supplied by the Horticultural Society, which is to be an interesting feature of this year's Peterboro Industrial Exhibition.

There are four classes in vegetables and four in flowers, with six prizes in each class, and it is expected that the entry list will be large.

The Horticultural Society, in seeking to arouse an interest among the youngsters of the city in horticulture, is working along sound lines that should give splendid results, and the competition arranged in connection with the Exhibition will give the public a chance to see what is being done.

Parents of children who are members of the society should see to it that they enter the contests and thus help to make an impressive showing.

The entries, it should be understood, must be in on Friday or Saturday of next week.

UNIFORM REGULATIONS.

Motorists everywhere will applaud the suggestion from the President of the Ontario Municipal Association that uniform traffic laws be adopted in all parts of the Province.

Nothing is more confusing to a driver than the difference in traffic regulations to be found in various municipalities in Ontario.

What is quite legal in one city may be an offence against a local bylaw in another.

One municipality insists upon diagonal parking, another requires drivers to leave their cars parallel with and close to the curb.

A uniform code of traffic regulations would be welcomed not only by Ontario people but by the thousands of American visitors, who are bewildered by the variation in traffic laws that they encounter in travelling through the Province.

Uniformity in the regulations would at the same time contribute greatly to safer driving conditions and help to reduce the number of accidents.

TWO TIRED LEADERS.

The word picture given by The Manitoba Free Press of Premier Meighen as he appeared on the platform in Winnipeg gives some idea of the strain and stress of a political campaign upon party leaders.

"Mr. Meighen is travel-tired; he is languid with fatigue; his throat is like a file; his voice is just a croak; his face is red and moist with heat; he has been speaking for weeks; his eyes are pits beneath his forehead; his face is set in lines as firm as hardwood."

Mr. Meighen and Mr. King, in covering the whole Dominion from coast to coast in a few weeks, must be expending an enormous amount of nervous energy.

Making from two to half a dozen speeches a day—Mr. Meighen spoke to sixteen audiences on the last day of his visit in his own riding of Portage La Prairie—the leaders are engaged in a herculanean task, and their efforts are not made the more easy by the importunities of the riding organizations which send out S.O.S. calls to their chieftains.

It has always seemed to The Examiner as but reasonable that party leaders should at least be spared the trouble of winning a seat for themselves; the return of leaders by acclamation would be a merciful arrangement that would lift some little portion of the burden from off their shoulders.

CITIZENSHIP.

As the time for a general election approaches it is an appropriate time to call attention to the duty that rests upon every citizen of our fair Dominion who is of the full age of 21 years. The marking of a ballot is, or should be, regarded by all as a very sacred duty, and the privilege was only secured after a century or more of agitation, and is the only voice that all the people have in selecting representatives to govern this great country.

Unfortunately a very large percentage of qualified voters do not take the trouble to go to the polls on election day, and this misconception of what should be a sacred duty has had disastrous results in very many elections, and curiously enough, it is this class of non-voters who howl loudest and longest when some legislation (not to their liking) is placed on the statute books, or when the tax bill makes them dig down a little deeper.

Public life ought to be a source of great attraction to our best citizens, but there is mighty poor encouragement for any public man when only about 50 per cent. of those qualified use their franchise. All good citizens should be able to use their own judgment on any political issue, and they owe it to themselves to show that they appreciate that privilege by being out early on election day and marking their ballot for one or other of the candidates.

Then again all good citizens should get in behind such organizations as our Exhibition Board in the excellent work they are doing, to keep our fair city on the map. This year's Exhibition, lasting for a whole week, should set up a new attendance record. And why not have such organizations as Rotary, Kiwanis and all our fraternal organizations join hands with our City Council and put on an old boys' week next summer? I am sure many of our fraternal societies would [illegible] line. Other towns smaller than ours have done it, and made a success of it. Why not emulate? What do you say?

GOOD ADVICE.

Viscount Grey, of Fallodon, has been giving some timely advice to the boys of Epsom College on the benefits of walking. "Keep your legs," was the counsel of Lord Grey to the young students. He warned them against giving up walking and riding bicycles because the means of communication have been so much improved, and said even a middle-aged man is better for walking twenty miles a day or riding fifty on a wheel.

Viscount Grey is doubtful whether all the modern mechanical contrivances which have become part of every-day life are of benefit to humanity and warned his audience against neglecting their minds and bodies because mechanical genius has devised ways of amusing persons without requiring them to make any effort on their own behalf.

Lord Grey's advice is as necessary and as timely for both young and old in the Western world as it was for the youth of England. With the coming of the motor car, and the more recent bringing of it within the reach of people of very modest means, the habit of walking is in danger of falling into disuse. If the cheap car and the instalment plan of payment should result in the abandonment of one of the most healthful and pleasure-giving forms of exercise, Henry Ford and those who have co-operated with him in facilitating the exchange of legs for wheels, are incurring a tremendous responsibility.

The motor car, of course, has its advantages and pleasures, and in business today it has become a necessity. The facility which it affords the city dweller of getting out into the country, is one of the things which commends it to those who love nature and long to look upon its beauties at certain seasons of the year. But those who are whirled rapidly along our highways, especially the drivers, who are compelled to keep a close eye upon the road before them, can know little of the enjoyment of the quiet walk through rural scenes where there is opportunity for closer observance of the beauties of nature and objects of interest. Besides, walking, especially with agreeable companionship, is declared by medical men to be one of the best forms of physical exercise. Many of our readers no doubt would be able to tell of the benefit and the enjoyment derived from walking tours through the country and to points of interest inaccessible to any conveyance. It would be a great pity to see this source of enjoyment abandoned for more expensive and less beneficial forms of recreation. Therefore, we pass on to all our readers and friends Viscount Grey's advice, "Keep your legs," whether you are the owner of an automobile or not.—The New Outlook.

CANADA WILL KEEP BACK THE WOLF.

It must not be taken for granted that the world's food supply is just naturally going to keep pace with the world's population. Rapidly the white races are outgrowing the cultivated lands which now feed them. Scientists foresee the probability of a food shortage and frequently discuss it. Indeed, at the recent meeting of the British Association at Oxford, the world's approach to the hunger line prompted a studied warning from the most distinguished Association members. The problem was set forth in true scientific fashion, with cold figures, and the possible remedies were discussed in some detail. Without wasting much time on the question of checking the growth of population, it was generally agreed that food production must be intensified, with scientific research in the background to make that remedy practicable. Then came the interesting part. To produce more food, more land must be cultivated, and practically the only country with vast areas available was the Dominion of Canada. It was asserted that Canada had only made a start on the cultivtion of the additional wheat area required by the world. It was inevitable that Canada must become increasingly the world's granary.

The white population of the world, the scientists estimated, is increasing at the rate of five millions a year, and it takes twelve million new acres a year to provide for this increase. Where is the world going to get twelve million new acres every year? Sir Daniel Hall asked the question at the Association meeting and Lord Bledisloe answered it. He said Canada's exportable wheat surplus had increased twenty times in twenty-five years and at least 240,000,000 acres awaited development. He would have been nearer the mark if he had said 400,000,000 acres. That area alone would provide for the world's increasing population for nearly forty years. Then the pessimists stated that Western Canada areas were too dry and northern areas too cold. The optimists replied that Canadians had evolved a new wheat that would grow in the northern areas. It recalls the dispute less than 100 years ago, when it was contended that wheat would not grow at all west of the Great Lakes. At any rate, optimists and pessimists alike at the British Association were looking to Canada, conjuring up a picture of the Dominion in the role of universal provider, keeping the wolf from the door of the world.

Lord Bledisloe pointed out, as a reason for application of the scientific principle to agriculture, that 15 to 20 per cent. of the world's food crops are lost through insect and fungoid devastation. Therefore, as the world more and more appreciated the danger of under-production and over-population, the importance of research became magnified. Canada is not unaware of this problem. The crops of the Dominion pay their annual toll to the corn borer, to smut and to rust, and to pests innumerable. The loss has been sufficiently heavy, at least, to command respect for the man who works in the laboratory.

Fertilizers evolved from the nitrogen of the air are regarded as a possibility of the not distant future, and productiveness in the world's grain fields will no doubt soon be immensely increased. But there is every reason to believe, with the British scientists, that Canada's unoccupied farm lands will not now long await cultivation. The world's hunger line is getting too close for comfort.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Remember the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition opens a week from Monday. Be an Exhibition booster.

"King can't win," says one election advertisement. "Meighen can't win," reads another. And the worst of it is, both may be right.

Mr. Burnham says his hat is not in the ring. So that's that.

It is to be hoped that out in Athabaska they will be able to get all last elections ballot boxes out of the bush for use on this occasion.

One of the leaders in future good roads campaign in Manitoba will be the Conservative standard-bearer who couldn't be nominated because his representatives were mired in the mud until too late to attend to the formalities.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—The only export business reported on the Montreal grain market yesterday was the sale of a few loads of American No. 2 hard wheat which was bought at 10 cents per bushel over the Chicago September option, c.i.f. Montreal. There was some demand from local and country buyers for car lots of grain in the domestic market and the movement in this respect was moderate. There was no actual change in prices, but the undertone was easier in sympathy with other markets.

Owing to the renewed weakness in the Winnipeg cash wheat situation, an easier feeling developed in the local market for Spring wheat grades of flour and prices were declined 10 cents per barrel.

Prices for Winter wheat grades of flour were well maintained owing to the fact that the arrivals here from Ontario millers of new crop wheat grades have only been sufficient to supply immediate wants. It is expected that as soon as the offerings increase to any extent, lower values will be in order. The volume of business yesterday was fair.

The movement of millfeed continued fairly large and prices were firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and the feeling was steady.

Considerable business was transacted in eggs and the values were firmly maintained at the recent advances noted. The receipts were 1,486 cases.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 6,112 boxes.

The tone of the market for beans was steady under a moderate demand. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.25 per bushel.

CHICAGO WHEAT

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—Wheat underwent a sharp break in price yesterday during the final hour, with May delivery touching the lowest level yet this season. A new bearish private estimate of the 1926 Canadian yield of wheat was largely responsible. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 2 to 3 cents net lower, corn 1 1-8 to 1 3-8 down, oats a shade to 3-8 off and provisions at 5 to 50 cents decline.

The finish in the wheat market was at virtually the day's bottom figures. Heavy selling on the part of houses with eastern connection went hand in hand with the upset in values. According to the newest unofficial figures, the Prairie Provinces this season will harvest 403,594,000 bushels, an amount more than 100,000,000 bushels in excess of some predictions current only two months ago. A forecast of better weather in Canada contributed to the late weakness of the market.

A surprising feature of the wheat trade yesterday was the circumstance that the price setback was in the face of big export buying that totalled 1,500,000 bushels, mostly Canadian. Early in the day, too, there had been much talk of delay to threshing in Canada and possible crop damage as a result of rains said to be the heaviest in six years. In connection with yesterday's estimate of Canadian wheat, it is pointed out that there has been a wide difference of opinion as to the probable yield, unofficial forecasts of late ranging from 327,000,000 bushels to upward of 400,000,000 bushels.

Corn and oats followed wheat prices down grade, despite unfavorable growth conditions for corn, and notwithstanding crop damage, advices relative to oats.

Provisions were weaker.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 13,000. Generally steady to strong, top heavies 10.80, scaling 1,457 pounds; some 1,719 pound average 10.00, and 1,593 pound kinds at 10.35, long yearlings and 1,200 pound steers 10.00, vealers steady to 25 higher, mostly steady; packers 14.00 to 14.50, outsiders 15.00 to 15.50.

Hogs 20,000. Better grades generally strong to 25 higher, heavy packing sows 25 to 25 higher, lighter weights 25 to 40 up, top 14.15, bulk desirable 210 pounds down 13.75 to 14.00, light lights upward to 13.85, best slaughter pigs 13.50, bulk desirable butchers scaling 250 to 300 pounds 12.00 to 13.00.

Sheep 16,000. Fat lambs mostly 15 to 25 loker, bulk westerns 14.35, top natives to small killers 14.60, bulk to packers 13.75 to 14.00, culls closing about steady at 9.00 to 10.00, mostly sheep steady, fat ewes 5.50 to 6.50.

POLAND WANTS UNITED STATES

States may withdraw from the court at any time and statutes of the court shall not be altered without consent of this government."

FORTY PROTESTS.

GENEVA, Sept. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Sir George E. Foster, former finance minister of Canada, and for many years one of the leading statesmen of that country, delivered a sharp attack at the world court conference yesterday afternoon on the United States attitude, particularly with reference to the fifth reservation relative to adherence to the court.

The world awaited and expected something more than this from the United States, said the Canadian delegate in the course of his remarks, which were almost of a sensational character and profoundly impressed the European delegates.

Sir George issued a warning that the United States' plan for adherence to the world court should not be interpreted as showing any change in the United States position toward the League of Nations. The world, he declared, should rid itself of any idea that the United States was more friendly to the league.

This reservation, whereby the United States demands the right of consent to the delivering of advisory opinions by the world court in questions in which it claims an interest, said Sir George, is virtually a command to the court—"You shall not do thus and so."

"That is going very far," he exclaimed, "for a country which is outside the league."

The Canadian, like other speakers constantly referred to the relation of the court to the League of Nations, thus giving the impression that the court is closely linked with the league in the minds of all.

"The League of Nations was not sent by the Deify into the Paris conference halls a perfect mechanism, fashioned to endure forever without changes," he declared, "but is an experiment and the embodiment of an ideal which will be improved by experience."

But in his opinion the United States reservation created a law for the league for all time and in equality between the states. He granted to the policy the granting the U.S. a privilege, especially as the U.S. was outside the league, "which other countries were carrying on."

Sir George was convinced that the United States did not wish to interfere in the league, and therefore, like previous speakers, he favored "putting it up to Washington as man to man and asking Washington to accept equality instead of privilege."

Canadian statesmen interpreted the United States reservation, he continued, as meaning that both the president and senate must agree as to whether the United States had any interest in a question on which the league council wished to ask for an advisory opinion. If this were true it would involve interminable delay and interfere with the work of the league. At all events, he added, one member of the United States senate is reported to have interpreted the reservation in this sense.

In view of the confusion existing as to what the league law really is concerning advisory opinions, Senor Bureo of Uruguay moved that a special commission be appointed to decide whether advisory opinions required a unanimity vote of the council or a simple majority.

If the reply declared for unanimity, it would be easy, he argued, to give the United States a privilege which was possessed by all the members.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

MISS MAUDE ROYDEN

To Miss Maude Royden, considered by many the greatest woman preacher in the world, the most exciting form of indoor sport is the rearing of a young adopted daughter, aged ten.

The two of them live in a pleasant old house on Rossiyn Hill in what has been described as the highbrow section of Hampstead. Real estate agents described it as a quiet neighborhood until the spinster-preacher arrived with her exciting and affectionate young charge. Now the whole vicinity is absorbed in the lively struggle between the very advanced young foster-mother and her even more advanced it is said, young charge.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"NO MORE THAN I GOT THERE"

"No more than I got to her house I had to go home."

This use of "no more than" is not uncommon among persons who are not careful in their speech. It seems to have escaped the notice of the writers on good English. Very few of them, if any, comment on it.

The meaning is, of course, clear, but that does not justify the use of the phrase, since it is not generally accepted. "No more than" means, in this sense, "as soon as," "scarcely," "hardly." Since there are, therefore, a phrase and at least two words in good standing to express the meaning, there is no reason for the use of the phrase "no more than." Say, "As soon as I got to (or arrived at) her house, I had to go home." Or say, "Hardly, or scarcely, had I got to (or arrived at) her house, when I had to go home."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

TO A FOE

Let not the word of pardon wait
Too long. We soon forget to hate,
Since none can hate and still be glad;
We soon forget the hate we had,
But speak the friendly word too late.

Thank God for friends, among them those
Who now are friends who once were foes.
For many a man, who did me ill,
In other days was kinder still;
I felt the thorn but found the rose.

Indeed, I often wonder if Forgiveness is a thing we give
Or thing we take, we find such peace
When troubles end, when quarrels cease—
For then we learn to love, and live.

The man who thought enough of me
To dare to doubt, to disagree,
Is more my friend than those who pass
And never look my way, alas,
Who pass me by and never see.

And so I thank you for your doubt;
Now let us straighten matters out,
Come closer when the quarrel ends.
Let's first be foes and then be friends,
And wonder what 'twas all about.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE AMERICAN PRUNE

By Dr. Frank Crane.

A number of references have been made of late in the newspaper to the place and importance of the lowly prune.

When the Southern Pacific Railroad recently added a new locomotive of the latest type to its passenger service the fact came to light that per pound a prune is more valuable than a locomotive.

As an industry the raising of prunes has assumed importance with a suddenness that places it almost on a parallel with the phenomenal growth of the automobile and the moving picture industries.

The first scion planted in this country was brought from France in 1856.

It was planted in California as an experiment from which little was expected.

Only in 1870 was the first serious attempt made to cultivate prunes on a large scale in the United States. The first real prune orchard was planted then.

Ten years later the crop in the United States was 200,000 pounds and in 1900 it had reached a total of nearly 130,000,000 pounds and has been growing steadily ever since.

Its popularity in this country as a table delicacy has grown by leaps and bounds. Doctors speak kind words in referring to it and it made a host of friends because of its health giving properties.

The American prune is also holding its own in foreign markets.

Large quantities are now being exported, some even being sent to the land from which the first scion came.

The grade of prunes is determined by the number to the pound. They range from 30 to 40 in the highest grade to 120 to 130 in the lowest.

American prunes in the foreign markets are said to rank with the finest brands of France.

As an industry the producing of the American prune has attained a place of lasting importance.

Those Attending The Canadian National Exhibition

In Toronto are cordially invited to inspect the Exhibit of our local firm, Messrs. J. J. TURNER & SONS, Limited.

Keeping abreast of the times, their chief exhibit being Automobile Tents, and prominently displayed are the "Roamer" Auto Tents, "Snuggle Inn" Auto Tent and the latest 1926 "Jiffy" Auto Tent, the latter being all that the name implies—put up or taken down in a jiffy.

The "Jiffy" belongs to the umbrella class of tents, providing ample head room, perfect ventilation and absolutely mosquito-proof. There are no long guy ropes or unnecessary poles connected with the "Jiffy," which is the acme of perfection.

The Exhibit this year is in charge of Mr. W. F. Turner and Mr. Robert Hendry, while an efficient staff of sign writers and canvas men are ever ready for efficient service—in fact, the firm are there with the goods. "Crowd us if you can!"

GREAT FUTURE FOR PRAIRIES

Sir F. Williams-Taylor Says All Parts of Canada Must Work.

MONTREAL, Sept. —(Canadian Press.)—On his return from a trip to Western Canada Sir Frederick Williams Taylor, general manager of the Bank of Montreal, expresses himself as most optimistic concerning the future of the western provinces. "The vital things for us Canadians to keep before us is the necessity for team play," he said. "No one of the five sections of Canada can accomplish much as a separate unit. We must, and we will, work out some improved scheme of co-operation so that the Dominion may achieve the best results. United, the Dominion of Canada has a great future."

Sir Frederick stated that the development of the west was so rapid that a yearly visit was necessary to visualize perfectly the picture, to absorb the atmosphere, and to get the point of view of the Canadians west of the Great Lakes. He outlined the progress that British Columbia and the prairie provinces have made in the last few years.

MAJOR POLICIES MUST BE DECIDED BY MOTHERLAND

New Zealand's Premier Outlines Attitude Before Attending Imperial Conferences.

NO SELF DESIRE

Australia Determined to Remain Part World-Wide British Empire.

LONDON, Sept. 3. — Notable prominence is given in the London press yesterday to the reports of speeches made by Premier Coates, of New Zealand, and Premier Bruce, of Australia, on the eve of their departure for the imperial conferences.

Opening the debate in the New Zealand House on imperial affairs Wednesday, Mr. Coats is reported as saying: "New Zealand recognizes that in questions of foreign policy it is not always possible to give effect to separate views from all the Dominions and conditions will arise where it is necessary that New Zealand shall leave the ultimate decision with the Imperial Government. New Zealand will bring to the imperial conference no spirit of carping criticism and no desire to gain advantages for herself or further to embarrass the imperial problems. It is my opinion that New Zealand is entirely satisfied with existing conditions and that this Dominion has ample scope within its present limits for freedom and the attainment of full nationhood within the Empire."

Stay With Empire.

Premier Bruce, speaking in the House of Representatives in a similar connection, declared Wednesday that the most important feature of his policy at the imperial conference would be that Australia should remain always an integral part of the world-wide British nation of which he was proud to be a member.

Averages Around Thirty Bushels To Acre At Niverille, Man.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press.—Wheat at Riverville, Manitoba, is going 25 to 35 bushels to the acre with the weight at 62 to 64 and grading No. 1 and No. 2 Northern, according to reports received here yesterday.

The following points report good yields: La Riviere, 27 bushels; Cartwright, 20 to 28 bushels; Napinka, 25; Macdonald and Minnedosa, 20; Westbourne, 35 to 45; and Bradwardine, 25 to 35 bushels to the acre.

Saskatchewan: Grenfell, 26 bushels; Sinclair, 24; Kisbey, 24; Rouleau, 30; Valour, 28 to 30; and Glamis, 35 bushels to the acre.

COMMISSION TO FINISH SITTINGS

Will Suspend Further Hearings Until After the General Elections.

RETURN LATER.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press)—The Royal Commission investigating administration of the Department of Customs and Excise will probably conclude its New Brunswick sittings this evening. The probability is that the Commission will then suspend further hearings until after the general election.

It is understood that Sir Francois Lemieux, commissioner conducting the investigation, has come to the conclusion that the work of the commission may be performed better when the contests at the polls are over. In the statement which he made from the bench at the opening of the morning's sitting yesterday, he stated his belief "that during the turmoil of an election campaign it was not a proper time to hold such an investigation."

The investigation in the Maritime provinces is not completed, and it is practically certain that the commission will return here later on. Then, in addition to cleaning up unfinished work in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, the Commission will visit Prince Edward Island. It is likely that the commission will tour Western Canada before visiting the Maritimes again, however.

INTERURBAN CARS CRASH ON CURVE

MONROE, Mich., Sept. 3.—Nine persons were killed and 19 injured, 10 of them seriously, when two interurban passenger cars met head-on half a mile north of the Monroe city limits yesterday afternoon. Among the dead is one Canadian, William A. Rooney, 145 Randolph Avenue, Sandwich, Ont.

The wreck occurred on a 2,000-foot curve. The motorman of the southbound interurban, which left Detroit city limits at 12.45 p.m., is said by officials to have overrun Pine Siding, one mile north of Monroe, the scheduled meeting place of the two interurbans. A half mile south of the siding the southbound car crashed on the curve into the car travelling from Toledo to Detroit. Each car was travelling about 40 miles an hour, and the impact telescoped each car about half its length.

State police, aided by members of the Sheriff's force, went to the scene soon after the crash and assisted in removing the dead and injured. It was reported that several passengers were pinned beneath the wreckage. In addition to those seriously injured, a number were badly shaken up and cut by broken glass.

An investigation into the cause of the wreck was begun immediately. An effort will be made to learn why the motorman of the southbound car failed to stop at Pine Siding, as his orders read. The bodies of the dead and the injured persons had been removed from the wreck an hour after the accident.

WINS SCHOLARSHIP

Former Peterboro Girl is Successful in K. of C. Competition.

The name of Miss Mary M. Derocher, formerly of Peterboro is listed among those awarded the Knights of Columbus of Ontario annual scholarships, open for competition among Catholic students of the Province who write the middle (junior matriculation) examinations set by the Department of Education, announced in Ottawa this week. These scholarships, eight of which are awarded annually, have a value of $100 a year during the currency of the university course chosen by the successful student.

DOMINIONS PAY WAY.

Object To Mother Country Paying Imperial Conference Expenses.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(Canadian Press).—It is understood that the expenses of representatives of the dominions and of India attending the Imperial Conference are borne by the British government. On the last occasion there was a feeling among them that their own treasuries should bear the cost, and it is possible that the matter may be definitely raised during the forthcoming conference. The impulse in this direction, it must be added, comes entirely from the dominions.

OTTAWA CITIZEN OFFICIAL WINNER OF KING'S MEDAL

Corp. Livingstone of Governor-General's Foot Guards Captures Prize.

SECOND TIME.

This Match Is Supreme Test For Canadian Army Tests.

OTTAWA, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press)—Corp. W. J. Livingstone, Governor - Generals' Foot Guards' marksman, of Ottawa, captured the King's medal competition for the second time since its inauguration, four years ago, at the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association meet at South March last month it was revealed in delayed returns released here yesterday. This second victory will give Corp. Livingston a bar to the King's medal he won in 1924.

The team prize in the King's medal competition also goes to the C.G.F.G., the triumphant team having been composed of Corp. W. J. Livingston, Sergt. K. McGregor, Lieut. Desmond T. Burke, (G.M., and Lieut. H. W. Bishop. The team prize is a trophy presented by Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, G.C.B., corps commander of the Canadian forces in the Great War.

Supreme Test

The King's medal match, formerly the medal for the best shot in the army, is an active service competition. Every type of firing, deliberate, rapid and snap shooting is done. The match is the supreme test of an army rifleman, although entries are usually small. But one prize is awarded in the match. Only members of a unit of his majesty's forces who are actively serving are eligible.

Corp. Livingston was in the money in the governor-general's and Macdonald Brier matches, but did not make this year's Bisley team.

MAKE PRESENTATION.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 3. — On Tuesday evening about sixty ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. Charles Grylls, Regent Street, to present Miss Mayme Brown with a miscellaneous shower. Mrs. S. S. Spence gave a very brief speech, assuring the bride-elect of the good wishes of the ladies for her happiness, present and future. There is double pleasure in the event, for the bride and groom are going to remain in the village as residents. As a token of affectionate regard the ladies beg your acceptance of these gifts. Two large baskets heaped with parcels of all sizes and shapes were carried in by Misses Isabel Brown and Ruth Northey (sister of the bride and neice of the groom respectively. Miss Jean Erskine assisted the bride-elect in opening the parcels, which contained a varied assortment of gifts, all useful for the various departments of the new home—kitchen, dining room, living room and boudoir.

After the gifts were all opened, Miss Brown gracefully thanked her friends for their gifts and the kindly feeling which prompted them. The remainder of the evening was spent in social intercourse, the ladies dispersing about 10 o'clock with renewed felicitations to the bride-elect.

An old resident of the village passed away in Peterborough this week in the person of John Craig, who for years was the proprietor of tthe Lakefield House, and who made, during his residence, many warm friends in Lakefield who will sincerely regret his death. His genial nature and generous hospitality made him an outstanding figure in the community.

The Public Library will be open for changing of books on Friday evening, September 10th.

NOT IN CELLAR.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—David Lloyd George's full-length portrait was not removed from the walls of the National Liberal Club in London, as was reported in the British press.

Years ago the pictures of Winston Churchill and Lloyd George rested for a long time in the basement of the former club building, and this fact is supposed to have given rise to the report that the latter's portrait had again gone to the cellar.

KING ADDRESSES CONSTITUENTS OF A. J. DOUCET

Discusses Record of His Administration, Promising Continuance.

CHARGE 'LUDICROUS.'

RICHIBUCTO, N.B., Sept. 3. — (Canadian Press). — Speaking in Kent constituency, the riding of A. J. Doucet, the former Conservative member who has come into prominence in connection with the allegations concerning the Hon. Ernest Lapointe and the launch Margaret, Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, last night declared that he would not take up arms against Mr. Doucet. He said he had never made a personal attack upon a member of Parliament yet, and did not intend to do so now.

The record of the last Government, said Mr. King, gave assurance to the people of faithful administration, if the Liberal party was returned, as well as a continuance of the prosperity which, he said, had been brought to Canada within recent years.

The same old Tory cry of disloyalty, which had defeated reciprocity, he said, was being raised again. He declared it was only for the purpose of misleading the people and obscuring the real issues and the record of Liberal government.

"You wouldn't hear anything today of maritime rights if Sir Wilfrid Laurier had secured for this country the right of reciprocal trade with the country to the south," said Mr. King.

Mr. King concluded with his appeal on the so-called constitutional question, declaring that the charge of resignation to avoid censure was "ludicrous."

"If we are going to be a self-governing Dominion, then the Ministry must be the body which advices the Governor-General, just as the advice of the Ministry is accepted by the King in Great Britain," he declared.

NO STOCK JOBBING IN C.N.R. AGREEMENT

Sir Henry Drayton Issues Statement About Debenture Settlement.

OTTAWA, Sept. 3.— "This settlement has been reached without any possibility of stock-jobbing," remarked Sir Henry Drayton, acting Prime Minister and former Minister of Railways for Canada, commenting on the settlement of the Grand Trunk Pacific debenture stock dispute announced from London. If the proposal of the former Government in the last session of Parliament had been accepted, said Sir Henry, companies in the Canadian National Railways system would have been authorized to issue substituted securities, guaranteed by the Canadian Government, to retire the existing obligations, without further reference to the Canadian Parliament. This would have meant public speculation in the stocks affected and a marked appreciation in their price, said Sir Henry. The Conservatives, then in opposition, objected for that reason, he added, and as a result "the proper business course was followed, the matter was left in the hands of gentlemen of the highest probity and a settlement was reached without any possibility of stock-jobbing. The arrangement that has been entered into must be submitted to the Canadian Parliament."

Sir Henry's statement follows:

"The introductory paragraph of the Canadian Press despatch from London dealing with the settlement of the dispute concerning the Grand Trunk Pacific perpetual debenture stock, is somewhat confusing, and may lead to misunderstandings. It states that this debenture stock "was classed as worthless by the Royal Commission which some years ago valued the Grand Trunk property for the Canadian Government."

"The writer of the despatch appears to confuse the report of the Royal Commission of Railways and Transportation of 1916, generally known as the Drayton-Ackworth report, with the findings of the Board of Arbitration of 1921, which dealt with the value, if any, of the Grand Trunk preference and common shares. Neither of these bodies classed as worthless the public investment in Grand Trunk Pacific debentures referred to. The Royal Commission dealt with the Canadian Railway situation generally and recommended the acquisition of the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk properties under an arrangement which would have relieved the Grand Trunk of its liabilities in respect to the Grand Trunk Pacific. The recommendations of the Drayton-Ackworth report afterwards formed the basis of the offer of the Canadian Government to the Grand Trunk English Board. Under its terms shareholders of Grand Trunk, excepting the common, on which no dividend had ever been paid, would have received a dividend in perpetuity, and the government would have assumed all obligations of the Grand Trunk Pacific, including the Grand Trunk Pacific debentures which are the subject of the agreement which has now been reached.

"The Grand Trunk Board declined this offer of Canadian government and the Grand Trunk Pacific was afterwards permitted by the Grand Trunk to go into receivership, where it still is. Afterwards a different arrangement was made with respect to the acquisition of the Grand Trunk. Under it the Grand Trunk guaranteed stock was included with the bonded indebtedness, interest on which was guaranteed in perpetuity by Canada, but the value, if any, of the preference and common stock was referred to a board of arbitrators representing both parties. It was not the majority members of this Board who declared the Grand Trunk preference and common shares to be worthless. No question as to the value of the Grand Trunk Pacific 4 per cent. perpetual debentures was before either the Royal Commission or the Board of Arbitration.

"Up to the date of the abandonment of the Grand Trunk Pacific by the Grand Trunk, interest on the Grand Trunk Pacific debenture stock referred to had been paid out of moneys advanced by the government for other purposes. When government ordered its loans to be devoted to meeting operating deficits instead of interest charges, the Grand Trunk stood aside and no interest was paid on the Grand Trunk debenture stock from that date, March, 1919. After the Grand Trunk acquired the Grand Trunk Pacific, debenture stockholders, who had invested 35 million dollars in the Grand Trunk's western venture, clamored for the payment of their interest. The road was in receivership; there was no guarantee of interest by the government and the only protection afforded the debenture stockholders was a conditional guarantee of the Grand Trunk proper. The condition attached was that the interest should be paid by the Grand Trunk if and when that road had net surplus earnings available. The road has required very heavy borrowings for rehabilitation ever since it was taken over.

"Interest requirements of these new borrowings have helped postpone the possibility of the debenture stockholders receiving benefit from the Grand Trunk conditional guarantee. This led to a fresh dispute as to whether the interest charges on the new borrowings should rank ahead of the Grand Trunk Pacific's claims against the Grand Trunk for interest under the conditional guarantee. The settlement avoids a continuation of this dispute within a dispute. It avoids also a great deal of expensive accounting and nuisance bookkeeping as between Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific; it should facilitate the ending of the receivership and the administration of Grand Trunk Pacific affairs in normal fashion instead of through the Exchequer court. It avoids necessity for Parliament to continue to vote $2,400,000 of interest annually for Grand Trunk guarantee stock which, being junior to the Grand Trunk Pacific debentures, could not be paid out of Grand Trunk earnings while the Grand Trunk Pacific debenture interest remained unpaid.

"The settlement also will no doubt have an appreciable beneficial effect in British financial circles where the uncertain position of this particular investment has led to adverse and to a certain extent quite unfounded criticism. There should however be no confusion in the public mind between the Grand Trunk Pacific debenture stock and the Grand Trunk preference and common stocks. These are vastly different matters and stand in entirely different positions.

"This issue has been under actual consideration for some time ,and the advisability of a fair and amicable settlement generally agreed on by all conversant with it. During the last session of the House a resolution was presented by the then Minister of Railways, Hon. Mr. Dunning, the effect of which would have been to enable the companies in the sytsem to issue substituted securities to be guaranteed by the governor-in-council for the purpose of retiring any existing obligations. This resolution if adopted and followed by proper legislation, as was contemplated, would have enabled the agreement that has been arrived at to be put through without further parliamentary action.

"It was objected to, not because a settlement of the difficulty concerning the debentures would not have been a good thing but because that question having been discussed, the advisability of making some arrangement in connection with the securities being before the public, the passage of such an act would simply have made a marked apreciation in the price of the securities. The then opposition felt that the Act therefore should not be passed.

"It was not. Instead of this being done, the proper business course was followed, and the matter left in the hands of gentlemen of the highest probity, and a settlement reached without any possibility of stock-jobbing. As a result, the arrangement that has been entered into must be submitted to the Canadian Parliament."

MARSHAL CHANG CHINESE 'CZAR'

Manchurian War Lord Has Never Heard of 'Inalienable Rights.'

HAS NO CABINET

HUDKEN, Manchuria, Sept. 3.—"The foreign point of view regarding Chinese generals is very fickle," said the director of Chinese affairs of the Japanese Foreign Office at Tokio, discussing the tangled political situation at Pekin. "Only a short time ago the Americans, British and French were saying that Chang Tso-lin in Manchuria was nothing but a bandit. Now they are saying that he is a great man and the savior of Asia from the menace of Bolshevism."

Mr. Chang, or Marshal Chang as he entitles himself, is the war lord who for more than 10 years has ruled this amazingly fertile and attractive corner of the Asiatic continent, after the fashion of a true Oriental depot. His sole grant of power is the strength of his sword. He is rather unique among autocrats in that he does not claim any divine mandate to rule and those who know him best say that he is utterly contemptuous of any suggestion that the 20,000,000 people under his dictation are possessed of inalienable rights.

He makes no pretense of parliamentary form. He doesn't have even so much as a cabinet. His government is single-handed and complete within itself. There are aides, of course, generals who carry out his military commands and civil administrators to collect taxes and perform other functions essential to the most rudimentary government, but little attention is paid to form or titles. The government is Chang and Chang alone. All others are merely Chang's underlings, subject to have their heads cut off on the merest fiat of the master.

Primitive Vote.

Altogether the most interesting feature of the Mukden government is its primitive simplicity. Here is a province that certainly rates among the richest in the world. All around Mukden for a distance of many miles stretch plains of rich black earth. It is a country for all the world like Iowa with the same levelness, the same wealth of soil and perfection of climate. Mukden's history dates back for many centuries, but except for some dilapidated castles and shrines which do not play any part whatever in its work-a-day life, it is a modern city with broad and well paved streets, brick buildings and extensive railroad sidings and warehouses . Manchuria is the food supply house of Asia and Mukden is its business centre. Yet in the heart of this economic beehive sits an Oriental satrap, as despotic, as picturesque, as ruthless in his methods as any ruler of ancient Persia.

SCHOOL CHILDREN WILL GET PRIZES

Will Exhibit Flowers and Vegetables Grown From Seed Distributed.

A. J. Madill, chairman of the committee in charge of the junior competition for the prizes offered by the Horticultural Society, announces that preparations are now complete for this section of the floral and vegetable exhibits at the big Fair. A special table has been reserved for both classes, and entries are to be made on Saturday, September 11, at R. Denne's store, and the flowers and vegetables brought to the show grounds on Tuesday morning, September 14. The boys and girls have been taking good care of their gardens, and it is expected that a large number of exhibits will be brought in for the competition. Six prizes in each class mean nice honors for a good number, and a little cash for spending money besides.

The prizes for each class are: 50 cents, 30 cents, 20 cents and three of 10 cents.

The classes are:

Vegetables.

Best collection of 6 carrots.
Best collection of 6 beets.
Best collection of 6 onions.
Best collection of 3 turnips.

Flowers.

Best 6 asters.
Best 6 marigolds.
Best 6 zinnia.
Best bouquet of nasturtiums.

FAREWELL PARTY.

Mrs. A. Lloyd Is Returning To England This Month.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. Marshall were the host and hostess at a farewell party given to bid good-bye to Mrs. A. Lloyd, who is returning to England after a three months' visit in this city with her son, Mr. Walter Lloyd. During the evening Mr. Alfred Marshall delighted the company with a number of songs, and little Phyllis Pink danced the Highland Fling, with Miss Margaret Flowers at the piano. The "Blue Bird" orchestra, consisting of Messrs. H. Childerhouse, J. Marshall, L. Chapman and P. Mowry, played the music for dancing. Delightful refreshments were served by the hostess during the evening, and dancing was indulged in until midnight. The guests, numbering about thirty-five, all joined in wishing Mrs. Lloyd a safe and pleasant voyage. Mrs. Lloyd sails on the S.S. Melita on September 8th from Montreal.

Daily Short Story

DONALD'S WAGER

When Donald Nash and Tom Hayes left college they felt convinced that there were enough lawyers, architects, doctors and engineers in the world. Donald and Tom decided they'd be merchants, so they got together what little money they had, borrowed a good deal more and bought a small department store in a small but highly promising young town.

The fact that neither had had any practical experience in store management did not seem to either to be a handicap. Both Donald and Tom were full of bright ideas.

"Something's got to be done about the returned goods evil," observed Tom one morning across the broad table that served as a desk for both. "It's getting worse and worse. A woman brought back a bottle of perfume that she had opened and used yesterday because she didn't like the smell. The fellow at the desk let her get away with it. Then the Browns bought a fine dinner set used it for that big dinner party they gave last week and then brought it back because they had decided they didn't like the shape of the soup plates. That fellow at the desk—hasn't got the backbone of a gum drop."

"It wouldn't do to be too strict about returning goods," reasoned Donald. "The Browns are good customers. We don't want to get them angry."

"That's just it," Tom agreed emphatically. "We want someone handling that department that can be fair and accommodating without being a door mat. We want a diplomat—that's what we want."

"Suppose you try it yourself," suggested Donald with a grin, which was lost on Tom, who replied that he rather thought he'd like to try.

"All right, it's a go," from Donald. "You take charge of the return goods for two or three weeks and if in that time you haven't been completely hoodwinked by some smooth-tongued damsel, I'll owe you a new spare tire."

So it was that among Tom's various other duties as partner in the growing young department store was that of looking after the returned goods. Tom had a soothing and persuasive voice and managed far better than his predecessor had.

One day one of the millinery saleswomen brought a fair young customer to Tom. She was carrying a large hat box which contained a wide-brimmed summer hat discreetly trimmed with two enormous roses. It had been one of the most expensive hats ever sold in that millinery department., But the hat had been worn, not only just worn but worn in the rain.

"What is your reason for wishing to return the merchandise?" asked Tom, trying not to look too intently into the violet eyes.

"It isn't becoming," said the girl plaintively. "Not the least little bit becoming."

"But the hat has been worn," said Tom.

"Yes," agreed the girl. "The shower came up quite unexpectedly and we were a mile from home. You see I wore the hat thinking it was becoming but a girl can't be happy in a hat that is unbecoming."

"But it wasn't our fault," explained Donald.

The girl brightened. "Oh, yes it was, really. The girl that sold it—not this one—she's out now—said it was most becoming."

Donald said that the line of argument was most absurd.

"So you mean that I must go on wearing that hat when it is so dreadfully unbecoming?" She dabbed her violet eyes with a little handkerchief and then began softly to cry. At that Donald told the young saleswoman that he would not need her further. She departed and he was left alone in his office with the weeping beauty.

Finally after a half hour interview Tom was beside himself. He felt vague desires to kiss the violet eyes and wipe away the tears. Moreover he was resolved that he would allow the hat to be returned.

"Come, you are quite upset," he said at length. "let me take you back to your home. I have my car outside. And perhaps I'd better tell you," he added happily. "I am going to refund your money for that hat. I have often told the saleswomen not to tell women things are becoming when they are not. That is bad salesmanship."

The girl asked to be taken to a certain hotel, the largest hotel in the town. She bade him adieu without asking him to stop and he promised her to see that her money was refunded the next day if she would call at his office.

The millinery salesgirl who had brought in the young lady reported the case to Donald. She thought it was down-right idiotic taking that hat back, she did. So Donald faced Tom a few days later with the facts and told him he owed him a spare tire.

"Maybe I do," said Tom sheepishly. "But it was worth it—worth a whole set of spares and the car thrown in. Donald, my boy, I'm going to marry that girl——"

"Great Scott," cried Donald. "Well, I'm blessed!" Then Donald explained. After having made the wager with his partner Donald decided to make sure that he, Donald, should win. So he arranged with the young and pretty sister of his own fiancee to play the game, to weep and finally to make him yield. "She said she rather liked you," said Donald, "but dear me, I had no idea you were such a ladies' man as that."

CONSIDER LAST RESERVATION

Conference President Hints at Way To Avoid Difficulty With League.

HOPE TO SATISFY.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press). —Representatives of the thirty-eight countries holding membership in the Permanent Court of International Justice resumed discussion today of the fifth and last reservations attached to the United States a herences to the Court. The reservation requires the consent of the United States to action by the Council of the League of Nations in seeking advisory opinions from the Court on a question "in which the United States has or claims an interest."

Before adjournment was taken late this afternoon, President Van Eysinga, summing up, emphasized the unanimous desire of the delegates to satisfy the United States and hoped this would be appreciated on the other side of the Atlantic. He hinted that a practical way out of the difficulty would be for the Council to ask a body of jurists instead of the World Court for advisory opinions in the future.

SEEKS DRY VOTE.

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 2.—(CP) —Mrs. Ela A. Boole, national president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, has started the 600,000 women of her organization on a general campaign to ensure a 100 per cent dry registration and a 100 per cent dry vote in November. The plans comprise the greatest dry activity by the women of the country ever seen, not even excepting the crusading days, preceding the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act.

FOOD SUPPLY ENDANGERED

Year 1927 Predicted As Poor Crop Year in Both Hemispheres.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press). — Herbert Janvrin Brown, long range weather forecaster of Washington, still holds to to his predictions that weather conditions during the next two crop seasons in the Northern and Southern Hemisphere may endanger the world's food supply. Writing in protest to The Boston Globe against misinterpretation of his remarks, he went into detailed explanation as follows:

"No one has made any forecast that either this year or next would be 'summerless.' For three years past I have made forecasts that the crop season of 1926-1927 in the Southern Hemisphere and the crop season of 1927 in the Northern Hemisphere would witness a return of conditions in 1816, the historically famous 'year without a summer'."

"I have forecasted repeatedly that the crop conditions in the two Hemispheres, as above outlined, will be so seriously affected by abnormal weather as to endanger the food supply of the world. That means violent swings from heat to cold, from drought to floods. It means wrong weather at the wrong time, and yet the so-called 'averages' of temperature and rainfall could be normal."

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Parks Have Been Married Twenty Years.

A pleasant evening was spent in the W.O.W. Hall on Wednesday evening, celebrating the 20th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Parks. The evening was spent in dancing, community singing and cards. The music was supplied by Mrs. Fenwick and Mrs. Foster. Refreshments were served. There were about fifty present, and Mr. and Mrs. Parks received many pretty and useful gifts. Mrs. Parks was also given a bouquet of gladioli by Mrs. A. Spencely.

KRIM DECLARES SPAIN UNABLE TO TAKE RIFF

Seeds of Hatred Have Been Sown By Cruel Methods of War.

TELLS REASONS.

Entered War To Prevent French From Capturing Some Territory.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—Abd-el-Krim, (Copyright, 1926, by United Press) defeated Riffian leader, now en route to a life exile on the lonely Reunion Island off the African coast, declared in a final interview before leaving Morocco that he believed the Spanish forces could never conquer the Riff. The interview with the United Press correspondent at Casa Blanca, Morocco, was mailed to the Paris office of the United Press, due to censorship, and received in Paris today. It follows:

"I started the war in the Riff because the French were advancing to occupy the territory of the Beni-Zerual tribe," Abd-el-Krim told the United Press here on the eve of beginning his voyage of exile to Reunion Island. "If I had permitted the advance, it would have brought revolution in the Riff and I would have been deposed.

"In March, 1925, my brother Mohammed was at Che-Chowen, where he learned of the French plans. The tribes demanded my aid. The Beni-Zerual chieftain Ali-Ben Abd-Esselem came to see me at Adjir and explained the situation. Then he returned to his tribe and started the holy war.

"After that, I was no longer master of the situation."

Telling of his campaign, in which he held out against European forces of overwhelming odds, he said he "certainly intended to capture Fez," but intended to remain only a few days for the moral effect of the move.

Krim denied the persistent reports that he received aid from abroad in the campaign, "except for medical supplies from Italy and England."

"The Moslems of Egypt promised 30,000 pounds, but it was never received," he said.

"The French newspapers talked of numerous foreigners visiting me. The only persons who came were a couple of journalists and two Italian Deputies of whom one, a Communist, wanted to sell me airplanes."

Krim said that it was due to his brother's advice that he refused to accept the generous peace conditions offered by the French before the Oudja conference.

The fallen chieftain had accepted exile stoically. He expressed profound gratitude to Commander Steeg of the French forces, who, on his surrender, received him with military honors and treated him as an enemy worthy of respect. "The Spaniards will never conquer the Riff," he declared.

"They have sown the seeds of everlasting hatred by bombardments of villages and the use of poisonous gas."

PIERCE EARS.

Large Pendant Ear Rings Return With Shingled Heads.

The pierced ear vogue has come back in London. Shingling is responsible as it brought the ear out of its hiding place and this led to a return of large pendant ear rings. The weight of these pendants, if screwed on, would cause disfigurement of the ear lobes, therefore ear piercing has been revived.

HELD FLOWER SHOW.

MADOC, Sept. 3.—A most successful flower show was held on Saturday last in the Armouries under the auspices of the Madoc Horticultural Society. The officers and members of the Society are receiving many felicitations on the large showing of exquisite blooms.

The officers are: President, Gavin Wallbridge; vice-preseident, G. H. Gillespie; sec.-treas., Miss I. M. Breakell, and the committee in charge were: Mrs. Wickham, Mrs. F. L. Nickle and Miss Myrtle Smith.

Among the many beautiful flowers the gladioli were conspicuous for their beauty and size. Many varieties were exhibited, especially deserving of notice being the White Giant, Prince of Wales, Crimson Glow, Orange Glory, Purple Glory, White and Red Emperors. It is a matter of congratulation that the greater number of these flowers were grown from bulbs given as premiums by the society. Besides the named varieties there were also some wonderful collections of unnamed gladioli. Two of the first prize gladioli, White Giant and Prince of Wales, were from the garden of the president, Mr. G. Wallbridge.

Very large, fine pansies, grown by Frank Dafoe, attracted much attention as did the unusually fine petunias from Miss May Connor's garden. A remarkable display of Tuberous Begonians in hues of yellow, scarlet and orange were shown by Misses I. M. Breakell, J. Mackintosh and Mrs. J. Robertson, while Miss Breakell also had the distinction of showing the only gloxinia, a very fine purple and white specimen. Not as many dahlias were exhibited as usual, but a large number of roses were there in all the glory of their varied and rich colourings.

Those who kindly acted as judges were: Mr. Belsher, president of Stirling Horticultural Society and Mrs. Countryman, secretary of the Tweed Horticultural Society, who represented their president, Mr. Meiklejohn.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's father, disillusioned by a faithless wife, warns him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time, envied by all men, adored by all women. Even Lucretia Borgia, at the peak of her infamous rule, desires to meet him. Meanwhile, powerful Duke Margoni surprises his wife in Juan's rooms; but Juan shows the Duke that his own beloved, Imperia, is also hidden there.

Utterly bewildered, he faced Juan, his anger quite gone.

"Your lovely wife has discovered your—affection, shall we say?—for Imperia," murmured Juan. "She sent messages to you both to come here—"

Juan paused, and the Duke shook his head, uncomprehendingly.

"Then she came herself, in order to catch you together," Juan continued. "I have done my poor best to protect you."

Helplessly Margoni looked from the bedroom door to the one behind whose hangings Imperia was concealed. Then back to Juan. For the first time in his whole domineering life he was completely at a loss.

Juan nodded toward the small door leading to the garden, then led him over to it, and indicated the way through the garden to the street. Gratefully Margoni nodded to him and took his departure. Juan watched until the high gate of delicately wrought iron had closed behind the Duke, then came back into the house, a curious little smile twisting his lips. Pedrillo, coming in from the bedroom, looked at him in admiration.

"Master, your skill—" he began, impulsively; then, in response to Juan's "The Ladies?" went on, 'They have gone, my lord."

Juan shrugged his shoulders, and turned to one of the massive chairs that had been sent to him from his home in Spain when he decided to stop in Rome for a time. But before he had settled into it there was a clamor from without, a pounding on the door, that brought him to his feet again. Pedrillo answered it, fully expecting another woman or another angry man to face him but instead saw only a messenger in the magnificent livery of the Borgias.

The messenger strode across the room to Juan and held out a parchment to him but Juan made no move to take it. Pedrillo held out his hand for it then but Juan caught the man's wrist in a grip like iron and shook his head. To the messenger he said "Put it down" and nodded to the messenger to leave.

To Pedrillo returning after showing the man out he explained:

Parchment is sometimes poisoned—and a message from a Borgia must be handled with care. 'Tis possible that I have robbed the great Cesare of a favorite lady—by some delightful accident."

And, picking up a knife with delicately wrought Toledo blade, he opened the parchment, without touching it with his fingers. Still holding it with the knife blade, he bent to read the invitation to a ball in the palace of the Borgias, which Lucretia had ordered sent to him after the incident of the monkey and the lingerie, and her cousin's subtle challenge to her.

A gesture to Pedrillo, and a list of his engagements for the day of the ball was laid on the table. He glanced down it. One woman's name followed another. Niki, Drusilla, La Nina, the lovely blonde girl who wore green, Mavia, Constantia, each had her hour. The mystery of the girl in green had won for her an extra hour, from shortly before sunset till some time after the day would have slipped into night behind the hills of Rome.

For an instant he hesitated, then caught up a pen and ran it through the list. Lucretia Borgia—it might be amusing to match his own lawlessness against hers.

Don Juan was probably the only man in Rome who could feel amusement and mild curiosity at the thought of attending a social function at the command of the Borgias. The guests who assembled in the lofty ceilinged, beautifully panelled room where Lucretia and her brother received could not be sure, any one of them, that before the evening was over death, summoned by the lovely blonde woman or her saturnine brother, would not have ended their lives. For the Borgias knew ways of calling death that were so subtle that they could hardly be detected. And when one hardly dares eat or drink or touch anything, or venture too near a heavy curtain or a pannelled wall, or out onto a balcony to enjoy the moonlight, it is difficult to seem at ease.

Most of the guests concealed their fears admirably. But the Lady Adriana Della Varnese, arriving with her father was too young and too unsophisticated to do so. A blast on a silver trumpet preceded the announcement of their arrival, and Adriana, standing an instant in the doorway, was as pale as the moon-white satin that clung to her slender body, as colorless as the pearls wound about her delicate throat.

She even drew back for an instant, as she faced the throng of those who had been summoned by the Borgias, and who were wondering, as their eyes dwelt on the girl's beauty, how it had come to pass that the Varneses, sworn adherents of the Borgias' foes, were this night present in the Borgias' palace.

Had any of them looked at Donati just then and noted the greedy, covetous expression on his face they would immediately have ceased to wonder. Standing close to Lucretia, his eyes devouring Adriana's youthful loveliness, unconsciously he drew in his breath so sharply that Lucretia turned and looked at him, then glanced amusedly at her brother. For Giano Donati to lose his heart as any schoolboy might have done!

"A charming bride for you, Giano," she murmured, touching his arm lightly. "And when her father's great wealth is considered, as well as her beauty—do not lose time in demanding her in marriage."

He turned to her, shaking his head, knowing all too well what Varnese would think of such a proposal. Cesare laughed at him, dryly, wickedly.

"Nothing is impossible!" he told Donati. "An accident might befall the Duke—and you would win the girl, and we would add his fortune to our own. Life takes these little twists sometimes."

And he laughed again. "These little twists" always amused Cesare, and the crueler they were the more amusement he found in them. Accustomed though he was to the Borgias and their ways, Donati looked at him almost with awe. Unscrupulous himself, he felt like a child sitting at the feet of his masters when he saw the working of the Borgias' plans.

Moving toward them through the throng, Adriana drew back close to her father's side. She had not wanted to come, and now that she was there she would have given anything to be elsewhere. Trembling, she moved through the crowd, conscious of the glances of curiosity that followed her, but unaware of the sensation created by her beauty. Her father had said, when, just as they arrived, she made one last protest against coming, "The invitation was a command, and the Borgias are too powerful to be disobeyed."

'Women Use

Then dispose of this new hygienic help easily as tissue—no laundry

WOMEN by the millions are discarding the old-time "sanitary pad" for a new and scientific way.

A way that offers protection unknown before. A way, too, that solves the old embarrassment of disposal.

It is called "KOTEX." Eight in 10 better-class women now employ it.

You dine, dance, motor for hours in sheerest frocks without a second's doubt or fear.

It deodorizes, too. And thus ends ALL danger of offending.

You ask for it at any drug or department store, without hesitancy, simply by saying "KOTEX."

Do as millions are doing. End old, insecure ways. Enjoy life every day. Package of twelve costs only a few cents.

ALNWICK COUNCIL RAISES DOG TAX

Too Many Sheep Being Killed Is Reason For Increase.

ROSENEATH, Sept. 3. — The Alnwick Township Council met in the Town Hall, Roseneath, on Aug. 28, 1926. All the members were present. Reeve Harry Mouncey was in the chair.

Owing to the rapid increase in the killing of sheep by dogs through the township, the Council entered into a discussion of some length with a view to raising the tax on dogs. Up to the present time the dog tax has been one dollar and 25c for the tag. The Statutes of Ontario of 1918, chapter 46, section 3, provides for "an annual tax of at least two dollars for a dog." The Council decided to increase the tax.

Moved by Gordon Parker, seconded by Reeve Mouncey, that the Clerk write M. E. Maybee, ex-M.P., a letter of thanks for the map that he donated to the township.

Moved by Gordon Parker, seconded by Alfred Braithwaite, that Ernest Timlin be a committee to look over the bridge between Andrew Brown's and the school-house.

Moved by Ernest Timlin, seconded by Erwin Brown, that the Reeve sign orders on the Treasurer for the following amounts:

S. A. Tucker, making tile, $13.35; E. Crowe, 12 yards gravel, $1.20; Alfred Sherwin, repairing grader and cement moulds, $4.75; Robert Linton, grading, $6.30; Thomas Sandercock, damage to crop, $2.00; The Municipal World, supplies, $4.04; Sherwin Bros., welding, $3.25; Bruce Parker, work on road, $27.90; Bruce Parker, 60 yards of gravel, $6; Percy Parker, sheep killed and injured by dogs, $75; H. R. Mouncey, sheep killed by dogs, $25; Edwin Harvie, valuing sheep, $4.50; Wilfred Carew, sheep killed by dogs, $30.00; Edwin Harvie, valuing sheep, $1.50; Milton McMillan, opening gravel pit, $2.25; Wilfred Sunday, 160 yards gravel, $16; Henry Comego, 7 yards of gravel, 70c; Ernest Crowe, 4 yards gravel, 40c; Charles Grigg, taking affidavit, Chidley road, 50c; Alfred Braithwaite, committee work, $2; H. R. Mouncey, committee work, $2.

A bylaw was passed to levy rates for the year 1926. County rate, 7 8-10 mills; township rate, 6 2-10 mills; general school rate, 5 4-10 mills; School Section No. 1, 3 4-10 mills; School Section No. 4, 1 6-10 mills.

LADY CANDIDATE ACTIVE.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 3—(CP)—Miss Kathleen Bennett, nominated as Liberal candidate in Toronto East, is an active worker in the congregation of the Holy Name church, Danforth Avenue, and well known as a social service worker in the eastern section of the city for the past seven years.

From a woman standpoint, Miss Bennett said in a speech, the old-age pensions scheme was of supreme importance. "The wax-works chamber commonly called the Senate, with its Tory majority, voted out old-age pensions," she averred. As regards the constitutional issue, there would be no oft pedalling on it in Toronto East, as had been suggested by one of the Toronto newspapers, she said. Regarding the abolition of the Senate the men had said they could not get around it, Miss Bennett observed, but Miss McPhail had said, "Get rid of them." "And I am with Agnes," Miss Bennett concluded with a smile.

CHIFFON TAILLEURS.

The strictly tailored costume, either in one piece or in jumper style, of chiffon in white or delicate colors, is one of the contradictions of the mode that Paris and New York sponsor with enthusiasm.

Evening Examiner "IDEAL Fashions" by Jean Belle Hamilton

The Two-piece Frock is More Important Than Ever

This season the two-piece frock rules over a wider domain than ever, and on many days, the hours of its reign extend from morning to evening. Therefore, it must be practical, yet combine as well, a semi-formal charm for leisurely events. The model pictured here is a typical example of a sports costume that is smartly correct for either a morning of shopping, or an afternoon of bridge. The blouse slips on over the head and has a collar that may be worn buttoned high or turned back as illustrated. The front of the blouse has gathers at each shoulder and two patch pockets for adornment, the back being quite plain. The long set-in sleeves are gathered into tailored cuffs fastening with links. The string belt is a new detail and provides a soft bloused effect at the hip-line. Fulness in the skirt is attained by two box-plaits in the front. The Blouse, NO. 1347, is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 36 requires 2⅜ yards 36-inch figured material; ½ yard plain. Hurls Shoes Through Glass Saves People From Burning

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 2—(Canadian Press).—Taking off her sport shoes, a woman motorist hurled them through the parlor window of a house, thereby effectually waking a family who could not be aroused by calls and knocks, and who were in danger of being burned to death. This was at two o'clock in a Sunday morning; the motorist, passing, saw flames and smoke pouring from the rear of the house. Her quick thought saved a woman and four sons, who, escaped in their night clothes.

GOOD-BYE TO MAMIE

I ought to have been glad to get rid of Jerry Hathaway so easily, but I was not. Instead I, too, was ready to cry as I turned away from the telephone.

I had hardly hung up the receiver when the front doorbell jingled and in a few moments Mrs. Ryley came bouncing up stairs fairly bursting with excitement and curiosity.

"There's a wonderful car in front of our house and a man in uniform is at the door saying that the beautiful lady inside the car wants to know if you're ready to go with her, Judy."

She got all this out before she noticed that I was packed ready to leave.

"What's the matter here?" she asked quickly. "You and Mamie haven't had a spat, have you?"

"Mother," said Mamie, before I could answer, "Judy and I are better friends than ever, but she has had a splendid position offered her as companion to Miss Meredith and she is going to live in her home."

"It's too bad, Mamie Ryley, that yourself could not be landing one of these fine jobs," said her mother jealously. "You know you're getting little enough for your services in your present place.

Immediately I had a hunch, and before Mamie could speak, I said:

"Mrs. Ryley, I think I have a job for Mamie, as well as myself. There is a young society man in town who thinks he can write books and he wants a secretary."

"Well, you needn't get it for my daughter," said Mrs. Ryley, up in arms immediately. "I won't have a daughter of mine working around one of those writers. Why, I read in the paper last night that a man had used that very excuse to lure young girls to his room. Maybe it's the same man. Mamie can find her own jobs."

I smiled to myself as I thought my ruse did not work. I was trying to help Mamie out in her dilemma and had only made matters worse.

"Oh, mother, please don't pay so much attention to those sensational newspaper stories," cried Mamie, impatiently.

"I'm capable of taking care of my own affairs, if I weren't, God knows I wouldn't be here now."

"What's that shameful thing you are saying to your mother, Mamie Ryley? I've heard enough from you."

I said "good-bye" for I knew if Mrs. Ryley started, she'd keep it up indefinitely. I went down stairs hurriedly thinking that the mothers and daughters of today were as far apart as East and West.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

SIR WALTER RALEIGH AND ELIZABETH THROGMORTON

When the spinster Elizabeth was Queen of England and "Knighthood was in flower," Walter Raleigh, handsome, gallant and ambitious, one day spread his plush mantle over a puddle of mud for the queen to step upon, and became at once famous and rich. Elizabeth was both amazed and pleased at the novel, daring and quick wit of the young man, and out of all proportion to his services to England, she showered favor after favor upon him. Sir Walter Raleigh became one of England's heroes: a great explorer, a great soldier and a great patriot.

The manner of Raleigh's marriage to Elizabeth Throgmorton was in keeping with his romantic character. Elizabeth was one of the queen's maids of honor. Raleigh became enamoured of her; the couple loved too well and before long, the scandal broke and Sir Walter was recalled from an expedition. He was put in the Tower of London for his transgression and there he married the girl. This episode nearly ruined him; the queen was furious and jealous and would have none of him. But, strangely enough, his love for Elizabeth Throgmorton thrived on these adverse conditions and the couple were happy.

The following letter was written by Raleigh to his wife in those dark days when, imprisoned by James I., the successor to Queen Elizabeth, on charges of conspiracy, he was awaiting his execution.

"You shall now receive, dear wife, my last words in these last lines. My love I send you, that you may keep it when I am dead; and my counsel that you may remember it when I am no more. I would not by my will present you with sorrows, dear Bess; let them go to the grave and be buried with me in dust. And seeing it is not the will of God that I shall ever see you more in this life, bear it patiently, and with a heart like thyself.

"Firstly, I send you all the thanks my heart can conceive, or my words can express, for your many troubles and cares taken for me, which, though they have not taken effect as you wished, yet the debt is nathless, and pay it I never shall in this world.

"Secondly, I beseech you by the love you bear me living, do not hide yourself in grief many days, but seek to help the miserable fortunes of our poor child. Thy mourning cannot avail me; I am but dust . . . It is time to separate my thoughts from the world. By my dead body which living is denied thee, and either lay it at Sherbourne or in Exeter, by my father and mother. I can write no more. Time and death call me away.

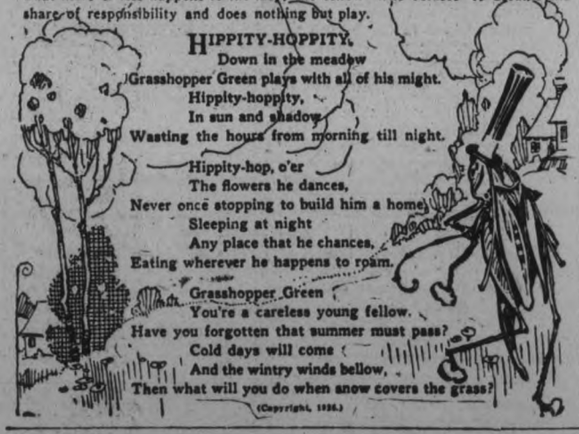
"The everlasting God, Infinite, Powerful, Inscrutable, the Almighty God, which is Goodness itself, Mercy itself; the true light and life—keep thee and thine, have mercy on me and teach me to forgive my persecutors and false witnesses, and send us to meet again in his Glorious Kingdom. My own true wife, farewell. Bless my poor boy. Pray for me and let the good God fold you both in His arms. Written with the dying hand of sometime thy husband, but now, alas overthrown. Your that was, but not now thy own,

W. Raleigh."

Grasshopper Green

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE grasshopper affords an impressive lesson of what happens to the parasite in insectdom. He does absolutely nothing to warrant his existence. He builds no nest or house, lays by no store for life's "rainy days." He never works, but idles his life away in the summer season. When the wintry days come, he has neither home nor hoard and must perish with the frost. He's a drastic example of what more or less happens to the lazy, idle fellow who refuses to assume his share of responsibility and does nothing but play.



HIPPITY-HOPPITY,
Down in the meadow
Grasshopper Green plays with all of his might.
Hippity-hoppity,
In sun and shadow
Wasting the hours from morning till night.

Hippity-hop, o'er
The flowers he dances,
Never once stopping to build him a home;
Sleeping at night
Any place that he chances,
Eating wherever he happens to roam.

Grasshopper Green
You're a careless young fellow.
Have you forgotten that summer must pass?
Cold days will come
And the wintry winds bellow,
Then what will you do when snow covers the grass?

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1926

Astrologers read this as rather an unfortunate day in planetary government. The Moon, Mercury and Jupiter are in adverse aspect.

There is a sign of much promise for those who seek employment of any sort and political activities should be lucky. Many new avenues are to open to persons trained in the arts and again theatres come under a good direction.

Under this aspect there may be a tendency to losses through oil or shipping interests. Unusual events may cause surprising developments in certain lines of commerce.

This is a time to be especially careful of the diet; fevers of various sorts may be prevalent.

Venus today is in an aspect most encouraging to women who should make plans for their year's work in public affairs.

Love affairs should flourish while this configuration prevails, but there is likely to be too great indifference to practical matters among those who become engaged or marry.

Weddings today give promise of long life in which there will be more domestic harmony than money interest.

This is not a lucky day for any sort of business initiative and important matters should be postponed.

Saturn is in an aspect presaging serious labor troubles and there is indication that workers will gain their demands in many cases.

Education comes under an auspicious rule making for great increase in college enrollments and important extensions of interest.

Again the seers warn those past middle age that this is a new era in which they must accept changes in ideals and customs. Only they who conform can expect success.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be careful in all economic matters in the coming year which may bring unusual experiences.

Children born on this day are likely to be strong-willed and determined to follow their own bents. Many of these subjects of Virgo have great mechanical talents.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

According to ancient legend, all misgivings vanish before the chrysolite, today's talismanic stone. The superstition arises from the association of the stone with the sun, before whose rays the powers of darkness and the vague terrors of night are put to rout.

The ruby, symbol of bodily strength, should be worn today by those whose birth anniversary it is, for they will require all the vitality which the gem can give to combat certain menacing elements which prevail today.

Green is today's color. To wear it promises a change that will be both happy and profitable.

Violet is the flower prescribed for wear on this day.

Tell her every druggist has it in sugar-coated tablet form now so that in just a few weeks she can help you get back your appetite—make your body stronger—your feet nimble and your mind keener.

Tell her that McCoy's Cod Liver Extract tablets are chock-full of vitalizing vitamines and are the greatest flesh producers and health builders she can find.

One sickly thin kid, age 9, gained 12 pounds in 7 months.

She must ask the Harris Drug Store, McDermid & Jury, Jas. Lynch, Bond's Drug Store or any good druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets—60 tablets—60 cents—as pleasant to take as candy.

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

EVELINA

The feminine names beginning with "Eve" are legion, yet each, curiously, is a separate name and possesses a different meaning. Eva, for instance, signifies life, while Evelyn means hazelnut, and Evelina or Eveline, is translated "pleasant."

Eveline made its appearance among the Normans before the marriage of the Earl of Pembroke. Aveline, said to be its equivalent, was the name of the sister of Gunnar, the great-grandmother of William the Conqueror. The Lady of the Garde Doulourеuse in the "Betrothed" was called Eveline.

Aveline seems to have been more popular than its equivalent in early times, since old chronicles record more instances of the former name than the latter. The wife of the last Earl of Lancaster was called Avelina de Longo Campo. Her daughter, Eveline, was heiress to the great county of Lancaster.

Before Miss Burney's popular novel presenting Evelina—a name which she herself invented as an elaborated form of Eveline—was published. Eveline had almost disappeared in England, but there was an immediate revival of the name. The new fashion of adding a final "a" was followed, of course, and Evelina was established in popularity for many years. Unfortunately for Evelina, the tendency was to confuse her with Evelyn, especially when the craze for names containing a "Y" made its appearance.

Evelina's talismanic gem is the agate. It promises her courage; guards her from danger, and cures insomnia, it is said. Thursday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number. The wild rose is her flower.

Today's Fashion By Vera Winston

This frock for the junior girl could really be adapted to any age, for its color and design bespeak the smart simplicity of the moment.

Soft crepella of an old blue shade is the material, while the waist is made with a bolero, balanced by panels at each side of the skirt.

The very effective embroidery is done in silver and black, with the black accented by matching grosgrain in ribbon used for the double belt and waist trimming.

Massey Harris Leads Toronto Session To-day

TORONTO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press) — Massey Harris was the active leader in a moderately active session of the Toronto Stock Exchange today in which prices inclined to strength. The common had a turnover of more than 1,100 shares and closed unchanged at 65 while the preferred gained one point to 99. International Nickle with a jump of 1 1-8 to 39 was also active.

Trading in Brazilian was light, the stock casing three-quarters to 115 5-8. Abitibi advanced 1 1-4 to 90 and Consolidated Smelters two points to 250. Mackay Common firmed one quarter to 134 1-4 and Canadian Pacific one point to 167. Page Hersy preferred was up one point to 102 and Gooderham and Worts new one quarter to 31. Imperial Oil was active, but unchanged at 37. Dominion Bank eased one half to 208.

Wheat Prices Firm Poor Harvest Weather

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press) — Wheat prices developed firmness today after a wavering start. Rains in Canada and the relatively steady tone of the Liverpool market tended to uphold values here. Opening unchanged to 1 1-4 off, Chicago wheat quotations rallied to above yesterday's finish with December leading the upturn. Corn, oats, and provisions were stronger, corn starting at 1-4 to 3-4 advance and subsequently gaining further.

Advices of unfavorable crop conditions in Europe received considerable notice among wheat traders.

With Alberta reported to be in the grip of one of the worst storms in thirty years, optimism as to the rapid progress of the harvest in Canada was a good deal tempered today. On the other hand, current reports continued to reflect confidence that the Canadian yield as a whole will be at least as good as exepcted.

Prices Are Weak To-day On Standard Mine Market

TORONTO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—Dome Mines declined 20 cents per share in the trading on the Standard Mining Exchange today. Hollinger also sold off 10 cents to 19.30, Lake Shore 5 to 14.55, McIntyre 5 to 25.90, and Wright Hargraves 6 to 8.60. Prices were inclined to weakness and the trading was only moderately active.

Gold Hill and Premier firmed 4 cents to 50 and 2.24 respectively, while Kirkland Lake and West Dome eased 1 cent to 1.12 and 20 1-2 respectively. Laval Quebec was up 1-2 to 26 1-2, while Tough Oakes was off 1-2 to 47 1-2, and Vipond 2 to 1.84. Amulet eased 3 cents to 1.36, Noranda 5 to 19.15, and Towagmac 2 to 3.21. In the silvers, Bellechellen eased 1-2 to 23, Keeley 2 to 1.58, and Bourlamaque 1 to 1.13. Capitol was up 1-2 to 38 1-2.

POULTRY SHOW.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 3 — A woman, carrying a baby, was fined one cent by Federal Judge Harry S. Anderson here recently. She had pleaded guilty to liquor violation.

MINERS TRAPPED.

Little Hope Held Out For 16 Men Still in Pit.

TAHON, Okla., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—Little hope for the sixteen or seventeen men trapped in West Mine Number 29, Superior Smokeless Coal Co., at Tahon, by a gas explosion this morning, was expressed at 11.30 o'clock by Lee Carter, the last miner brought out of the mine.

Carter was almost overcome by gas fumes when the rescue party carried him to safety. He had small hopes for the men remaining in the mine, he said.

Rescue parties, using sponges for protection against gas, went into the mine at regular intervals. Company officials did not say how many men had been taken out, although it is understood only a few have been rescued. Officials declined to say how many men were in the mine at the time of the explosion. The miners say about 200 men are employed, but the explosion occurred just before twent-five machine men were to go in.

The explosion almost wrecked the mine. The property is roped off and no one is alowed inside except the company officials, and rescue crews. Women and children, relatives of the trapped men, pressed against the ropes.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its branches. The branch managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

General—Harvesting is again under way in the Prairie Provinces after being held up by wet weather, and many districts anticipate a better yield than appeared probable a few weeks ago. Warm, dry weather ise now necessaryfl In Quebec, cool weather during the week has retarded the ripening of grain and the growth of other crops. In Ontario, harvesting has been delayed by rain, and late crops have been damaged by rust in some sections, but root crops, with the exception of turnips, are doing well. In the Maritime Provinces, crops generally have continued to make good progress, though there has been another long, dry spell. The weather has been excellent for haying and a fair yield of good quality is expected. In British Columbia, heavy rains have been very beneficial to roots, pasturage and late varieties of apples. Details follow:

Prairie Provinces.

Alberta Western and Northeastern Areas — Continuing general rains have caused no damage but have still further delayed harvesting. Warm, dry weather is required to hasten ripening in most parts. In the northeastern area, very little cutting has been done. Alberta Southeastern Area— Recent rains have improved feed situation. Threshing has started and yields generally are poor. Saskatchewan Northern Area—Cutting is well under way, again, after recent rains. Many districts report the wheat yield as likely to be better than was anticipated three weeks ago. Coarse grain productions will be below average. Sasaktchewan Southern Area—Harvesting has been at a standstill for the past week owing to rains, but is now general with about 40 per cent. wheat cup. The wheat yield is poor in the southwest along the Alberta border, fair in Shaunavon, and with better than the average crop expected in the balance of the south and southeast. Manitoba—At least sixty per cent. of the wheat has been cut. Threshing was commenced in places but was stopped by rain. Some districts report damage from sprouting and bleaching.

Province of Quebec.

Growth of corn has been retarded by cool weather, but an average yield of oats is now looked for. Peas are above average. Roots, particularly potatoes, are making satisfactory progress. Fruits are doing well. Tobacco will be about ten days late in reaching maturity. Cutting has commenced in some localities.

Province of Ontario.

Threshing of wheat is in progress except in the late districts, the yield is from 20 to 40 bushels per acre, and the sample is good. Barley and early oats are good crops, and are largely cut but are still in the fields. Late oats are badly affected by rust and lodgings. Corn shows splendid growth. The second crop of alfalfa is above average, and cutting has commenced. Root crops, with the exception of turnips, which were seriously damaged by insects, are making splendid progress. Sugar beets look promising for a large yield. Tobacco districts are enjoying ideal growing weather, and a splendid crop is in sight. Grapes will be a heavy crop, but peaches and late apples will be light. Pastures are in excellent condition.

Maritime Provinces.

In New Brunswick, potatoes are making rapid growth, a full average crop is expected. In Nova Scotia apple prospects are for a short crop. The quality will be rather good. In Prince Edward Island, good average all around crops are expected.

Province of British Columbia.

An average crop of grain is being threshed under favorable conditions. Potatoes are below average. Apples wil lbe an average crop, the fruit is of good size and high quality. Peaches and plums are above average. Prunes are above average but may be roduced. Wealthies apples and transcendent crabs are past the peak. Cantaloupes are being shipped in car lots. A good crop of hops is assured.

Some damage has been done to tomatoes by rain. Pasturage is improved.

A Little Miss and a Big Man

Though her proximity to a life-belt might seem to indicate certain fears of the broad bosom of the Atlantic on the part of Miss Mary Ferguson Lawson, aged 5, of Winnipeg, you would be wrong in supposing it, since the young lady has merely taken up this position for purposes of photography.

Like many more experienced travellers, Miss Lawson chose the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Scotland—with which, of course, are included her commander, R. G. Latta, and her purser, J. Walker Bartlett (the tall man)—as the most satisfactory means of trans-Atlantic locomotion for a young and unaccompanied voyager. For all three, the ship the skipper and the purser, have seen most of the great ports of the world, as well as many of its out-of-the-way corners on numerous cruises, and have traversed the Atlantic many a time.

Mary was born in Winnipeg, but lived with her mother in England. Now her mother is dead and she is going to live with an uncle, R. W. Ferguson, at Woodstock, Ont.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S QUEER FISH

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"Oh, dear!" whined Jackie Bow Wow.

"Dear, oh!" softly barked his brother Peetie, just to be a bit different and odd.

"What's the matter?" croaked Bully No Tail, the frog boy.

"Vacation will soon be over and we'll have to go to school again," sighed Jackie.

"Don't speak of it!" begged Peetie. "I can't bear to think of lessons and blackboards and books."

"You ought to be Uncle Wiggily, then," suggested Bully. "He doesn't care whether school starts or not, though he often comes to visit the Lady Mouse Teacher. You ought to see him hopping along just now."

"Where was Uncle Wiggily going?" asked Jackie.

"Maybe if we found him he would take us adventuring and we could forget that we'll have to go to school next week," added Peetie.

"He isn't going adventuring," croaked the boy frog. "Uncle Wiggily is going fishing. I saw him hopping and skipping down the road toward the brook with a pole over his shoulder."

Jackie looked at Peetie and Peetie looked at Jackie. The same thought was in the mind of each doggie boy.

"Come on!" whined Jackie to Peetie. "We'll go have some fun'

"It may be the last we'll have before school," barked Peetie.

"What are you going to do?" asked Bully.

"Come along and you'll see," invited Jackie, so the froggie chap hopped along with the doggie pups until they were near the brook on the bank of which, with his fishing line in the water, sat Uncle Wiggily.

"There he is!" whispered Peetie.

"And now for some fun!" added Jackie.

"What kind of fun?" asked Bully No Tail.

"You'll soon see," explained Jackie.

"You can help us play a trick."

"A trick on whom?" the frog boy wanted to know.

"On Uncle Wiggily. Oh, it won't hurt him; you needn't be afraid," said Jackie quickly, as he saw Bully about to shake his green head.

"It's like this," explained Peetie. "Uncle Wiggily always goes to sleep when he's fishing. He puts his hook and line in the water and waits for a bite to wake him up. Now, here's an old rubber boot," went on the doggie boy, picking up one from beneath a bush. "We'll fasten that on Uncle Wiggily's hook and he'll think it's a fish."

"How you going to get it on his hook?" asked Bully.

"That's the part for you to do," said Jackie. You can swim under water, Bully. You take this old boot and fasten it on Uncle Wiggily's book. He's asleep and won't see you. Then give his line a yank. He will think he has a bite. He'll pull up his pole and the old boot, full of water, will bob up and he'll get all splashed."

I—er—now—I guess so," slowly croaked Bully. But, maybe he won't like to be splashed."

That's where the joke comes in," said Jackie.

So, after the doggie boys had teased him for some time Bully took the old rubber boot, swam under water with it and fastened it to the hook of the sleeping rabbit gentleman.

Now, we'll hide in the bushes behind him, and you give his line a yank," said Jackie.

'Oh, I've caught a fish!" he cried. "A big fish!" Up out of the brook he pulled the rubber boot full of water. Up in the air it sailed on the end of the line and then, in the air, the boot turned upside down and all the water fell out, splashing the hidden Jackie and Peetie from their noses to their tails.

"Oh! Oh!" gasped the tricky little puppies.

"Ha! Ha! What a funny fish!" shouted Uncle Wiggily. "Oh, boys!" he cried, seeing Jackie and Peetie. "Did you get wet?"

"Ye—ye—yes, we did!" gasped Peetie.

"Well, that's where the joke comes in!" chuckled the rabbit gentleman, and he and Bully winked their eyes, one at the other, while Jackie and Peetie had to run home to their kennel house for dry clothes.

And, if the jelly bean doesn't hide down in the sharp end of the ice-cream cone, where the gum drop can't find it, I'll tell you again about UncleWiggily

PALESTINE ORANGES PREVENT DISEASES

Is Supposed To Have Almost Magic Virtues of Protection.

JAFFA, Palestine, Sept. 3.—The delicious taste and unique fragrance of the Jaffa orange has caused it to become more and more popular in Europe but the belief that it is possessed of almost magic virtues as a preventive against infectious diseases is held to be mainly responible for its ever growing vogue.

The home of citrus fruit is southern Asia, from the lower provinces of China to the slopes of the Himalaya Mountains. Some 6000 years ago travellers brought the "first golden apples" from India to Nippur in Lower Mesopotamia and toward the 6th century, the Jews returning from the Babylonian captivity, imported them to Palestine.

Jaffa oranges are graded and packed by hand, according to the size of the fruit, 90 to 250 in a box. The size preferred in the market is the box containing 144 oranges.

CAN'T GET HIT.

There are now more than 60,000 insured persons in Croydon. Some complain that motorists deliberately drive around them.—London Opinion.

BIG MIGRATION NEARLY ENDED

Nearly Two Million Persons Traded Between Greece and Turkey.

COSTS $35,000,000.

ATHENS, Sept. 3.—(Associated Press).—The greatest trek of human souls since the exodus of the Children of Israel from Egypt is nearing completion in the Mediterranean countries.

Under the direction of the League of Nations Mixed Commission for the Exchange of Populations between Greece and Turkey, more than 2,000,000 persons have already been transferred from alien lands to their native countries.

Immense Work.

Although little has been printed in Europe or America about this great human movement, it has been characterized by those who witnessed it as the greatest piece of constructive work of the League of Nations since its foundation. It required three years to complete the task, which was carried out with a surprising lack of friction at a cost of more than $35,000,000.

Each of these 2,000,000 persons had to be transplanted bodily from a soil where he worked, ate and had his being, to an entirely unknown land, where he had neither property, nor money nor friends.

Races Inimical.

The World War and succeeding conflicts in the Near East and Asia Minor had heightened racial animosities among the Turks, Greeks, Armenians and Bulgars to such an extent that it became imperative in the interest of peace, protection and the economic well-being of those races to remove them from countries in which they were racial minorities to the land of their nativity. There were about 1,500,000 such Greek and Armenian elements in Turkey, 450,000 Moslems in Greece and other non-Turkish territory, and about 50,000 Bulgors in scattered regions.

Throughout its work the Commission, whose Chairman is Charles Howland, a well-known lawyer of New York, had the valuable assistance and advice of the officials of the American Near East Relief Organization, whose superior knowledge of the refugees problem in Greece and Turkey proved of inestimable value.

New Towns Created.

The Commission has built more than 733 new agricultural settlements, and 22 urban settlements. It has erected 53,000 houses and repaired 16,000 more. It has made settlements in 1,980 towns and villages. As a result of its activities the Greek population of Macedonia has increased from 513,000 to 1,341,000. The population of Athens and Piraeus jumped from 453,000 to 805,000, while the inhabitants of Salonica grew from 174,000 to 460,000.

One of the most vital results of the exchange is that Macedonia, heretofore desolate and barren, has been transformed by the 500,000 newly settled Greeks into a land of real productivity.

EXTRA HOLE MATCHEES FEATURE LADIES' GOLF PLAY AT ELMHURST

Champion Will Meet Miss Cecil Smith in the Semi-Final.

SQUARES MATCH.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press). — Two extra hole matches featured the play yesterday in the Canadian ladies' open golf championship at the Elmhurst course here, when Miss Ada Mackenzie, defending champion, of the Mississauga Club, Toronto, qualified to meet Miss Cecil Eustace Smith of York Downs, Toronto, in one semi-final, and Miss Helen Paget, of the Royal Ottawa Club, made her way to the same stage for a battle today with Mrs. Vera Hutchings, of the Jericho Club, Vancouver.

Mrs. Hutchings and Miss Smith were the two who could not claim their victories until the nineteenth hole was played. Miss Margaret Walsh, of the Toronto Golf Club, gave the Pacific Coast star, a great battle, coming from behind to square the match at the eighteenth. Miss Smith and Mrs. Brydges, of the St. Charles Club, Winnipeg, were on more or less even terms for most of the way, until a birdie four on the difficult sixteenth put Miss Smith dormie two. Mrs. Brydges played perfectly on the last two holes to send the game into extra distance, but bunkers around the nineteenth proved too costly for her.

Ada Mackenzie again came through with splendid golf to advance further in her fight to repeat her achievement of last year. Mrs. K. C. Allen, of the St. Charles Club, Winnipeg, put up a fine fight for the first six holes, where the match was still all square, but Miss Mackenzie proved too steady for her less experienced opponent, and went steadily into the lead to win by 5 and 3.

Helen Paget made her way to the semi-final bracket at the expense of Miss Dora Virtue, of the Whitlock Club, Montreal. The latter was more impressive at the start, being one up at the fourth, but trouble with her irons let her down on several ocasions. Miss Paget gained a lead of three at the turn, and this was only threatened once thereafter, when Miss Virtue took the eleventh. The closed champion then settled down to fine golf, and won by 4 and 3.

Margaret Walsh was the second of the younger players to come close to making history in the present tournament. She was putting well, and held Mrs. Hutchings to a lead of two at the turn. From then on it was a close struggle, Mrs. Hutchings eventually appearing to have a safe margin when she was dormie two. Miss Walsh, however, outplayed her on the last two to square the count with a three and a five. The extra hole left the Toronto player a nasty chip shot over a bunker for her third, which she overplayed into a trap beyond, and her chances went astray.

Championship.

Miss Helen Paget, Royal Ottawa, beat Miss Dora Virtue, Whitlock, Montreal, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Vera Hutchings, Vancouver, beat Miss Margaret Walsh, Toronto Golf Club, at the 19th.

Miss Ada Mackenzie, Mississauga, Toronto, beat Mrs. K. C. Allen, St. Charles, Winnipeg, 5 and 3.

Consolation.

Mrs. E. W. Whittington, Toronto, beat Mrs. Duncan Coulson, Toronto, 3 and 1.

Mrs. J. I. Ashworth, Toronto, beat Mrs. F. G. Wright, Winnipeg, 5 and 4.

Mrs. Maude Ross, Ottawa, beat Mrs. C. C. Balfour, Winnipeg, 2 and 1.

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR BAD STOMACH GIVES QUICK RELIEF

No Need of Strong Medicines or Diet—Famous but Simple Old English Recipe Keeps Stomach in Condition, Banishes After-Eating Distress

If you are a victim of Stomach Troubles—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice.

Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or pull down your system by following unnecessary starvation diets.

Never hurry your meal or overeat of anything, but within reason most folks may eat what they like — if they will keep their stomach sweet clean and active and free from the souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with a small amount of pure Bisurated Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless and inexpensive form of Magnesia that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean.

A week's trial of Bisurated Magnesia, which may be obtained from any druggist for only a few cents, will easily convince you of the great value of this old English recipe.

FOUR TROTTING HEATS REQUIRED TO DECIDE STAKE

SHARE $5,000.

Governor's, Prize, Won, By Guy Trojan For $3,000.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press)—Four heats were required to decide a winner in the $10,000 Chamber of Commerce pacing stake at the New York State fair grounds yesterday. Phil O'Neal, the grown gelding owned by James P. Berry, of Hartford, Conn., and driven by Will Crozier, took down the race and the winner's share, $5,000, by beating Hollyrood Walter and Star Ruth in the fourth mile.

The Governor's stake for $3,000 went to Guy Trojan, which placed third in the first heat and then won the next two. Dickerson was in the sulky.

Tommy Murphy introduced a fast little filly in Catherine, which made easy work of the Onondaga Hotel stake for three year old trotters, winning in straight heats from six competitors. Walter Cox scored another straight heat victory in the 2:18 trot over the mile and a sixteenth route, winning with Sady E. Worthy.

LEAFS REACH PINNACLE IN INTERNATIONAL

Only Baseball Miracle Can Keep Canucks From Winning Pennant.

ORIOLES THIRD.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press.—The Toronto Leafs, long contenders for the International League title, have reached the top and only a baseball miracle is going to keep the Canucks from winning this year's pennant. Jack Dunn's Baltimore Orioles have held the pennant for seven successive seasons. During the majority of these years the Leafs have been close contenders and several times grabbed the lead from the Orioles only to clump when the test came, and allow Baltimore to climb to the pinnacle. Up until a few weeks ago, the present season was a repetition of many of the previous. Baltimore was off to an early start with Toronto and Newark following close behind. The Bears reached the top but fell back after a few days. Toronto then came to the fore, as the Leafs of past seasons had done. This season, however, they are crushing all opposition and are gradually increasing their leading margin.

Baltimore, at present in third position, behind Newark, opened a series at Toronto yesterday. The Leafs, however, proved no respecter of teams in their pennant drive, and downed the Orioles, 7 to 4.

The visitors opened with a strong attack and drove Fisher to cover in the first two innings, scoring four runs against Toronto's one. The Canucks, as has been their custom of late, finished strongly, scored six runs in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings to clinch the game. Meanwhile Newark was losing an 11 to 1 verdict at Rochester, and the Toronto lead was increased to ten games.

Reading lost another game yesterday, the Bisons taking a 14 to 0 victory at Buffalo. Jersey City defeated Syracuse, 9 to 6, three runs crossing the plate in the eleventh inning when Martin dropped a fly ball.

Singles Titleholders Has an Even Chance For 1926 Tournament.

BROOKILNE, Mass., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press). — For the first time since 1923 William T. Tilden reached within striking distance of the national doubles championship yesterday.

After failing for two successive years to carry youthful Sandy Wiener of Philadelphia beyond the third round, the national singles titleholder yesterday won his way to the finals of the 1926 tournament, with Alfred H. Capin, Jr., as his partner, paddling through five sets over a wet court to defeat his veteran Far West rival, William M. Johnston, and the intercollegiate champion, Edward G. Chandler, at 6—3, 0—6, 2—6, 6—2, 6—4.

The victory gave Tilden and Chapin the right to face the winners of a match today between R. Norris Williams and Vincent Richards, the defending titleholders, and Lewis N. White and Louis Thalheimer of Texas.

Three teams, Mrs. Molla Mallory and ilden, Miss Ryan and Borotra, Mrs. Wightman and Lacoste, reached the semi-finals of the national mixed doubles.

ST. LOUIS LOSE TO THE TIGERS

Blue and Bassler Drive in Six Runs For Detroit.

ONLY GAME PLAYED.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press)—Only one game was played in the American League yesterday, Detroit defeating St. Louis, 6 to 3, at Detroit. The bats of Blue and Basler had a lot to do with the Tiger victory, the pair of them driving in six runs. Manush also helped with three singles.

The Yanks were scheduled to continue their series with the Athletics at the stadium but rain interfered. Rain at Washington also caused postponement of the Senator Boston game. Cleveland and Chicago were not scheduled.

TUNNEY VISITS BATTLE GROUND

RECEIVES OVATION.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press) — Gene Tunney, who fights Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight title here on Sept. 23, received one of the greatest receptions of his life today when he came to Philadelphia to look over the battle ground.

Tunney, on his way to his new training camp at Stroudsberg, in the Poconomo Mountains of Pennsylvania, stopped here to look over the Sesqui - Centennial stadium, where the arena will be pitched.

From the moment he arrived by train shortly after noon until he left by automobile late in the afternoon, he was in the midst of a swirl of enthusiastic admirers.

Tunney was escorted to the marine camp in the exposition grounds, where Tunney received his second big ovation. He was received by the officers in charge and then he circulated, as well as he could, among the marines. They cheered him again and again and finally in their enthusiasm he was lifted on the shoulders of stalwart men in uniform and paraded around the camp.

Referring to Dempsey, Tunney said the champion is a "gymnasium fighter." "He likes to knock out his sparring partners," he said. "I don't. They are human and I like to have them come back again."

Asked how long it would take him to win, Jim smilingly said: "About half a round. Later he soberly said he thought he would win in two rounds.

EAST EMILY PERSONALS

EAST EMILY, Sept. 2—The season for duck-hunting opened on Wedneday, September 1 and on Wednesday morning the steady sound of shooting could be heard throughout the neighborhood from Pigeon river.

School started in the district public schools on Wednesday, September 1. Miss Eva Gardiner of Norwood is the new teacher for S.S. No. 13. Mr. Jeffrey Widdis at S.S. No. 8, Miss Parker at Magees school and Miss Gannon at Frankhill.

The men in this district are very busy at the harvest this week, and the threshing machine is also in the neighborhood.

The rain last week made such a delay in the harvest that it seems as though people are trying this week to make up for lost time.

On Sunday afternoon while Mr. Laverne McKinley of Fleetwood was turning McNichols corner near Cowans bridge coming to the east Mr. Carl Waller of Peterboro was turning to the south neither one seeing the other car coming. They collided, Mr. Wallers car being somewhat bent and Mr. McKinley's had one front wheel taken off but fortunately no occupants of either cars were hurt.

What might have been a serious accident occurred last week one day while Mr. George McBrien was driving over Cowan's bridge with a horse and buggy.

There were some young men swimming under the bridge, thus scaring the horse. It tried to turn and backed up down the steep embankment at the south side of the east end of the bridge. Mr. McBrien had to swim to shore from the buggy and the horse narrowly escaped being drowned.

Mr. McBrien had to hold the animal's head above the water until the young men came to his assistance and got the horse out, and the buggy had to be drawn out by a chain.

ST. LOUIS ADDS DOUBLE HEADER TO LEAD MARGIN

Alexander Holds Former Mate To Three Hits In First.

NO OTHERS PLAYED.

Riot in Grandstand When Cub Finishes Shut-out Game.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press)—St. Louis increased its lead at the top of the National League to two games over Cincinnati yesterday by taking both games of the doubleheader, 2 to 0 and 9 to 1. Alexander held his former teammates to three hits by blanking them in the first game, while in the second game Rhem kept Chicago's blows well scattered. The visitors won both contests by bunching their hits.

Fans came to blows as Alexander quit the mound with his shutout victory in the first game. An uproar of booes and cheers greeted him as he walked to the dugout and immediately fists began to fly among those for and against the former Cub. The police were quick in restoring order and a near calm had been achieved when the second game was called.

No other games were played. A "crucial" game was scheduled between the Pirates and Reds at Cincinnati, but was halted in the fourth inning with the Reds leading 3 to 0. After waiting two hours with the hope that the heavy rain would stop, one of the largest week day crowds of the season disappointedly went home. The Reds, at present in second place, hold a game advantage over the Pirates.

BRITISH GOLFERS PREPARE FOR FRAY

Will Have Much Stronger Team in Walker Cup Match.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—(Canadian Press).—When next United States amateur golfers invade Great Britain they are likely to be met by a far stronger team of home players than that put into the field during their recent campaign, which ended so disastrously for the British.

British golfers frankly admit they are tired of seeing the United States continuously winning the Walker cup matches and finally capturing the amateur championship, to say nothing of the Open. Some of the best minds in the golfing world now think they have found not only the cause of the trouble but the best way of solving it.

The analysts point out that the greatest need of British golf just now is a more systematic method for developing young players. They realize that the old line of golf defense has been pretty well shattered. The names of the old timers who made such golfing history, they believe, still may have a formidable sound, but they say the bearers of them for the most part are not living up to their old reputations.

A new line of young stars capable of coming to the country's aid in her hour of golfing distress, is the policy now being urgently suggested. Get after the younger players and encourage them to enter such competitions as the last half of the season affords, is the slogan. County golfing unions are urged to select teams with a leavening of the younger element for intercounty matches, instead of continuing to keep to the old names just for old names' sake.

The belief is expressed that the talent is here and that the chief trouble is that it is not being properly encouraged to get out and hustle in events where it will have a chance to develop by playing against men of established renown, or watching them play.

DANFORTHS ELIMINATED.

Last Year's Winners, Well Known Here, Beaten By Humber Bay.

TORONTO, Sept. 3.— The biggest surprise to date in the Canadian National Exhibition women's softball tournament took place last night, when the smart little Humber Bay team, champions of the National Women's League, handed the much-heralded Danforths, last year's winners and this season's city finalists, an 11-to-5 defeat before a monster crowd. The winners played the better brand of ball throughout, and their sensational work in the field cut off the Danforth rallies when they were most dangerous, two double plays retiring the side on each occasion.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL.

'HANDS ACROSS THE BORDER'

Never has the brain power of a horse been more definitely established than by Fred Thomson's famous white charger, Silver King, in the Western dramatic photoplay, 'Hands Across the Border,' at the Capitol Theatre.

Silver King is known to the cinema world as "the horse with a human brain." There have been many doubtless as there always are in matters of claims made for actors on the stage or screen.

But in the stirring dramatic sequences of "Hands Across the Border," good old Silver King demonstrates conclusively that all claims made for his equine brain are not the least exaggerated.

In one scene alone he proves himself to be perhaps the brainiest horse that ever appeared on the screen. The scene in question is the one in which the blazing signal tree figures. As this bit of business is one of the outstanding incidents of the story it is better seen than described. But after seeing it the beholder will never doubt that horses in general and Silver King in particular have brains.

"Hands Across the Border," brings Fred Thomson to us again in a swift-moving and vigorous tale of the far-flung west, with choice bits of comedy and sentiment and enough action to please even the most jaded theatre-goer. The story was by Frank M. Clifton and was directed by David Kirkland.

AT THE REGENT

"SHIPWRECKED" SCORES.

Thrilling Picture Production Is Well Received.

Seena Owen makes an auspicious return to the screen after a prolonged absence, in the new Metropolitan picture production, "Shipwrecked," which scored a decided hit at the Regent Theatre yesterday. She is featured with Joseph Schildkraut, who won screen fame by his remarkable work in Cecil B. De Mille's masterpiece, "The Road to Yesterday." Both artists acquit themselves with credit and to the complete satisfaction of their admirers in this thrilling romance of the sea and tropics.

Miss Owen is seen in "Shipwrecked" as an artist's model, who, to escape the odious attentions of designing men, flees to the west. Here again, her beauty gets her into trouble, and to save herself from a scoundrel, she uses a revolver with excellent effect. She despairingly jumps off a dock in an effort to commit suicide, but is rescued by a drifter who falls in love with her. The two meet aboard a slipper ship on which the model hides as a stowaway, and their subsequent adventures are thrilling in the extreme.

The ship is caught in a hurricane and nearly dismantled. The storm scenes have been excellently caught by the cameraman, and in this respect "Shipwrecked" as a picture stands alone in its class. The work of the two featured players named, as well as that of the supporting cast, including Matthew Betz, Clarence Burton, Laska Winter, Lionel Belmore and Erwin Connelly, is decidedly a worthwhile picture and one that one may go far to see and heartily enjoy.

DEMPSEY CUTS FORMER FRIEND

Turns His Back on Jimmy Dougherty—Says He Supported Kearns.

CHAMPION SAVAGE.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—A downpour of rain forced Jack Dempsey to limit his boxing to five rounds, but in that short time he severely punished Tillie "Kid" Herman, middleweight, and Frankie Carpenter, light-heavyweight.

Dempsey was in a savage mood when he entered the ring—

Before going to the training quarters Dempsey dropped into Mayor Bader's office and bumped into Jimmy Dougherty of Philadelphia, once a warm friend of the champion's. Dempsey declined to greet him and turned his back. Dougherty, who had refereed three contests for Dempsey, was bitter because of this cool reception. Their break in friendship came after Dempsey split with Jack Kearns. Dempsey feels that Dougherty cast his support in favor of Kearns.

He made the admission that he had been offered "a staggering amount of money by New York gamblers" to throw the Dempsey-Gibbons bout, fought in the boom town of Shelby, Montana, three years ago, to Gibbons, or even call it a draw.

Dougherty further charged that he had made it possible for Dempsey to enter into negotiations for his match with Jess Willard.

WHO'LL BE NEXT 'GREATEST LOVER?'

By GENE COHN
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—In that illusory kingdom of Moviana there is an undercurrent of tension since the great Sheik having died suddenly without direct heir, there are many to claim his throne.

And as the people of Moviana are idolatrous folk, the task will not be easy. In addition, loyalty to their idols is fickle and many are those who have died in favor, while surviving in flesh.

It is not likely that the counsellors of Moviana will introduce another Sheik; it would be too great a test to ask another to wear the mantle of the late Rudolph Valentino.

Symbol of Romance.

There are certain types who awaken similar responses and there are physical and temperamental similarities, but the basis of Moviana popularity is romantic appeal.

Styles in romance change vitally, though romance maintains its hold upon the masses of population. The idol must be a symbol of the current ideal. Thus, a few seasons back, the shy, timorous lover as exemplified by Charlie Ray and enspirted somewhat by Richard Barthelmess, captured the following.

"The Sheik" appeared just as the younger generation was beginning its gesture of revolt against conventions. The "cave man" was having appeal, but something was needed to refine the roughness of his ardor. This "the sheik" type did. He would carry away his lady but, possessing her, would be the gentle lover and cave man combined.

This appeal ran to Latin types and has not entirely gone its course.

Hence Ricardo Cortez and Ramon Novarro suggest themselves as outstanding possibilites if the Latin-sheik style is to continue in popularity.

Looks Like Sheik.

Cortez bears actual physical similarity to the late Valentino. At various times the roles he has played have skirted the sheik-type, and with some degree of success. The inside picture circles are going to give much attention to his appeal as a pirate-romantic in a forthcoming picture.

Novarro also has done service in the Valentino type of role. Indeed a couple of years back when Valentino had temperamental difficulties with Paramount and became a filmland outcast for a time, it was no secret that Novarro was groomed for his place. Somehow he didn't quite make it then, but his work in "Ben Hur" may bring a change.

The real test will come however, if United Artists decide to film the life of Benvenuto Cellini, a part planned for Valentino. Their choice for this role will be virtual announcement of the actor they look to as successor.

Of the American types there are John Barrymore, Ronald Colman and John Gilbert to consider.

Gilbert's popularity, which has been on up grade for some time, has included a variety of types. In "La Boheme" he was both a tender and tempestuous lover of Mimi, and in "Merry Widow" he turned fiery Viennese. There seems to be no reason why he could not fit into any romance pattern that might be enjoying current vogue.

"Don Juan."

The very title of Barrymore's latest picture—"Don Juan"—is a challenge to "great lovers". In this, it will be recalled, he is called upon to ride off with his lady fair under his arm in the most perfect sheik fashion though in the garb of a medieval swashbuckler. His abilities as "great lover" have been continuously stressed, and they are climaxed as Don Juan. What is more, Barrymore now sails under the same Schenck banner that floated over Rudy and is cast next as Francois Villon.

Colman has been gaining in favor and his capacity to carry the flavor of costume drama is being tested in "Beau Geste."

Finally there is mention of a dark horse—one Tullio Carmienti, from the land of Valentino imported by Schneck and being tried out in Talmadge pictures.

RICKARD EXPECTS LARGE ATTENDANCE

Predicts Numerous Prominent Men Will Attend Dempsey-Tunney Fight.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—At least five governors, numerous members of the Congress of the United States, great droves of millionaires, prominent business and professional men and noted screen stars will soon turn their faces toward Philadelphia. This was predicted to-day by Tex Rickard, the sports promoter, who will send Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney together on the night of September 23 in a fistic battle for the world's heavyweight championship.

Joe Bannon of New York, it was announced, will be timekeeper for Dempsey. Tunney has not yet decided who will hold the watch for him.

TO-MORROW'S GAME OF SOFTBALL

Oshawa Girls Coming and Expect To Win.

A great deal of interest is being shown in the Girls' Soft Ball game to be played on the Exhibition grounds to-morrow afternoon at four pecting to defeat the C. G. E. girls and an Oshawa picked team. Oshawa is really coming to Peterboro expecting to defeat the C. G. E. girls, and even if they are an all-star team they will know they have been in a Soft Ball game before it is over. The C. G. team have a good record for this year; in all they have played 17 games, of which they have lost 3 and these three were the first of the season.

The game to-morrow will likely be the last game played before entering the play-offs for the Canadian championship.

Through the kindness of Mr. Roland Denne and the Exhibition Board this game is being played on the Exhibition grounds, as will also be the final game.

George street entrance will be the only entrance used and all cars may be parked on the inside.

LYON WINS AGAIN.

Veteran Golfer Pas Practically Clinched His Eighth Title.

TORONTO, Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).—George S. Lyon, Toronto, practically clinched his eight Canadian Seniors' golf championship, when he turned in a 77 for the second and final eighteen hold round this morning. He has now a gross of 157 for the 36 holes.

ALL READY FOR BIG BALL GAME

Port Hope and Deloro Promise Hot Argument Here To-morrow.

The Deloro - Port Hope clash at James Stevenson Park to-morrow afternoon will probably be the last ball game of the season here, and as this game was brought to Peterboro as an attraction for local and district fans it is hoped the attendance will be in keeping with the importance of the contest. Deloro supporters will come in large numbers, and Port Hope will have a strong following. And unless one of the teams gets a bad break it will be a battle royal. Umpires Kay and LeBarr start the teams away at three o'clock.

The probable batting order will be:

MEIGHEN PASSES THROUGH QUEBEC

Premier Journeys By Automobile To Riviere du Loup.

MONTMAGNY, Que., Sept. 3 (Canadian Press).— Proceeding by automobile Premier Meighen today carried his campaign into the districts below the Old Capital of Quebec. He first paid a call on Monsignor Camille Roy, Rector of Laval, then crossing the St. Lawrence to Levis, he motored through the counties of Bellechase and Montmagny on to Rieviere du Loup, where he closes his present visit to Quebec. At points along the way, the Prime Ministed paused for a few moments to pay a call on the parish priest or to shake hands with the little knots of people gathered here and there. Now and again the houses were decorated with national flags, the flag of the Sacred Heart, or the colors of the Vatican.

CONFESSES PLOT TO SLAY RELATIVE

Hired Negro To Shoot Wife's Father To Secure His Estate.

MOBILE, Ala., September 3 Canadian Press. — How three months ago, he plotted the killing of Judge Lamar Smith of Wetumka, his father-in-law, and how the plot was executed on Monday night, when the Judge was killed by Hayes Leonard, 25 years old, a negro, was told to the authorities here yesterday by Clyde Reese Bachelor, in a written confession, after he had been brought here for safe keeping.

Lonaru, who was also brought here confessed to firing the shot that killed Judge Smith.

Bachelor said financial difficulties prompted him to plot the killing so that his wife might inherit her father's estate. "I was money mad. I am ready to meet my Maker," Bachelor said.

FLY 3,100 MILES FOR NEW RECORD

French Aviators Make New Record For Single Flight.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—(United News.)—The world's record for distance flying has been broken by Lieut. Challe and Capt. Weiser, who flew from Paris to Bender-Abdas, south of Bagdad, a distance of 3,100 miles. They arrived at Bender-Abdas on Wednesday afternoon, having made the trip in 25 hours.

The previous distance record was 2,809 miles, made in a flight from Paris to Omsk, Siberia.

LAWYERS REGRET BARRING OF HONORS

Canadian Bar Association Would Permit King To Confer Titles.

ANNUAL MEETING.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Sept. 3.—(Canadian Press.)—A resolution regretting the action of the Canadian Parliament in passing a resolution requesting his Majesty the King to confer no more titles or like honors on subjects of his Majesty residing in Canada, which was presented by F. B. Fetherstonhaugh, K.C., of Toronto, and seconded by R. G. Delormier, K.C., of Montreal, and referred to the Resolutions Committee, was one of the features of the opening session of the thirteenth annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association.

Sir James Aikins presided at the opening of the meeting, and expressed his regret that his Honor W. F. Todd, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, was unable to be present.

BAIL ALLOWED.

Motorist Whose Car Struck Boy, Will Appear on Monday.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Sept. 3.—Bail of $10,000 was allowed Theodore Norcott, Buffalo motorist, last night, by Magistrate Massie, and the man will be given a preliminary hearing on a charge of manslaughter here on Monday. Norcott was arrested Saturday night by local police following the death of Joseph Cote, 13-year-old high school boy, struck down and killed by the Buffalo man's car. Charges that Norcott did not have his car under perfect control was made by a coroner's jury following the inquest.

The story of the accident, as told in a statement by Norcott, was that the boy, on a bicycle, cut in front of his car, and he was unable to avoid striking him. He, moreover, stated that he was travelling only 20 miles per hour. Norcott's car travelled 225 feet after the accident. Chief Crowe alleged, while a test made by the police indicated that the car should stop within 40 feet going at a speed of 30 miles an hour.

DERHAM CASE TRIAL STARTS

Prosecutor Says Smith Lured Rival With False Telegram.

JEALOUSY CAUSE.

CANTERBURY, Eng., Sept. 3.—(Canadian Press.)—A triangle case with sensational features was unfolded by the prosecuting attorney to-day in the arraignment of Alphonse F. A. Smith on a charge of murdering John Thomas Derham at Smith's villa, Stella Maris, Whitstable.

Smith is a grandson of the late Hugh Ryan, of Canadian Pacific Railway building fame. Derham, who was killed on August 12, came of a well known British family.

The prosecutor charged that Smith, actuated by fierce jealousy of Derham, lured him to Stella Maris with a telegram signed in the name of Mrs. Smith, and then shot him.

MRS. CORSON OPENS VAUDEVILLE TOUR

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 (United Press).—The theatrical producers who have signed a contract with Mrs. Clemington Corson, the second woman swimmer of the English Channel, announce that she will make her first American appearance on Sept. 17th, in a New York vaudeville theatre.

She will either use a tank to show various strokes she used in crossing the Channel, or give a pianologue, at which she is very adept.

AIRPLANE CRASHES.

LETHERHEA, Surrey, September 3 Canadian Press. — Captain H. R. Leavey and his wife were burned to death, and Arnold Keen, a mechanician was critically burned, when a small aeroplane in which they were flying from Bogner to London, made a dive at Bookham, near here, and burst into flames.

Mrs. D. W. Macfarlane, on whose farm the machine crashed, said she thought that Leavey was flying low at the time in an endeavor to find his way through the fog.

Keen was unable to get out of the machine when it was set on fire.

Pope Buys Automobile To Ride Around Gardens

ROME, Sept. 3 (United Press).—The Pope has a new automobile. The machine arrived from Milan on Thursday, its doors sealed with white ribbons. The Pontiff descended from his apartments to welcome Cortile St. Damaso and the Papal Quartermaster, Commendatore Mannucci.

The doors bear the Papal arms but there are no license plates as the automobile will be used only by the Pope, never leaving the Vatican gardens.

The manufacturer's trade mark bears the arms of the House of Savoy, the arms of the King of Italy.

OBITUARY

JOHN DORIS

The funeral of the late John Doris took place Thursday morning from the family residence, lot 13, concession 10, Otonabee, to the Church of the Sacred Heart, Peterboro, where Requiem High Mass was sung by Rev. J. C. Moloney, assisted by Rev. P. J. McGuire, who spoke on the long and well spent life of the deceased and the consolation of the last rites of Holy Church before death.

The late Mr. Doris was born on the homestead 89 years ago, where he resided until his death.

His wife, Katharine O'Keefe, predeceased him 26 years ago. A family of five survive, namely: Herbert Doris, who resides on the homestead, Mrs. J. Crowley, Mrs. L. Hurley of Peterboro, Mrs. C. McDonnell of Toronto and Sister M. Theda of the Ursuline Convent Windsor.

AMUSEMENT TAX MAY BE DECREASED

TORONTO, Sept. 3.— Premier G. Howard Ferguson told a deputation of more than a hundred motion picture theatre owners, yesterday, that in the event of a balanced Budget being brought down at the next session of the Ontario Legislature—and, he said, there was every hope that it would be—the Government will be prepared to eliminate taxation on the lower-priced theatre tickets. The Prime Minister sounded this encouraging note on the assurance from the deputation that the public, and it alone, would receive the full benefit of any tax reduction of this kind that might be made.

Only a War Expedient

In petitioning the Government for abolition of the theatre ticket tax, the deputation claimed, through W. Finlayson, Conservative member in the Legislature for East Simcoe, that imposition of the said tax had been a war expedient and as such, had outlived the purpose of its origin. It was represented that thousands of theatre patrons have protested against the tax, and that the Labor organizations of the Province look upon it as an unfair and unjust levy upon the laboring classes. In addition to Mr. Finlayson, who introduced the deputation to the Prime Minister, Mayor Arthur Bugg of Midland, and J. M. Franklin of Ottawa, both picture-house owners, pleaded the cause of the small-town and small-house "movie" public.

A. SMITH COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON CHARGE OF SLAYING DERHAM TALE OF MATRIMONIAL TRIANGLE

Note of Letter Written By Accused Hints Suicide Intention.

THREAT TO KILL.

Death Struggle Between Two Men in the Drawing Room.

CANTERBURY, England, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—Alphonse F. A. Smith, grandson of Hugh Ryan and Sir Frederick Smith, Canadian magnates, was charged late last night with the murder of John Thomas Derham at Smith's villa on August 12. He was committed for trial on a murder charge at the next assizes.

The pronouncement was given on the completion of the evidence at the arraignment of Smith, whose comment was: "I have nothing to say except that I am not guilty."

Smith's counsel argued that the evidence did not warrant committal except for manslaughter.

The case has a number of unusual features, although in essence it is the common matrimonial triangle. The victim, it is alleged, was lured to the scene of his death by a false telegram sent in the woman's name by her husband. There is no witness of the fatal shot except the wife who was not called upon to give evidence. Her sister had seen the quarrel that had preceded the slaying, but was in her own room upstairs when the fatal shot was fired. The death struggle of the two men in the drawing-room was a fierce contest, but the only independent witness of the affray was a passing stranger who observed it through a window.

When arrested, Smith turned over to the police a letter which bore the possible construction that he had intended to commit suicide and his line of defence seemed to be that in the struggle a bullet intended to end his own life killed Derham.

The tragedy occurred after the three, the two men and the woman concerned, had supped together in a local hotel on terms of apparent friendliness.

Yesterday in court the prosecuting attorney seemed to pay small attention to the suicide theory, pointing out that had Smith intended to commit suicide he would not have had to wait Derham's presence for that conclusion. He pointed out also that the medical evidence was against the suicide theory and that in any case an attempt at suicide is felony.

The text of Smith's letter might be construed as indicating he intended to commit suicide rather than to kill Derham. The letter, addressed to Mrs. Smith, was never delivered to her, but was handed unopened to the police by Smith when arrested. The later, in part, reads:

"My dear, dear girl: This problem can be solved in one way, removal of your lover, Derham, or myself. . . .

"I was hard up and you had his car—a life for a Morris Cowley in your opinion is a fair exchange.

"Your honor seems to have counted for nothing. I helped you in every way. I asked you and the man with you to my house, rode in his car, and no doubt left Derham to pay for his drinks. The whole thing is too mean, too disgusting for me.

"I cannot forget while I live and cannot go on supporting this great enemy of mind and heart. May God forgive me, for what I am about to do and may God forgive you, the cause of it all. . . .

"I have no more to say. My heart is broken and there is nothing in life for me. If you hold anything sacred in this world or the next, look after the children. They and you, God help me, are my only regret. I still love you too much."

The letter was signed 'Your husband, Frank."

Film Stars Can Not Wear Floppy Hats While Driving

CULVER CITY, Calif., Sept. 4 (Associated Press).—Motion-picture producers who took a slap at women's styles by forbidding their women stars and featured players wearing the broad-brimmed, floppy hats now in vogue, yesterday compromised and limited the ban to the time the owners were driving automobiles.

Officials of one company defended their action on the ground that the blinder-like hats interfered with the vision of the fair motorists and were responsible for many accidents, with the danger that a player, killed or injured for the sake of being fashionable, might halt production on a picture.

BIG TYPHOON STRIKES JAPAN

Thirty-five Persons Were Killed and Many Buried Alive.

FACTORY COLLAPSED.

TOKYO, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press)—Reports to the vernacular newspapers in Tokyo say that approximately thirty-five persons were killed in a typhoon in Central Eastern Japan to-day. The storm was one of the most severe in recent years.

At Toyoshahi, near the city of Nagoya, a schoolhouse collapsed, burying about 100 persons, of whom twelve may be dead and a score injured. Three houses were reported damaged there.

At Hammamatsu, a clothing factory collapsed and eight persons are reported dead. Earlier reports told of five being killed and possibly fifty injured when a terrific windstorm blew a train off the tracks at the same place, but later reports revealed that only a few persons suffered minor injuries. Two lighters at Kawasaki collapsed and 15 members of the crew are missing. Forty military aeroplanes at Akenogahara aerodrome were badly damaged and forty telephone lines connecting Tokyo and Osaka are interrupted. Numerous villages paid toll in death or injury or property damage or all three to the typhoon. Railways and light plants suffered heavily, although the damage in Tokyo was negligible.

Judge Performs Wedding Under Ladder In Chamber

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—County Judge Frank F. Adel of Queens defied superstition in the Queens Court House when he performed his thirteenth marriage underneath a ladder in his chamber. Several of the court rooms and the Judge's chamber have been undergoing a re-decorating process for several weeks and workmen had left a ladder suspended overhead in the Judge's chamber.

The couple married by Judge Adel were Thomas A. Marshall of 182 Collins Street, Hartford, Conn., and Charlotte M. Moore of 54 Tremont Street, Hartford. Court Clerks Balthaser Funke and Thomas Smythe of the Queens County Court were witnesses.

STIRLING MAN TO RUN AGAINST DR. A. T. EMBURY

John S. Marshall, of Stirling, Will Contest Hastings-Peterborough.

FACTORY OWNER.

Liberal Candidate Is Brother of Hon. Duncan Marshall.

MARMORA, Sept. 4. — John S. Marshall, of Stirling, president of the Liberal Association of Hastings-Peterborough, has announced that he will contest the riding in the coming election. This announcement is the result of a meeting of the executive of the association, held yesterday at Marmora Town Hall. Neil Gilroy, who was offered the nomination by the convention some weeks ago, declined to accept.

The candidate is a brother of the Hon. Duncan Marshall, Liberal organizer for Ontario, and has done yeoman service in the interests of his party in the riding. Last year he served as returning officer for Hastings-Peterborough. He is the owner of the Stirling Box and Basket Factory, which he founded in that village some ten years ago.

LODGES APPEAL AGAINST COSTS

ASSESSED $639.24.

TORONTO, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—An appeal to a judge of the Supreme Court of Ontario from the findings of taxing officer in the North Huron election last fall and winter, has been lodged down at Osgoode Hall by George Spotton, defeated Conservative candidate in the Federal election contest last October. The taxing officer assessed costs at $639.25 plus costs of an execution issued against Spotton.

In the election J. W. King, the Progressive candidate, was declared elected by a majority of 170 after a recount had been held. The decision was taken to the Supreme Court on an appeal by the defeated candidate, the Court holding that King was the successful candidate. The latter took his seat in the last House.

COAL OUTPUT IS GREATER THAN PREVIOUS YEARS

Report Shows Increase of 47 Per Cent During June.

LAST FIVE YEARS.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—The output of coal from Canadian mines for the month of June was 47 per cent. greater than the average for that month of the five previous years, the monthly report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics announces. The figures were 1,387,040 tons in June, as against 1,138,738 tons in May, and an average of 944,942 tons for the month of June during the five preceding years.

The imports both from overseas and from the United States also showed an increase in June over the month before, and over the five-year average for June. This applied both to bituminous and anthracite. The total amount of anthracite imported during the six months ending June 30, 1926, however, was below the five-year average. The export of Canadian coal in June was 65 per cent. above the figures for May.

The number of men employed in the coal mines of Canada during June was 24,253, as compared with 24,413 in May. Production per man 57.1 tons in June, as against 46.7 tons per man in May. However, during June the production per man-day was the same as in May, being 2.4 tons.

All the coal-producing provinces showed a gain in production over the preceding month, and the outputs of Nova Scotia, Alberta and British Columbia were greater than the averages for the month in the five preceding years.

Comparison of June and May figures covering the total importation of coal showed an increase of 41 per cent. Imports in June amounted to 1,887,031 tons, as compared with 1,337,206 tons in May and the five-year average for the month of June of 1,58,843 tons. June tonnage was therefore 19 per cent. higher than the five-year average for the month. Of the receipts of coal from Europe, 44,044 tons came from Great Britain and 23,447 tons were brought in from Germany. The remainder, amounting to 1,842,987 tons, came from the United States. For the first six months of 1926 the total amount of coal imported into Canada was 7,221,924 tons, or 4 per cent. below the preceding five-year average for the period.

Imports of anthracite totalled 476,545 tons in June. This was 1,100 tons above the tonnage imported in may and about 19 per cent. above the five-year average for the month. Anthracite imported during the month included 398,129 tons from the United States and 43,416 tons from Great Britain. Entries through the ports the ports of Ontario accounted for 243,200 tons; through the ports of Eastern Canada, 193,079 tons; and 266 tons came in through the ports of Manitoba. The total amount of anthracite imported during the six months ending June, 1926, was 1,634,553 tons, a decrease of 18 per cent. below the five-year average for the period.

Of the bituminous coal imported during June, 1,449,405 tons came from the United States and 628 tons

COOK'S LETTER MAY RE-OPEN COAL PARLEYS

First Time Miners Have Intimated Readiness To Discuss Reductions.

GOVERNMENT ACTS.

LONDON, Sept. 4.— (Canadian Press.)— The government has decided to make another attempt at negotiations for settlement of the coal strike, A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, having sent a letter to the government, which the authorities look upon as constituting a sufficient basis to justify another effort to bring about a solution of the controversy.

In his communication Mr. Cook, in behalf of the Miners' Federation, announces readiness to enter negotiations for a national agreement "with a view to reduction in labor costs to meet the immediate necessities of the industry."

This is considered as the most important development since the beginning of the strike, because it is the first time that the miners have agreed to discuss a reduction in wages. It would be hasty, however, to assume that it means the end of the deadlock. The owners have still to be brought into line. The miners insist upon a national agreement, while the mine owners are just as obstinate in opposing a national agreement. Only yesterday the Mining Association, which represents the owners, issued a sort of manifesto against a national agreement and in favor of district settlements.

The statement issued by the Home Office late last night, after quoting from the letter of Mr. Cook, says: "The Government considers this letter constitutes a basis sufficient to justify them in requesting the Mining Association to resume the negotiations and they are in communication with them accordingly." It adds that the prime minister is being kept fully informed of the course of events.

Last night's developments came after along day of negotiations, Ramsay MacDonald, acting busily as mediator and Chancellor Churchill and Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, minister of labor, being in attendance at Downing street ready for any new approach on the part of the disputants. It is certain, however, that it will require a deal of pressure on the part of the Government to overcome the owners' objections to a national settlement.

The miners' position has been weakening somewhat the last few days owing to the steady, if slow, drift back to work in the midland counties, where at the present time 20,000 men are at work back in the mines.

80,000 WORKERS TO CARRY OUT ELECTION ACT REQUIREMENTS

Army of Men To Be Marshalled Under One Chief in September.

ALSO MANY AGENTS.

Large Number of Paid or Voluntary Laborers Help Candidates.

OTTAWA, Ont., September 4. — Canadian Press. — Nearly eighty thousand workers in Canada will be marshalled under tre control of one man before the middle of September, to carry out the requirements of the Canada Elections Act, on September 14th, the chief Electoral Officer, Col. O. H. Bigger, must employ approximately the following number of employees:

Deputy returning officers	28,000
Poll clerks	28,000
Rural registrars	20,000
Returning officers	241
Election clerks	241
Revising officers	300

It costs nearly two million dollars to pay for their services and the overhead charges incidental to the recording of the public vote. In 1921 the government election bill was more than this sum.

Last year it cost the dominion about $170,0000 and the same sum probably will foot the bill this year.

In addition to the officials employed by the government each candidate is authorized to install an agent or scrutineer or perhaps both, in and around the 28,000 polling places in the Dominion, which adds 100,000-odd to the number of people directly connected with taking the vote. These, however are not paid by the government. Also they do not include the small army of paid or voluntary workers who assist the candidates outside the official polling places.

Woman 90 Years Old Reaps Acre Field Of Oats

RAPHOE, Donegal, Ireland, September 4. Canadian Press. — Mrs. Annie Clarke, aged 90, is receiving the plaudits of all Donegal. She has just completed the mowing, tieing and stacking of an acre of oats, the bulk of it 6 feet high, completing the task in a week.

Walls Of Ancient Citadel To Be Restored In Quebec

QUEBEC, Sept. 4. — Under instruction of the Department of National Defence tenders are now being sought for the repairing of the walls of the Citdel of Quebec. Probably one of the great attractions of the Ancient Capital, the Citadel in recent years has been affected by age, and in some sections the old walls have been crumbling down. The Citadel was erected as it now stands early in the nineteenth century. It was built on the site of the original fortress constructed under the French regime. It is stated that the National Battlefields Commission probably will be asked to look after the maintenance of the historic spot.

CHILDREN WORK IN ITALIAN MINES WAGES ARE LOW

Girls of 12 Work in Canneries—Boys in Sulphur Mines, Says Report.

CONDITIONS HARD.

Forced Payment of Union Dues—No Pay For Overtime.

LUGANO, Switzerland, Sept. 4.—A strong denunciation of allegedly ghastly conditions of workers in Italy is contained in an uncensored report from that country.

The report reveals that children below the age of ten are employed in many Italian factories and paid from twenty to thirty cents for a ten-hour day. These are the conditions in a saw mill at Dastelgranco, near Bologna. Twelve-year-old girls do some of the most burdensome work in a big canning factory near Naples for 25 and 30 cents a day.

Boys under twelve are employed in many Sicilian sulphur mines, and several cases of children injured in this work are mentioned in the report.

The condition of women workers is as bad. They get wages which in many cases do not represent a rock-bottom standard of living. In the Taranto state tobacco factory women workers get piecework wages of 80 centesimi, less than three cents, for every kilogram of prepared tobacco.

A number of women employed in one of the biggest Italian factories connected with the rubber industry are paid 70 centesimi an hour. Six lire (less than 25 cents) is the wage for a ten-hour day in a big nail factory in Piedmont.

These are only a few of the instances mentioned in the report, which also lists the following handicaps for Italian labor:

Arbitrary exaction of fines, the forcing on workers of an extra hour's work without pay, the exaction of affiliation fees by Fascist trade unions from non-affiliated workers, abolition of old-age pensions and inefficient medical assistance.

What the wages paid mean to the Italian housewife may be judged from the fact, given in official statistics, that while the cost of living shows an increase of 700 per cent. on the pre-war rates, wages have decreased 30 per cent.

Lately one of Premier Mussolini's press organs declared that attempts by foreign plutocracy to strangle Italy economically were doomed to failure "because Italy has, thank heaven, a standard of living still barbaric enough to enable her people to put up with further sacrifices if necessary."

Admiral Coundouriotis, former provisional president of Greece, who has returned to that post, following the bloodless revolution which overthrew the Pangalos dictatorship.

UNITED STATES' RESERVATIONS GRANTED ON FIRST READING AT WORLD COURT CONFERENCE

Agree To Accept Four Articles and First of Fifth.

PARLEY ADJOURNED.

Committee To Probe Means For Accepting First of Fifth.

GENEVA, September 4. — United Press. — Four of the American reservations to The Hague court protocol and the first half of the fifth, have been accepted on first reading. President Van Eysinga, of the conference of court signatories, announced yesterday afternoon.

He said that while a committee seeks means of accepting the last half of the fifth reservation, it would be necessary to decide upon the manner in which Washington should be advised of the conferences action.

Discussions End.

Geneva, Sept. 4. — General discussion of the American reservations to the protocol of the world court ended yesterday and President Van Eysinga announced that a committee would be appointed to continue the work of the conference of court signatories until after the meeting next week of the League of Nations Assembly.

M. Rolin, representing Belgium, made a definite proposition for amending the fifth of the American reservations.

"I think we could accept the fifth reservation," he said, "if it were made to read that the court cannot render advisory opinions in cases where the United States claims and has an interest."

That amendment apparently would permit the court to decide whether a United States claim to interest in any proposition referred to the court for an opinion had basis in fact.

The discussion which ended to-day was on the first reading of the American reservations.

Results of Conference.

1. It had demonstrated the unanimous sympathy and desire of the court signatories to accept the reservations.

2. It was unanimously recognized that the United States desired equality, and all were disposed to grant that, and some even were willing to grant a privileged position.

3. The conference was unanimous in believing that the fifth reservation merely was intended to obtain equality, but its drafting permitted a wider interpretation, which might have grave influences upon the constitutional rights of both the league and the court.

Foster's Objections

The United States senate's world court reservations has come under fire of the British dominions, with Sir George Foster, of Canada, and Sir Francis Bell, of New Zealand, as critics of the contested fifth article of the reservations.

The strongest attacks came from the American continent rather than Europe as the conference of signatories of the statute of the permanent court of international justice debated the article.

They were made despite England's warmest support of the American reservations.

A possibility in the problem presented by the senate reservations has been advanced by Foreign Minister Osten Unden, of Sweden. He declared that he could not see how it was possible to grant the United States the sweeping right requested in the fifth reservation, but suggested that the conference itself make reservations, namely, acceptance of the United States' adherence to the court, provided that the reservations did not cause trouble, but that, should trouble develop, the signatories would withdraw acceptance of the United States.

Sir George Caustic

In a caustic address, Sir George Foster demanded that the conference examine some actual consequences of accepting the fifth reservation.

He declared that it could not be overlooked that the United States by legislation, had enacted a mandatory act, declaring that The Hague court should not deliver an advisory opinion without its consent.

This, he said, the league itself would not dream of doing.

Annual Terrapin Derby Has About 2,000 Entries

PONCAIDY, Okla., Sept. 4 (United Press). — The annual Labor Day Derby for terrapins is to be held Monday with a probable entry list of 2,000, according to an announcement today by Miller Brothers, at whose ranch the race is held. The first fifty in the elimination race are eligible to compete for the prizes, $2,000 first, $500 second, $300 third, $200 fourth, and $100 fifth.

The elimination contest will be staged tomorrow. The terrapins, each with a number on its back, are placed under a tub in the centre of a large ring. At the starting signal, the tub is lifted and the first terrapin to reach the edge of the circle wins the Derby. The event attracts thousands of spectators.

DE LAVAL DRAIN NEEDS LOWERING

BOARD OF WORKS.

"Where is the money to come from?" was the plaint of the aldermen at last night's meeting of the Board of Works, when various pieces of work were suggested. Aldermen Fife and Denne got into a rather heated discussion about the number of pieces of work that had been ordered by the council, the chairman insisting that the work was being done in order and would be finished if the money was on hand.

The DeLaval drain and an easement for a sewer across from Crescent to Ware street were the main points of discussion. The City Engineer recommends lowering the drain in front of the DeLaval plant, before tiling it, but if this is done it will be necessary to have the ditch on Park street, south of the city limits, lowered to take care of the flow. Responsibility for this work and for keeping the ditch clean will not be undertaken by the council, it being claimed that much of the water to be drained away comes from the corner of the city from North Monaghan anyway. The matter was left in the hands of a committee, which will consult with the Suburban Road Commission.

Alderman Hancock declared the price asked for a strip of land from Crescent to Ware streets to be too high. At present all the houses on the eastern part of Crescent street drain into the lake and it is desired to make a connection across so that a street could be put through, but many of the aldermen opposed the purchase of that amount of land, claiming that a narrower street would suffice. Alderman Fife held out for the full width, saying that it might be desirable later to extend it through to Lansdowne street as the city was growing in the south end. Alderman Hancock was authorized to interview the owner with regard to an option at the lowest possible rate per foot frontage that he will take, the amount to be specified as up to 66 feet.

No action was taken with regard to the request of the Hydro Electric Power Commission for a franchise for buses. The commission will be referred to the city, after stating that the city will take no step that might involve it in litigation. Although the Hydro letter did not definitely say so, the Aldermen were of the opinion that an exclusive franchise was sought. The question of approaches to the new C.N.R. freight shed was left to the chairman and engineer.

Routine business was transacted at a meeting of the finance committee held last night.

WHERE IS YOUR "PEP"?

LET "FRUIT-A-TIVES" BUILD UP YOUR STRENGTH AND VIGOR

MISS EVA EMOND

"I must tell you that "Fruit-a-tives" increased my appetite, gave me more energy and better colour, and I have gained a lot." Miss Eva Emond, Magog, P. Q.

When did you begin to lose your vitality, your enjoyment of life? When did you notice that you were paler, thinner? Of course, you want to be your former cheery self, bubbling over with energy and the happiness of good health. But how?

"Fruit-a-tives" will bring back your normal weight and appetite; give you the soft, velvety skin that glows with health; restore your strength and vitality.

"Fruit-a-tives" will correct the troubles that are keeping you pale and listless and miserable, the Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation, Headaches and Nervousness.

MOUNTAIN MOVES.

PARIS, Sept. 4.—Observations recorded by the topographical bureau of Switzerland show that Mount Arbino, a 5,500-foot peak, is moving at the rate of about four inches a year. Forty years ago the summit of the mountain was shifting horizontally at the rate of an inch a year. It is thought that the plateau on the summit has become dangerously undermined.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

IMPORTANCE OF THE CHURCH

The Tabernacle Built by Moses.

And Moses took the tabernacle, and pitched it without the camp, afar off from the camp, and called it the Tabernacle of the congregation. And it came to pass, that everyone which sought the Lord went out into the tabernacle of the congregation, which was without the camp.

And it came to pass when Moses went out into the tabernacle that all the people rose up and stood every man at his tent door and looked after Moses until he was gone into the tabernacle.

And it came to pass, as Moses entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door of the tabernacle, and the Lord talked with Moses.

And all the people saw the cloudy pillar stand at the tabernacle door: and all the people rose up and worshiped, every man in his tent door.

And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend And he turned again into the camp: but his servant Joshua, the son of Nun, a young man, departed not out of the tabernacle.

And Moses said unto the Lord, See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou hast said, I know thee by name, and thou hast also found grace in my sight.

Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found grace in thy sight, shew me now thy way, that I may know thee, that I may find grace in thy sight; and consider that this nation is thy people.

And he said, My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest.

And he said unto him, If thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence.

For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? is it not in that thou goest with us? so shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth.

IMPORTANCE OF THE CHURCH

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 5. The Tent of Meeting. Exodus 33:7-16.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.

Editor of The Congregationalist.

The word tabernacle has deep spiritual significance in the English language. It is a place of meeting. Meeting, the assemblage of people together, is intimately associated not only with the most sacred things of religion but with the sacred things of government and civil liberty. The tendency of people to forsake and disregard public assemblage either in worship or in the expression of citizenship is one of the lamentable aspects of modern life.

The temptation today toward paths and pleasures that are largely or purely individual, that involve no expression of a common life of worship and devotion or of political idealism, has become emphasized in a pleasure-loving environment with so many means and opportunities of pandering to selfish instinct. Serious-minded men and women ought to give more careful consideration to this matter.

There was a time when the church represented not only a center of worship but a center of the social life of the community, where people came from their daily toil to find a common life on Sunday. Instead of allowing this common life and its expression to be eclipsed, we ought to be strengthening and emphasizing all the things that bring men and women together in the interests of the State and in the worship and services represented by the Church.

Center of Life.

Here in our lesson we have a fine picture of a religious and democratic institution developing out of primitive conditions and needs. The tabernacle symbolized the center of this common life and the presence of God in the midst of the people. It was the "tabernacle of the congregation."

True, the people did not assemble there, but "when Moses went out unto the tabernacle all the people rose up and stood every man at his tent door." Thus the tabernacle became the place and symbol of a common life in worship and aspiration.

We should note that this worship found expression in the quest of guidance. The mind of Moses was full of the idea and the responsibility of leadership. The leadership of Moses, however, was not a matter of ambitious domination or a desire for rule. He shrank from his responsibilities with the sense of his weakness and with a prayerful spirit. He wanted strengthening; he wanted help. His prayer to God is very beautiful:

"See, thou sayest unto me, Bring up this people: and thou has not let me know whom thou wilt send with me. Yet thou has said, I know thee by name, and thou hast also found favor in my sight. Now therefore, I pray thee, if I have found favor in thy sight, show me now thy ways, that I may know thee, to the end that I may find favor in thy sight: and consider that this nation is thy people."

Symbol of Devotion.

Here in this prayer we have expressed the profound fact concerning a great and true national life. Moses thought of the nation as constituting the people of God. Is that nation ever safe or ever well led that is not imbued with some sense of its own holiness? One thinks, in connection with this statement of Moses, of the fine description of the Christian community in 1 Peter, 2 and 9.

The response to the prayer of Moses is similarly beautiful. Just how the voice of the divine came to him we do not know, but it came at least with great reality. "My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest."

A proper study of this lesson would reveal the principles of true leadership and of social progress. After all the world changes more in outward form and in the details of its problems than in the essential factors and principles involved. The consecration, commonsense, and courage that made Moses a great leader would make men great leaders today in proportion as they shared the forcefulness and ability of Moses. The people that establish in their midst a tabernacle of the living God and for whom this tabernacle is a center and symbol of devotion are in the way of true progress.

Fathers Study Nursing To Look After Children

BRISTOL, Eng., Sept. 4.—(United Press.)—A school has been opened here where fathers can learn how to take care of the children while their mothers are out at the movies or elsewhere. The lectures, held nightly under the auspices of the National League of Health, Maternity and Child Welfare, are well patronized. The lecturers are good looking nurses and smoking is permitted.

TRADE REPORT.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Limited, reads:

Halifax—Business conditions quiet with slow collections and very little improvement is looked for until after the election.

St. John—Wholesalers report conditions as quiet. Retail trade normal. Collections good.

Toronto—Wholesalers and retailers report volume of business slightly lower than previous months, which is usual at this time of the year. Collections considered fair.

Winnipeg—All lines of wholesale trade continue active with good volume of Fall business in sight. Retail trade slightly lower on account of inclement weather conditions prevailing during the last week. Collections continue good for this season of the year. Harvesting has again been held up by the weather.

Regina.—Wholesalers continue to report fairly satisfactory volume of business. Retail trade fair. Collections normal.

Saskatoon—All lines continue to report good volume of business Collections fair. Harvesting is now well under way.

Calgary—Business generally in seasonable lines shows slight improvement and all indications point to an increased volume in the very near future. Collections also have improved.

Edmonton—Wholesalers and retailers report busines conditions generally fair. Collections fair.

Vancouver.—All lines of trade report business as being good and showing signs of improvement. Collections generally fair. Retailers now stocking up with their Fall and Winter supplies.

COAL OUTPUT

from Great Britain, which was 549,000 tons above the tonnage imported in May and about 19 per cent. above the five-year average for the month. In addition, 453 tons of lignite were imported. Entries through the ports of Ontario accounted for 1,271,559 tons; Quebec, 165,517 tons; Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, 7,280 tons, which included the 453 tons of lignite imported into British Columbia, and the Maritime Provinces cleared 6,130 tons. Bituminous coal imported during the six months ending June, 1926, totalled 5,581,968 tons, an increase of 1 per cent. above the five-year average for the period. Lignite imported during the same period amounted to 5,403 tons.

Exports of Canadian coal for the month of June were 65 per cent. above the figures for the preceding month. The quantities were: June, 95,336 tons; May, 57,512 tons; there was thus an increase of 37,824 tons. Exports from the Eastern Provinces amounted to 56,586 tons; those from the Western Provinces totalled 38,750 tons. Comparison of June exports with the preceding five-year average showed a decrease of 3 per cent. Total exports for the first six months of the calendar year amounted to 343,272 tons, or 45 per cent. less than the five-year average.

HUNT JAMES' LOOT.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 4.—An influx of searchers is reviving interest in the hunt for $65,000 in gold supposed to have been buried by the James boys east of this city in the '70s. A farmer, who died recently, used to say that the money was hidden under a boulder near a big tree, but could give no further details.

SCIENTIST SAYS PLANT HAS LIFE

Demonstrates His Theory By Some Interesting Experiments.

NERVOUS IMPULSE.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(CP).—Sir Jagadis Chundra Bose, who declares that plants have a life system similar to animal, fascinated a large audience in a lecture here recently, by some striking experiments.

At the back of the hall was a screen and the audience saw a band of light across it. This was cast by a delicate aparatus which, Sir Sir Jagadis said, recorded the blood (or sap) pressure in a plant A cut spray of leaves was placed in a vase. The band of light was still. The sap was not flowing. The lecturer then put some alcohol into a receptacle under the leaves. The light then moved to the left, and the lecturer exclaimed, "the plant lives again; its blood is flowing." The slow movement of the light band became gradually more rapid.

"Now," he said, "we will kill it. I will put some poison in the vase." Women in the audience protested, but the lecturer displaced the alcohol by cobra venom, and immediately the band of light changed direction, went rapidly to the left and recorded the death of the plant.

The theory of Sir Jagis Bose, which was demonstrated by a variety of experiments, is that the action of plants is due to nervous impulse, and that there is in all plants a central heart in the form of a cylindrical layer going from top to bottom which propels sap by pulsations exactly similar in form to those of the human heart.

BODIES LOCATED.

Rescue Parties Find All 16 Miners Who Died Yesterday.

POTEAU, Okla., Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—The bodies of all sixteen miners, who lost their lives when two blasts wreacked Slope Number 7½, West, in Mine 29 of the Superior Smokeless Coal and Mining Company at Tahore, Le Flore County, were reported located by rescue squads early last night.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentry, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

UNITED STATES RESERVATIONS

which would arise were the reservation accepted.

He said that it must then constantly be borne in mind that whenever The Hague court was asked to give an advisory opinion its first duty would be to ascertain whether the United States was interested.

Would Mean Delay

This information, he emphasized, was available only from the United States itself. If the reservation provided that the president could determine the matter of interest it would be a different matter, Sir George declared. But he pointed out that the court must get its answer not from some designated source, but from "the United States" itself. Hence, he said, it must first be decided what constitutes the United States in this case.

Afer the court had received its statement from the United States that it was interested, he continued, the court did not have the right to decide whether the claim of the United States was just. He said that as a result of this, the reservation would mean the utmost delay, which in certain cases would be fatal. He declared that the whole experience of the league demonstrated the necessity of quick decision and action.

Sir George expressed himself as willing to go to any extent necessary to assure the United States equality, even though nations within the league were carrying burdens and obligations which the United States did not carry. He said he was certain that if the United States found that it had asked more than equality the question could be discussed with the United States in man-to-man fashion, and an adjustment could be reached.

MUSIC TEACHER AS MISSIONARY

FOUR YEAR TERM.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 4.—(CP) Appointment of a music teacher of conservatory qualifications to the foreign mision field is an unusual and interesting departure. Miss Anne Lehman, A.T.C.M., at one time organist of Stouffville, Ont., has been named the first full-time music teacher on the staff of the Canadian School for Missionaries' Children, Chengtu, China. Chengtu, a city located so near Tibet as to seem far outside the orbit of western culture of any sort, is however the seat of a good sized university, known as west China university.

Chengtu has 500,00 population and is the seat of a Viceroy. It is stated by those missionaries who have secured Miss Lehman for their city that recitals, both vocal and instrumental, by talented amateurs, are a feature of the universiy commencemen season, as well as of the "council time" of the various missions.

Miss Lehman wil have four years in which to develop her charges and to ascertain how far Chinese field has proceeded since the introduction of Christianity, with its hymns and chants, 35 years ago.

CHINESE ARMIES PREPARE TO FIGHT

Large Bodies of Troops Are Gathering Near Wu Chang.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 4 (United News).—The capture of Wu Chang by Cantonese troops has been confirmed, but rumors that Wu-Pei-Fu, deposed General of the Allied armies, is dead, still await confirmation.

Reports reaching Shanghai Friday indicate battle lines for a decisive conflict are being drawn. Chang-Chun-Sang is said to be rushing 80,000 men from Tsi-Nan, while Sun-Chuna-Pang is sending 50,000 from Nanking.

Gunboats are convoying foreign shipping. It is believed that missionaries and foreigners are safe.

LABOUR DAY.

Although no labour demonstration is to be staged in Peterboro Monday and there will be nothing to accentuate the significance of the occasion, the very fact that every worker will be away from his daily task will serve to stress the meaning of Labour Day.

That a day should be set apart as a national holiday for the workers is in itself a striking proof of the progress and advancement made by labour, indisputable testimony that the status of the worker has materially improved in recent years.

Labour Day, 1926, finds Canada most happily free of disputes between employers and the workers; finds, too, Canada's labour in good condition as regards employment and working conditions; finds in a word or two happiness and contentment.

That these conditions may pertain throughout the year, and the next anniversary of labour's own day will see the workers even more assured that Canada is the finest country in the world for the man who wants to work, is the Labour Day hope of The Examiner.

A HALF-HOLIDAY FOR THE EXHIBITION.

In connection with the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, the suggestion has been made to The Examiner that a half-holiday in the business section on Thursday of fair week would give the merchants and their sales staffs an opportunity to visit the Exhibition that would be appreciated by everybody.

As it is they are the only class of citizens who have not a chance to spend an afternoon at Peterboro's big fair.

School children get a holiday early in the week and industrial workers have Saturday afternoon available, but merchants and clerks as a rule have to confine their Exhibition visits to evenings, which means that they necessarily miss some of the interesting features of the programme.

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition will be on bigger lines than ever this year, and it seems a pity that arrangements could not be made to make it possible for nearly everyone to spend at least one afternoon of the week at the Exhibition Grounds.

If it is at all possible to arrange a Thursday half-holiday, The Examiner is sure that such a plan would be most satisfactory to those who otherwise would have to miss much of the "fun of the fair."

A NATIONAL DECORATION DAY.

Many Canadians will heartily approve of the suggestion emenating from Hamilton that the Federal Government should be asked to set aside a national decoration day each year on which occasion the graves of soldiers and sailors buried in this country would be decorated with fitting ceremonies.

In many centres, of course, there is an annual military decoration day.

Peterboro has to thank the Great War Veterans' Association for establishing such a custom here, the association having each year since its organization in Peterboro seen to it that the graves of veterans were decorated, and that a proper tribute was paid to the memory of comrades who have passed on.

The Hamilton idea is to establish such ceremonies on a national basis so that simultaneously throughout the length and breadth of this country decoration day would be observed, as in the United States, each year the memory of the soldiers and sailors who are no more is kept green.

In cities where local ceremonies have been carried on there would no doubt be a readiness to co-operate in a national decoration day.

THE SUBURBAN AREA COMMISSION.

(By Ex-Ald. Harry Gainey, City Member of the Commission.)

The above is a body corporate, established by the Ontario Government in the year 1920. It consists of a representative from the county and a representative from the city, these two appointing the third to represent the Government. The Commission at the present time has between 35 and 40 miles of road under their supervision, comprising the Chemong road to the Floating Bridge, Lakefield road to the village boundary, Warsaw road to Maloney's gate, Norwood road to the Westwood turn, Keene road to Zion and Park street road to one mile pastthe C. N. R. crossing. The money for these roads is raised by a rate set each year at the spring session of the County Council. They can assess the city up to one-half a mill, the county contributing a like amount, and the Government contributing as much as both, less the superintendent's salary and a few other small items.

The Commission this year will have in or about $28,000 to expend on the aboveroads, and the greater part will be spent on maintenance due to the conditions prevailing last fall and this spring, and also, traffic being very heavy this spring before the roads could be gotten in shape to carry it. The Commission has a patrol man and team on each road to look after small holes and ruts and try and keep the road on his beat in as good a condition as possible, considering the amount of traffic it carries.

Considerable construction was done last fall and is being done this summer on the Norwood road; cutting down hills, straightening curves and widening the road, due to the fact that the Government standard calls for 66 feet from fence to fence and a 28-foot roadbed before they will contribute their share of the cost. The Norwood road was a forced road, and therefore, the Commission had to buy land to get the necessary 66-foot width and the roadbed made wider, and I think anyone travelling this road will see a great improvement in grades, curves, etc.

The Commission at the present time have three crews working; one on construction on the Norwood road, one re-surfacing on the Lakefield road and another building culverts or bridges wherever required on the suburban area.

The general idea of the Commissioners is to make Peterboro a centre with good roads leading to it, thereby attracting business and pleasure-seekers to our city, in which we all should feel an interest.

The Commission have a very capable staff, with Duncan McFarlane as superintendent, Thomas Roach and Wm. Ridpath as road construction foremen and "Nock" Gordon as bridge and culvert builder. The County Clerk, Mr. Ed. Elliott, who acts as Secretary-Treasurer of the Commission without salary, is also very efficient in his duties in connection with the Commission. The County Council and County Road Committee work in harmony with the Commission and allow the freeuse of any machinery they have or any other assistance they can give to help to make progress in any work we have to do.

The Commission at the present time is composed of Wm. Brown, representing the county; Thos. Brown, representing the Government, and Harry Gainey, representing the city. All are giving their best endeavors to make Peterboro a centre of good roads, which in itself is community endeavor.

CHEMICALS IN WARFARE.

Peace advocates could hardly find stronger testimony to the need of international agreements or other plans for making war impossible or unlikely than the statements of chemists recently at the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., to the effect that in future the employment of chemical methods of warfare will determine the issue and give victory to the belligerent best equipped to use such weapons. The horror of war on such lines is in no way mitigated by the possible truth of their contention that poisonous gas is the most humane instrument which can be employed in international conflict.

The discussion of the use of chemicals in warfare at Williamstown is not a lone incident in this question. Repeatedly we hear opinions from one authority or another on this matter and, in spite of the fact that national leaders in all countries acknowledge their aversion to the use of chemical weapons, there is little doubt that since the war research on its use has proceeded in more or less degree in many countries in an effort to keep up in a race more tangibly evinced in armament rivalry.

Chemical warfare, however much it shocked the world in the Great War, was not developed in the slightest measure to its full value. In the first place it had not been accepted generally before the war as a practical and proper weapon. Before that warfare was generally regarded as a struggle of skill and strength between contending armies and their leaders equipped with fixed types of weapons which had been improved but little altered in form through several centuries. It is not too much to say that it was in a general way regarded as an enlarged physical contest with certain general rules. Even many of those who donned uniform in the Great War took months to rid themselves of this idea and to learn that war was an utterly uncivilized way of settling a dispute, that it involved the destruction of human being in a variety of ways, that in the direct clash between opposing forces or individuals of those forces even the use of brutality could not be neglected in making the result secure. And the Great War by its scope and bitterness revealed to civilians also that victory in a modern war could not be gained by adherence to humane laws; that in its essence war was a contradiction of civilization with its constructive works and aims.

At first the use of gas in war shocked the world. There was the feeling that the use of chemicals was a violation of rules, for people had not realized that there could logically be no rules in war. Military directors, trained in the use of artillery, infantry and aircraft, were sceptical of this new weapon. They recognized reluctantly that it could serve special purposes and these chemists sought to provide for. Some of these purposes were enlarged so that before the close of the war gas was used in more ways than on its first employment by the Germans. But the chemists had not time to perfect the use of chemicals in a wide way.

With the lessons of the war illustrating its wider possibilities joined to the remarkably rapid progress being made in chemical research generally, chemists are now able to forecast the use of chemical weapons on a wide scale and with most destructive scope. They claim that in time they may be employed not only to destroy an army in the field but also to destroy enemy civilian populations of towns or cities. This should not be regarded as unlikely from a humane viewpoint. It is no greater step from the killing of civilians by bombs to their destruction by some deadly chemical than from the killing of a soldier with a rifle bullet to his death by poison gas.

The possibilities of chemical warfare serve only to emphasize the need of making war impossible. Its fear should do something to spur Governments to raise the problems of armament and war out of the mists of hypocrisy in which they seem to be drifting. Rules to forbid certain weapons are useless; an end of warfare affords the only solution.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

A WESTERN VIEW.

An accident of circumstance gave to the Progressive party a position of exaggerated importance in the last Parliament. The spectacle of twenty odd members holding a position of control in a body whose total membership numbers considerably more than two hundred, is unusual in Canadian affairs. For two reasons it is unlikely to occur again. One of these reasons is that the Progressive party has not only split into fragments, but, so far as Saskatchewan and Manitoba are concerned, has lost its identity, becoming merged with the Liberal party. The other reason is that in the forthcoming election it is unlikely the vote as between the two old parties will be close enough to suggest any third party dominance in Parliament. However third party interests may regard the peculiar situation which developed in the last session of Parliament, I do not think the people of Canada generally were so pleased with it that they feel inclined to vote for a repetition of it. In other words, my guess is that following the vote of September 14 one or other of the old line parties will be found to have a working majority in the membership of the new Parliament.—The Alberta Farmer.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

"Vote as you like—but vote."

The fact that next week is the last full week of the election campaign will not cause any undue amount of sorrow.

Peterboro and district may not be unanimous politically, but when it comes to the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition there is complete harmony.

This time it looks as if most of the vote could be described as "silent."

Politicians, declares The Guelph Mercury, ought to be required to take a course in musketry so they might do some straight shooting in their speeches.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal
Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept. 4.—Trade was fairly active Monday and Tuesday of this week, but slackened off in the week-end markets. Prices were steady with last week at the opening, but generally about 25c lower at close.

Export buyers shipped east for the week about 900 cattle, finished steers and stores, and a couple of loads of bulls. Export requirements for next week will be about 800 cattle. Prices averaged about steady; steers, $7.25 to $8, with a few 10c to 15c higher; stores, $7 to $7.50.

Monday and Tuesday, butcher steers and heifers, choice, were in good demand, and steady to firm at from $7 to $7.50. After Tuesday the demand for butcher cattle fell off considerably, and prices were not so firm. There were rather heavy carry-overs of stale and rough cattle the rest of the week. Fat cows went off about 25c. One reason for the lighter demand in the later markets was the fact that next Monday there will be no market on account of Labor Day holiday, and the packing houses will be closed. Western cattle are also coming down in larger numbers, and packers are well supplied for the holiday and Exhibition demand. Winnipeg prices are easier, and that will have an effect in the marketing of Ontario cattle.

The demand for stockers and feeders has been only moderately active so far, prices generally ruling rather high. Charles McCurdy, who is out west for the U.F.O., has sent down about 30 loads of western stockers and feeders. These cattle are of good quality, averaging very fair prices. Chice 900 to 1,000 lb. steers selling at $6.25 to $6.75; 800 to 850 lbs., $6 to $6.50; 700 to 750 lbs., $5.50 to $6; yearling steers, $5.25 to $5.75; stocker heifers, 600 to 700 lbs., $5 to $5.25; medium kinds lower, according to quality.

Springers and milkers — Choice springers were in good demand owing to the Quebec buyers operating. Choice springers, $85 to $100; good, $65 to $80; choice milkers $75 to $90; good $60 to $70; medium to common very slow.

Calves,strong, $13.50 to $14 for tops. Grassers, from $6 to $8.

Hogs, firm, $12.75 off cars, $11.75 f.o.b., with a premium of $2.42 per head for selects.

Lambs steady, $13.50 to $14 tops. Buck lambs, $11 to $12; culled lambs, $9 to $10.

Sheep are steady at $3 to $8 a cwt.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—Owing to the fact that few firm bids were received, the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was extremely dull. A stronger feeling developed in the local market for oats and spot prices were advanced 1 cent per bushel.

Only a small volume of business was done in Spring wheat grades of flour, but prices were firmly maintained. A moderate amount of business was transacted in Winter wheat flour and values were steady.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and the trade was fairly active with no change in prices to note. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was again small, but the feeling was firm.

Owing to the continued good demand for fresh eggs and the somewhat limited supplies coming forward a very strong feeling prevails in the local market. Indications are that prices will again be advanced several cents in the near future. Fresh extras were quoted at 48c and first at 40c per dozen. The demand for storage eggs continues good and sales of extras were made at 42c and firsts at 37c per dozen. The receipts were 1,098 cases.

The feature of the butter trade was the weaker feeling that developed and prices suffered a decline of 1-2 to 1c per pound. The trade volume was small. The receipts were 5,464 packages.

The tone of the market for cheese was also waeker and prices were declined 1-8c to 1-4c per pound. The trade was extremely dull. The receipts were 8,634 boxes.

Sales of odd cars of choice white hand-picked were made at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press). — After touching lowest prices yet this season the wheat market took a new upward swing yesterday, helped by big export sales, chiefly Canadian. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, with corn 1 to 2 1-8 up; oats unchanged to 3-8 advance, and provisions unchanged to 25c down.

It was the second day in succession that European buying of wheat from North America was estimated as high as 1,500,000 bushels. Wet weather in the northwest, as well as the large purchasing for Europe had a good deal to do with the fresh strength which the market displayed. Besides, leading traders who have been on the selling side failed to press the market at the new low prices, and on the contrary evinced a decided disposition to collect profits.

Inasmuch as at least 25 per cent of the Canadian wheat crop is apparently still uncut, continued rains are an adverse factor, although the crop estimates current have been raised to a material extent. Meanwhile unfavorable crop conditions are also attracting notice. One report yesterday said practically the whole of Central Europe has suffered from disadvantageous weather and that the yield in France is now estimated at only 253,000,000 bushels compared with 329,000,000 bushels last year.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city.—Prov. 16:32.

If a man meets with injustice, it is not required that he shall not be roused to meet it; but if he is angry after he has had time to think about it, that is sinful. The flame is not wrong, but the coals are.—Beecher.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

PRESIDENT DOUMERGUE

President Gaston Doumergue never wants to be hurried. He takes everything with a smile; even when there is a cabinet crisis he manages to smile....in public. He is a man of regular habits and methods, gets up early, goes to bed early, takes his meals at regular hours, and ahs his presidential life all mapped out to run like clock-work.

Doumergue is very fond of walking, and his best time during the day is when he can go out of the Elysee and walk about, discretely followed by detectives who keep an eye on possible "intruders." Another of his favorite habits is to talk of home affairs, meaning his people in the south of France, with his barber, who comes from the Midi and tells the President all the local gossip which he could not pick up in the papers and official documents.

HISTA UNCLE

He tried to wear his father's shoes;
The largest size for men.
But, shucks, he walked right into them
And then right out again.

Horses are decreasing in number; ther are 68,000 fewer this year than last.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"ASSASSINATE" and "MURDER"

May we say that a person was assassinated, when the victim is not prominent? "I have always thought," writes a correspondent, "that only a prominent man or woman could be 'assassinated.' But I read in my newspaper the following: 'The tailor was found, evidently assassinated, in the alley behind his shop'."

There is nothing in the dictionary to support the belief that the word "assassinate" may not be applied to persons who are not prominent, as well as to those who are. The definition, as given in one of the latest dictionaries, reads:

"Assassinate, to kill by surprise or secret assault; to murder by teacherous violence."

The word has an interesting history. It is derived from "assassin," and that in turn comes from the Arabic "hashshash," meaning one who has drunk of "hashish," a narcotic or intoxicating drug used in the Orient.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Nothing seems to distort the vision more quickly than trying to look down on those about you.

If you like to work you won't have any trouble finding someone to let you enjoy yourself.

Making a fool out of someone is the simplest thing on earth. And that someone is you.

Don't worry too much today. Things may be worse tomorrow and then you can worry just twice as hard.

Every reformer has his own pet method for making vice versa.

A few hot words can cool the best friendship.

You can't get all your rights. Just for instance, you have the right to save a million dollars.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A LESSON FOR BATHERS

You can't go in bathing, your suit is a mess.
Well, now you'll remember, remember, I guess,
When people go bathing, and people return
The very first lesson for people to learn
Is rinse it and wring it, the way I do mine,
And then to go hang it out there on the line.
The sun and the breezes will play with it then
And get it all ready for wearing again.

Your suit is all sandy, your suit isn't dry;
It's cold and it's clammy, it's terribly wet,
And if you should wear it your death you would get.
Your suit is for bathing, I've told you before,
It isn't a carpet to throw on the floor.
A suit to go bathing, like any you wear,
Deserves some attention, a little of care.

There isn't a pleasure, and bathing is one,
That hasn't some duty that has to be done.
Perhaps you'll remember, you will if you're wise,
You can't put a suit on again till it dries.
Next time you go bathing I hope you recall
That one little lesson, a lesson for all—
To hang up your suit with a line and a pin,
Like Mama does Papa's when Papa comes in.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

BOOTLEGGERS' INCOME TAX

By Dr. Frank Crane.

A curious case, involving the intricacies of law and customs, has arisen over the payment of income tax by a bootlegger.

After variously deciding the case by the different courts of Canada, it has been referred to the Privy Council of England, and now members of the judicial committee of that council, including Lords Haldane and Darling and Justices Warrington and Atkinson, are wrestling over the matter.

They are considering a case arising from the Canadian supreme court, exempting Cecil R. Smith of Windsor, Canada, from paying a tax on profits from bootlegging.

To an ordinary mind the matter is simple. If a man has made money by illegal operation, it is not the business of government to tax him, but to take the money away from him.

Lord Darling said, "If this man were a pirate, the law would say, 'Because you are a pirate I'll tax you, but if I catch you I'll hang you. In former times even the clergy acknowledged doing business with an honest smuggler."

Mr. Smith's counsel said that it will shock the conscience of the nation to take a tax on illegal profits.

"Suppose," he said, "a man should set up a business of murdering cabinet ministers—a difficult, onerous, though possibly lucrative profession."

Has the bootlegger sufficiently established himself to be a recognized institution? And has the government a right to tax him?

The government claims the right to suppress him and punish him, but has it a right to tax its profits?

On the one hand a bootlegger should not be exempt from the same kind of tax a merchant pays, yet on the other hand a government would hesitate to compound with a crime.

The profits of bootlegging are so enormous that many adventurous spirits will be found who are willing to take the risks if there is sufficient hope of reward.

The simplest way, it seems, would be to take their rewards away from them instead of taxing them. Government should be an enemy of crime and not in any way a collaborator with it.

Smart New Rumble Seat For Sport Roadster

Rumble seats are justly popular. They add a smart, rakish touch to roadster lines, and increase the carrying capacity by two passengers.

That Dodge Brothers Sport Roadster now provides this convenience, will be welcome news to thousands.

Like the main seat, it is deeply upholstered in blue Spanish genuine leather, and the seat back is high and well pitched, providing unusual comfort.

Ample space is provided behind the main seat for golf clubs, suit cases, tennis rackets and similar luggage.

Brilliant blue lacquer body and hood, strikingly in contrast with the tan top, black fenders and full special equipment, complete a general color scheme of exceptional dash and charm.

BOBBED BANDIT ELUDES SLEUTHS

Scotland Yard Mystified Over Identity of London's Girl Bandit.

DESCRIPTIONS VARY.

LONDON, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—London's bobbed-hair bandit, who is believed to have been concerned in seven robberies during the last two weeks, has so upset the equilibrium of Scotland Yard that the internationally famous sleuths are seriously considering putting women detectives on her trail.

The cleverest operatives of Scotland Yard thus far have been unable to discover her identity. One of the most astonishing features of the case is the fact that no policeman who has seen her, and she has been seen several times, has been able to formulate any accurate description because of her adaptability to various disguises.

Descriptions Vary.

Some report her as dark and slim, while others maintain she is of heavy build and has blonde hair. All agree that she possesses the skill and initiative of Arsene Lupine, coupled with uncanny feminine intuition. In each robbery she has directed operations from a motor car, in which she drove the thieves away. In every case but one she has been able to steer herself and accomplices through the police nets set to entrap her and her band. On the last robbery two men were captured who absolutely refused to disclose the identity of their queen.

FARMER INJURED WHILE DRIVING FIELD TRACTOR

Claude Porteous, Near Bethany, Is In Serious Condition.

MAY NOT RECOVER.

Lately Moved Into Farm—Drs. Hamilton and Turner Dress Wounds.

BETHANY, Sept. 4. — Claude Porteous, a farmer, two and a half miles from here, was seriously injured while driving a tractor yesterday, and is not expected to live. Mr. Porteous was using the tractor in cultivating a field. Stooking not far away were two boys, his son Carl and Roy Monk. The boys heard cries from Mr. Porteous, and running to his assistance found he had in some way fallen and been run over by the machine. The iront wheel was still over his leg.

Arthur Jamieson, working in a field close to the accident was called on to help and Porteous was releaser. Drs. Hamilton of Bethany and Turner of Millbrook were summoned and the condition of the injured man was found to be very serious. He had sustained terrible wounds in the chest.

Mr. Porteous, who has a wife and family of five children, moved into his present farm only last Spring.

CONGRESS FACES GRAVE ISSUES AS SESSION OPENS

Calles Says Clergy Caused Conflict By Ignoring Country's Laws.

NO RIGHTS VIOLATED.

Foreign Firms Have Been Hindered By His Regulations.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 4.—In his message read at the opening of Congress yesterday, President Calles declared Mexico would stand on its present interpretation of the constitutional laws as the policy of his Government has been carefully based on the Constitution and would be carried out without the necessity of any foreign suggestions.

The Government, he said, was only continuing the policy of its predecessors and it had been precise in defining in an unequivocal manner Mexico's right to legislate to safeguard all Mexican interests.

Senor Calles stated that the American Government has exchanged correspondence with Mexico on the subject of the constitutional laws and that principles had been clearly established.

He promised that if experience showed the application of these laws to run counter to his present policy or if experience showed the desirability of moderation of the laws, the executive would be the first to suggest changes.

The religious question was unimportant, the President said. The interest which it had aroused in foreign countries was out of proportion to its importance, he declared.

The trouble had been caused by the Catholic clergy, the President asserted, for the Church had refused to obey the law and the Constitution. The Government, he asserted, for the Church had refused to obey the law and the Constitution. The Government, he asserted, had made no changes which should alarm the churches.

Even though busy studying means to reconstruct the country, the Executive said, he could not fail in his duty of enforcing compliance with the religious laws. The clergy had refused to obey them.

Refers to Foreign Relations.

Referring to Mexico's relations with foreign countries, the Presidential message that Congress had approved the organic law. Commenting on Article 27, which relates to the rights foreigners and societies may acquire in Mexico, the President said:

"The Executive has issued corresponding regulations using the powers which the law provides. These regulations have been applied by the Executive of the union to resolve various cases which have been presented.

"I am pleased to inform this National Assembly that the application of these respective dispositions not only have resolved in a definite manner the distinct cases which have been presented, but that also the same application has not in any manner delayed the functioning of the companies, and, on the other hand, the Government has been able to regulate in a clear and appropriate manner its policy on these questions."

WET WEATHER AIDS CAMPAIGN

Farmers in West Can't Harvest, So They Attend Meetings.

MUCH INTEREST.

WINNIPEG, September 4. — Canadian Press. — Residents of rural districts delayed in their harvest work by the wet weather of this week, have turned their attention to the political campaign, and are attending the meetings in record numbers.

The farmers, always keen followers of politics, especially since the creation of their own party—the Progressies—have taken an added interest in the campaign this year, notably in the constituencies where 'fusion' candidates—Liberal-Progressives—are waging an intensive campaign.

The automobile and the radio have added much to the increased interest of the agriculturists. Manitoba now has many excellent trunk highways, and instead of the long arduous journeys of former days, which oftentimes occupied hours in getting to political meetings, the farmer of to-day takes but a short time by automobile and loses little time in travelling to party rallies and with the harvest in full swing, the farmer has an opportunity of listening to the political leaders. Many addresses have been broadcast from Winnipeg by the various leaders and party candidates ,and the radio has proved a very popular medium of securing the latest news in things political.

The Very Important Home Dress

Adhering to the straight-line silhouette, and closing at the center front under a narrow box-plait, this model would be very trim for wearing around the house. The charming simplicity of its cut is emphasized by such slight adornment as a row of buttons down the box-plait, three tiny tucks at each shoulder, and patch pockets. Lingerie collar and cuffs add a dainty touch. The diagram shows the simple design of the partly finished dress, and No. 1056 is in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 38 bust requires 4¼ yards 36 or 40 inch, or 3 yards 54-inch material. Price 20 cents.

The designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book are advance styles for the home dressmaker, and the woman or girl who desires to wear garments dependable for taste, simplicity and economy will find her desires fulfilled in our patterns. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

BARRY, JR.

When, after I had left Maggie, I reached the motor, I was struck by the expression on Joan's face. She looked happy and yet rather worried.

"Judy, Leila has had her baby," she explained. "It's a boy, Judy. Did you ever see a new-born baby?"

"Never, what does one look like?"

"Good gracious—what's the matter?"

"Well, he's red and wrinkled just like a little old man, his hands are like claws. At first I didn't want Leila to call him Barry, for you know how handsome he was, and when the nurse brought that little, red, squirming morsel in I certainly thought him an awful looking thing. Before I thought I exclaimed 'Why he hasn't even a nose'."

"At this Leila screamed. 'What do you mean he hasn't a nose. Let me see my poor baby.'

"With a reproachful and somewhat scornful look at me the nurse put the child beside his mother. I wish you could have seen Leila's face as she looked at him. Gone was all the bitterness, all the hardness. Why, Judy, I really think she's beautiful."

"Turning to me she said:

"'What do you mean, Joan Meredith, by scaring me to death? What do you mean that my baby has no nose? Come right here and see his adorable little nose.'

"I went over slowly, but when I looked at the little button where his nose should have been I was certain it would never turn into a real nose.

"I knew from the expression on my face that the nurse knew I was still doubtful, for she said:

"'That's the way all babies' noses look. He's going to have a lovely nose.' Honestly, Judy, I thought they would have to show me.

"I'm so glad it's all over, Joan." I assured her, "and isn't it nice that Leila has a boy. It will help her a great deal and soften her grief."

Joan's hand stole into mine—her eyes filled with tears, 'And so it will mine, Judy dear, so it will mine,' she said softly.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

JAMES MADISON AND DOLLY MADISON

"A few hours have passed only since you left me, my beloved, and I find nothing can relieve the oppression of my mind but speaking to you in this, the only way. Dr. Physic called before you had gone far, but I could only find voice to tell him my knee felt better. Betsy Pemberton and Amy are sitting by me and seem to respect the grief they know I feel at even so short a separation from one who is all to me. I shall be better when Peter returns with news—not that any length of time could lessen my first regret, but an assurance that you are well and easy will contribute to make me so . . . Betsy puts on your hat to divert me but I cannot look at her."

"Farewell until tomorrow, my best friend; think of thy wife who thinks and dreams of thee. DOLLY."

This endearing letter was written by the famous Dolly Madison to her husband, James Madison. Their separation was not very serious—he went to Washington while she remained for a short time in Philadelphia to cure a lame knee; but it was their first separation and they suffered out of proportion to the cause.

James Madison was Dolly's second husband. Dorothy Paine, grand-daughter of John Payne, one of the early settlers in Virginia, had married a Pennsylvania lawyer named John Todd when she was nineteen. Two years later the yellow fever epidemic had made her a widow and in the following yea she met and married Jamese Madison, a match which gave great pleasure to President and Mrs. Washington, who took a fond interest in the couple.

Dolly Madison was remarkable for her beauty, culture and social leadership and her life with Madison, who became the fourth President of the U.S., was idyllic and covered a happy period of forty-two years.

The Brown-Eyed Susan

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

IT'S just as important as it is difficult to be consistent about bed time. The children, the rascals, find so many ways of delaying the event and we find ourselves saying, "It's a shame to put them to bed such a lonely night," or worse than that, we just fail to enforce bed time rulings by ignoring the time, or by taking the children out. Any child authority will tell you that nothing in the child's life is of more importance than sleep, regular sleep at consistent hours, and those hours are not late morning ones, but early evening ones. After a day of play, after supper time and a little time of quiet pleasure, reading or quiet games, there is no legitimate reason for a child to stay up. More problems will be solved through rest than you could ever imagine.

HOROSCOPE

'The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

FOR SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1926.

It is primarily a time for association and consultation with persons who think. Many brilliant ideas may be expressed under this sway.

The clergy should benefit wherever reactionary views are abandoned and new-era methods of leadership adopted.

Mexico is subject to powerful planetary influences making for continued advancement in industrial development and gradual adjustment of difficulties, national and international.

This is a sway favorable to the aspirations of leaders in government affairs who are conservative even while they are progressive.

Mercury today encourages all who write. Correspondence as well as literary work is stimulated under this direction of the stars.

Newspapers this week may chronicle sensational news which will affect business and commercial conditions.

The position of Saturn is read as presaging continued misunderstandings regarding foreign loans.

This is one of the inspiring days for lovers who may be peculiarly susceptible to romance. Hasty marriages and impulsive engagements may be expected.

Venus smiles on all social gatherings and pleasure trips, although there may be extraordinary danger of accidents.

Aged persons should take special care of themselves, for the rule may not be favorable to their health. Many sudden deaths are indicated.

Better conditions are prognosticated for India and Japan. Both countries should begin to prosper in the coming months.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy, prosperous year, but they should beware of deceptions. Business and political interests should be satisfactory.

Children born on this day may be endowed with extraordinary talents. These subjects of Virgo are likely to attain great artistic fame and immense wealth, but they must be safeguarded against extravagance.

FOR MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1926.

Mercury and Mars in benefic aspect dominate this day, according to astrology which finds planetary influences most favorable to dwellers on the Earth.

There is a favorable sign for all who sign contracts or enter into any sort of business agreements.

All who belong to the press should benefit from this planetary government which presages much activity for writers and publishers.

Foreign correspondents should benefit greatly in the coming year, which will bring much of international interest and furnish more than one sensation.

Mars is in an aspect today making for immense constructive enterprises and stimulation of certain manufacturing interests.

Both merchants and manufacturers should benefit in the coming months which will bring an immense demand for machinery.

Airplanes will focus attention and immense numbers will be built hurriedly, the seers prophesy.

Sudden changes in fashions again are prognosticated and modesty is to mark the costuming of women.

The seers point out that dress reflects the nakedness of the soul, which now is to take on the garments of virtue and beauty.

Great spiritual revival is augured and although religious dissensions may be widespread, they will awaken men and women to a broader consciousness of existence, astrologers foretell.

Swimmers and yachtsmen are warned not to take any risks this month, as threatening aspects are noted.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of new liberty and freedom, which they should use wisely. Profit is forecast from various sources.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly systematic and fastidious. These subjects of Virgo succeed best in routine employment.

HELSINGFORS. — (United Press).—Finland, it is announced, will appeal shortly to the League of Nations to put upon the smuggling of liquor the same international ban which now obtains against the smuggling of opium.

OTTAWA, Ont.—(United Press).—Gold mines of Canada are producing precious metal at the rate of $100,000 a day, according to a report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

IMOGENE

Not so frequent in usage, but none the less lovely and possessing of a good deal of poetic charm, is Imogene. The name has no definite history, and etymologists find it difficult to account for it, but the generally accepted theory is that it is another form of the Imagina which is found in Germany in early times.

There was an Imagina of Limburg in 1400, and various other instances of the use of the name by German women. How England secured the name of Imogene is open to speculation. It is possible that Shakespeare's heroine established her vogue there, though etymologists contend that it was used by British ladies before the master playwright wrote his version of the old story of the deserted and betrayed wife, which he so strangely placed at the court of the last independent British prince.

At any rate, Shakespeare called his heroine Imogene, thus establishing her vogue forever. The name is still a great favorite in England, but has never had widespread popularity here, due, perhaps, to its poetic associations. Also, it usually degenerates into 'Gene. A few devoted admirers of Shakespeare (and others unwittingly), give the name to girl babies in baptism, probably ignorant of the fact that as Ygnoge, the name was once bestowed on a daughter of Emperor Pandrasus of Greece, and the wife of Brutus, according to Geoffrey of Monmouth. She was mentioned in Anne of Brittany's funeral oration in 1514.

Imogene's talismanic stone is the jacinth. It is said to protect her from danger, especially of lightning. Worn when travelling, it will insure her a happy, successful journey. Wednesday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—(United Press).—New styles, fads and accessories confront one each day as fall approaches, and while it is still too early to indulge in bonnets and frocks of wintery fabrics we can be forming an idea of what is what in Smartdom.

Velvet seems to be the outstanding fabric for hats. Both dull and bright colors are used. Shapes vary from tams, crushed turbans and small brimmed sports models to wide brimmed affairs. Often two colors of velvet are combined in sort of a patch-work manner to form tam shapes. Many of the velvet tams in the shops must be draped and tacked to suit the wearer. Felt and grosgrain ribbon combine to form some of the smartest of tam or sports shapes, and though felt will be popular it will undoubtedly be a season of velvet millinery.

Linings used in fur coats this season are extremely lovely since many of them are embroidered or appliqued with velvet flowers down the side-fronts or around the hem. Many furriers are showing unlined fur coats and permitting one to select one's own lining and floral design. This is far more sensible than showing a ready-lined coat since no two women have the same idea as to linings. One can have one of these exquisite embroidered linings placed in a coat for $25 at several shops. An unusual lining shown by an uptown furrier has a Nile green background with embroidered orchids worked on the fronts. Huge velvet roses adorn a black-lined seal coat.

Zipper bathing shoes of bright colored suede are among the mid-summer novelties. Red, green, yellow, white and black are the colors found among these zippered models. The zipper fastening extends up the centre front of the shoe.

Plaid and checked velveteens are on display in several department stores. They can be made up into straight-lined coats and into sports frocks, most effectively.

Little bunches of glass flowers or grapes are new millinery trimmings which may replace rhinestone ornaments. White and bright colored transparent glass is used and these little ornaments glisten like dewdrops.

YES, SINCE SATURDAY.

MONTH BY MONTH

THINGS TO DO IN SEPTEMBER

1. It is important that you now pot the earliest of the bulbous plants which you intend to flower in your living room during winter and early spring. The Roman Hyacinth should be the first.

2. Your Gloxinias will soon be going to rest. Gradually reduce the supply of water and when the leaves have all fallen store the bulbs in finely sifted peat over winter.

3. Now is the time to replant the Iris and to divide the roots. Plant so shallow that the thick roots are barely covered. Deep planting is harmful.

4. Paeonies do not flower well as a rule if deeply planted. Plant them about two inches deep. Now is the time. Paeonies with thick tap roots sometimes do not flower. Lift the plants, cut the tap roots to cause them to produce a more fibrous root system and replant.

5. It is well toward the end of September to plant the bulbous plants such as Narcissus, Tulips, Hyacinths, Crocus, Snowdrops and Glory of the Snow, so that they will become well rooted before the soil freezes. So rooted they will, as a rule, flower splendidly.

6. Strawberries may be set out early in the month. Well-rooted runners alone should be used. Divisions of old plants are worthless.

7. Shades tree which are too dense or which possess obtrusive branches may now safely be lightly thinned or branches be removed. Heavy pruning however, should not be practiced until the trees be removed. Heavy pruning however, should not be practiced until the trees are dormant.

8. Growths more than two years old may now be removed from climbing Roses or any dead ones. The strongest young canes may be trained in to take the place of the ones removed. Leave the pruning proper, however, until spring. That is, do not remove any young growths until spring.

9. The removal of excessive growth from the Tomato plants will favor the admission of sunlight to the fruits which will consequently ripen more quickly. See to this so that the yield will be greater before frosts kill the plants.

10. The border Carnations may now be layered or cuttings be made of any desirable kinds. Vegetative propagation is the only way to ensure trueness to type. The plants will not produce truly from seeds.

11. Early September is the best time to make the lawn or at least to sow grass seed. Under the influence of cool, dewy nights the grasses will grow wonderfully.

PLANING . BUILDING . FINANCING
DECORATING . FURNISHING . GARDENING

copyright 1926

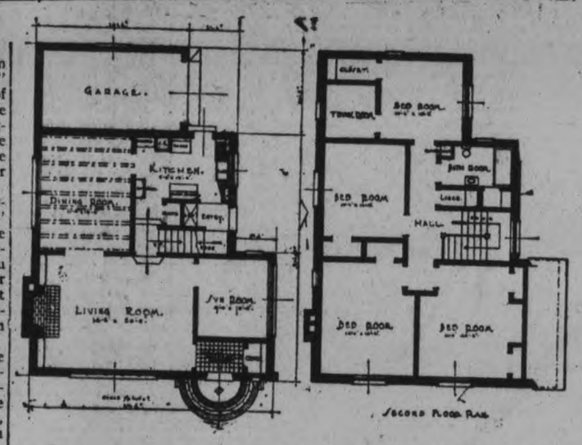
By Walter Stuart Pavey, Architect.

What a delightful picture to have in one's mind when one thinks of "home." Purely from a building viewpoint, of course. The high peaked roof and the little "eye brow" window which snuggles so attractively on its slope; the chimney pots; the canopied entrance with old fashioned wide battened door and iron hardware.

There is a particularly good opportunity here to illustrate the "kinship" between design and detail. This home is of the English cottage type and referring again to the chimney pots, if you will place a piece of paper or your finger over them you will find the result rather surprising. From an architectural aspect it is best described as an error of ommission.

Other interesting details are the shutters, window box, and small latticed window at the right of the entrance. These, and also the entrance door, are painted a robin egg blue, creating a very charming contrast with the yellow tone of the stucco walls.

Construction has been very carefully considered to combat the vagaries of our "temperamental" climate. The walls are 2 in. x 6 in. studs covered on the outside with wire lath and then plastered with a coat of cement. On top of this is applied two coats of magnesite stucco, yellow in color as already mentioned. On the inside of the wire lath, between the studs, is a back plaster coat of cement. This is followed by a water proofing coat of asphalt. A building board product is next applied to the inside of the studs and then plastered. In between these two walls, the space between the studs is filled with granulated cork and the same material is used between the roof rafters. The result is comfort the year round—warm in winter, cool in summer.



Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications for this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address, Walter Stuart Pavey, 380 Richmond St., London, Ont.; Copyright 1926, MacLean Building Reports, Limited.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE CROW

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Just as Uncle Wiggily was about to hop out of his hollow stump bungalow one day, a sound was heard like this:

"Haw! Haw! Haw!"

"Some one is laughing at you," exclaimed Mrs. Longears, the wife of the bunny gentleman. "Perhaps you have forgotten to put on a necktie or your hat is crooked."

"Or else he is twinkling his pink nose backward," added Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy. Both animal ladies always looked Uncle Wiggily over before he went out adventuring each day to make sure he was properly dressed.

"Nonsense!" said the bunny gentleman. "That can't be anyone laughing at me, for they can't see me. I haven't yet gone outside. And, anyhow, my hat is on straight, my necktie is all right and I haven't twinkled my pink nose at all."

But again came that sound like laughter:

"Haw! Haw! Haw!"

This time Uncle Wiggily waved his long ears to and fro and said:

"I know who that is—a crow!"

"A crow!" repeated his wife.

"A crow," went on the bunny. "And he is saying 'Caw! Caw! Caw!' Of course it sounds like some one laughing, but it isn't. Look!"

He opened the bungalow door and down fluttered a black crow, who seemed mournfully to say:

"Haw! Haw! Haw!"

"That sounds like a crying sort of laugh," spoke Uncle Wiggily. "Why so sad, Mr. Crow?"

"Perhaps," suggested Nurse Jane, "he is sorry that he isn't white instead of black. Though I am sure black is the proper color for him."

"I lost my wife's piece of cheese!" croaked the crow.

"Oh, no! that isn't it," croaked the crow. "I don't mind being black. I like it. But I am sad because I lost my wife's piece of cheese."

"You lost your wife's piece of cheese!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "I never heard of such a thing. Tell me, were you taking your wife's piece of cheese to the shoemaker's to have rubber heels put on it?"

"No, not that," sighed the crow. "In fact it wasn't exactly my wife's piece of cheese yet. I am going to give it to her. I bought it in the six and seven cent store as a birthday present for her. And now, when I fly home, without my wife's piece of cheese, she will feel very sad indeed."

"But see here!" exclaimed Mr. Longears. "If your wife didn't know you were bringing her a piece of cheese, how can she feel badly about not getting it? No one can be sorry over something they don't know anything about."

"You don't know my wife," croaked the sad crow. "She will see that I am not bringing her any present on her birthday, and she will think I have forgotten and that I don't love her any more. But I do! I went to a lot of trouble to get that piece of cheese for her, as she is so fond of it. And now, alas! It's gone!"

"What happened; did you eat it by mistake?" asked Nurse Jane.

"Indeed I didn't," croaked the gentleman crow. "But with the piece of cheese in my beak I was flying over a field back of your house, Uncle Wiggily. All of a sudden I saw a man down below waving his arms at me. I opened my beak to call down 'Caw!' to him, and, forgetting I had the cheese, I let it fall. It fell in that man's pocket and he won't give it back to me."

"You don't mean to tell me!" said Uncle Wiggily, "that a man in the field back of my bungalow is so mean as to keep your wife's birthday piece of cheese? No!"

"Yes!" croaked the crow. "That's why I am so sad!"

Uncle Wiggily, with a stern look on his face, took his tall silk hat down off the piano.

"Where are you going?" asked his wife.

"I am going with Mr. Crow," said the bunny firmly, "to make that man give back his wife's birthday piece of cheese. It is just the sort of adventure I have been looking for."

So Uncle Wiggily and the crow hurried out of the bungalow, and what happened next you shall hear about tomorrow night, that is, if the ice pick doesn't take all the lumps out of the sugar bowl and feed them to the silver fish.

RECEIVES CLUB BAG.

Arthur Long Is Leaving City To Take Course In Pharmacy.

On Thursday evening last the members of St. Luke's choir gathered at the home of Arthur Long, 458 Driscoll Terrace, on hearing of his departure from their circle to continue his course in the Pharmacy College, Toronto.

After taking him by surprise, a most enjoyable evening was spent in music and games, after which delightful refreshments were served by the choir and his immediate friends.

At the close of the repast a presentation was made by Mrs. William Davis, and Miss Elizabeth Stewart read the following address:

Dear Arthur,—Having heard that you are leaving Peterborough, and remembering that you have been a member of St. Luke's choir from boyhood, we feel that we must express our regret in some form or other, so we not only present this small outward expression of our sincere regard, but from our hearts wish you continued success and happiness wherever your lot may happen to be cast.

Signed by Mr. C. Thomson, Organist), and Choir Members.

Mr. Long in very sincere words thanked his friends for the beautiful club bag which they had chosen for his gift and expressed his complete surprise at the event arranged in his honour.

Mr. Long will be missed very much in his home and in St. Luke's by his associates, as he was so kind and congenial to all who knew him.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Today the amethyst is a love talisman. This arises from the old legend that an engraved amethyst bearing the figure of a little Cupid is said to have been worn in a ring by St. Valentine. Since the good saint has been the patron of young lovers from time immorial, the amethyst assumes on this particular day, sentimental value.

Today's natal stone is the sapphire, which protects its wearer from danger and brings him good fortune even after he has given the stone away, provided he gives it lovingly.

Green is today's lucky color.

The pink carnation is today's flower, and brings peace and contentment to the household which it adorns.

LANES GIVEN OVER TO YOUNG LOVERS

Wortley Council Closes Two Near Sheffield To Wheeled Traffic.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Whiteley Lane and Elic Lane, a few miles outside of Sheffield, have ben consecrated to Eros, the God of Love, by the Wortley District Council. The council has decided to close these two lanes to wheeled traffic, and to turn them over to courting couples. The lanes are so narrow, and so favored by maids and their swains, that motor traffic in the opinion of the council is dangerous. So the finger posts at the cross-roads will soon point "To Arcadia (Passengers only)".

There are about two miles of lovers' lanes. It appears to be held here that if a man is single he dare not go up lovers' lanes alone, while if he be married he dare not go up there at all, says a correspondent of the Daily News. But the Council's ban on non-lovers is not yet in operation, and my driver and I slipped into Arcadia at the last minute, as it were, without breaking Cupid's by-laws.

We simply followed the maids and men. It was just after tea, and Whiteley Lane already was calling. We passed two rose-covered cottages, and entered a narrow road bordered with high hedges.

"This," said the driver in a hushed voice (he was a young man with curly hair and blue eyes), "is lover's lane". He drove slowly past low walls, buil of pile lichened rock with green moss in the crags. There was the intoxicating perfume of new-mown hay, fields of red and gold where the poppies mingled with the corn.

Here and there on the well-worn rocks sat the maids and the men.

There is an old rustic bridge where Whiteley Lane joins Elic Lane. A brook rippled and sang underneath, and birds were singing in the sinking sun. In Elic Lane a 'Kissing" gate ushers you into a hilly hayfield, and the lane itself is bordered with wild ferns and foxglove.

There are old moss-colored gates on which are carved initials. There is no doubt that these lanes are well and truly "Lovers' Lanes". There were dozens of couples exploring the delightful solitudes last evening.

"I agree with Lady Mabel Smith and other members of the Wortley Council," said my driver, "that motor headlights would be barbaric in Lovers' Lane."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite.

F. C. Mortimer, vice-President of Citizens' Bank of Los Angeles, says:

The training afforded by banking practice calls for the exercise of qualities that are predominantly moral in character. It means self-control. It means self-mastery. Long ago the farmer learned to forego immediate pleasure for the sake of some more distant good.

Through hardship and toil, on the frontier and the prairie; in the valleys and on the hillsides, he has labored to supply the immediate wants of his household and food for the peoples of th earth. That which he has gathered and saved has become the foundation of our wealth as a nation. His steadiness industry and sobriety are political virtues which make for the stability and permanence of our government.

New style railroad locomotives, classed as oil-electric, have surprised railroad officials with the low operating cost and ability to make extremely long runs.

The Triumph of Long Experience

WHEN you buy a Gurney Range you are buying more than a mere stove. You are getting eighty years' accumulated profits of Gurney's improvements, which today make Gurney ranges the most up to date in the world.

You are getting a range in which fuel combustion has been perfected so as to consume the gases, instead of wasting them up the chimney.

You are getting a flue system which carries the hot draft from the fire right around the oven—top, bottom and sides, giving quick, even heat, readily controlled.

There are so many features about Gurney Ranges it takes a book to describe them all. Ask your nearest Gurney dealer. Or mail this coupon direct.

KING ADDRESSES LIBERAL PICNIC BONAVENTURE

Liberal Leader Promises To Try Settle Railway Question There.

LOWER TAXATION.

Says Return of Liberals To Power Would Means More Reductions.

NEW CARLISLE, Que., Sept. 4 (Canadian Press) — The Liberal leader returned to Quebec yesterday. As his train journeyed along the coast line of Chaleur Bay into Bonaventure constituency Mr. King was greeted by crowds at village stations and his car was decorated with Liberal colors and Union Jacks. By the time New Carlisle was reached even the engine was brilliant with red bunting as well as Union Jacks, and tri-color. Special trains brought people from both ends of the constituency to a picnic at New Carlisle. Mr. King was accompanied today by the Hon. Charles Marcil, who has represented the constituency in the House since 1900.

Mr. King in opening said: "I have heard a good deal about the railways here and I have taken great interest in trying to bring the owners together with the National Railway executives.

"Offers have been exchanged between National and the Quebec Oriental Railway but no settlement reached. I intend to see that these two groups come together again," he added. Everything would be done, if the Liberals were returned, to bring about a settlement, but the government could not interfere with the National Railway management. Reductions of direct taxation and tariffs made by the Liberal Government were retold by the Liberal leader.

He told the audience that after consultation with Mr. Robb the last Minister of Finance, he was able to say that the return of the Liberal party would mean further tax reducions. The Liberal party work in the interest of old age pensions would not cease and although the measure was defeated by the Conservative Senate, it would again be introduced. The people of Gaspe Peninsula did not owe much to a Conservative party which had left out the private railway through the district from the Canadian National Railways sysem.

CLAMS CATCH MICE.

CUSHING, Me., Sept. 4. — Mrs Q. W. Creamer left a basket of clams in her cellar one night. She found three dead mice held fast between the shells of three clams. Now the neighbors are taking it up.

LIBERALS SPEAK AT BRIDGENORTH

Candidate, With A. D. Ross and the Hon. G. N. Gordon, Give Addresses.

The residents of Bridgenorth and vicinity were given an opportunity to hear the Liberal candidate last night in Bridgenorth hall. Mr. Duffus was accompanied by A. D. Ross, former edior of The Farmers' Sun, who came in the place of W. G. Abel, who was unable to come owing to sickness; and the Hon. George N. Gordon. William Telford acted as chairman.

Mr. Ross, in commencing, eulogized the candidate as a man having the interests of all classes at heart and a man who would make a fine representative at Ottawa for this constituency. Mr. Meighen and his cabinet were attacked as being a government of big interests, as there are several millionaires in the cabinet and the speaker was unable to see that a government constituted as such could have the interests of Canada as a whole at heart.

"If you happen to be a Grit today, according to your Conservative friends, you do not love the flag, for they have raised the loyalty cry, and just recently Premier Ferguson condemned so much trading in the United States but the government of which he is the head has sold $90,000,000 bonds in the States,' said the speaker.

The Robb Budget was then discussed and the future changes which Mr. King has promised if elected, especially the removal of the sales tax on the remaining articles just as soon as possible. The budget means a saving of $25,00,000 in taxes, said Mr. Ross, and where the taxes were $41 per capita in Mr. Meighen's day they are $31 nw. Mr. Meighen also came in for considerable crit'cism in his change in policy to suit the people to whom he was speaking, and to enable himself to secure power.

Hon. G. N. Gordon

The general improvement in the country's affairs and especially the C.N.R. was Mr. Gordon's topic. He also criticized Mr. Peck's stand on the budget when he said that if the Government wished to make a reduction in the tariff which would be felt by everyone they should have reduced the tax on clothing. Mr. Gordon asked, "Why did not Mr. Peck move this reduction in the House?" Mr. Peck also voted against the budget, a budget which means a saving in this city of $150,000 in income taxes alone, for Mr. Peck voted against the speaker leaving the chair for the House to go into committee of Ways and Means to consider the budget, and if Mr. Peck's vote had been successful the budget would never have been considered.

Mr. Gordon also dealt at a considerable length of time on the customs probe, stating that there was smuggling because there was a high tariff, and certain things could be purchased cheaper in the States than in Canada, and the higher the tariff the greater the smuggling. "I'll admit that there are men who asked the minister to let up on prosecuting the smugglers, and one of these was G. A. Boys, the chief Conservative whip."

Conditions are worst today in smuggling than they ever were in Canada, and Mr. Gordon believes it impossible for men who, he said, have been proved to be dishonest in their dealings in the past and who help to form the shadow government of today, to be able to cope with the smuggling question especially when the bars have been let down already for the election purposes.

Old age pension was also discussed and the manner in which the Conservative Senators threw it out, all voting against the act but Senator Roberson, former Minister of Labor in the Meighen and Borden governments.

J. J. Duffus

The candidate made a plea to the people not to be deceived any longer by the big interests and asked them to vote for the party that is working in their interests. The big interests have a strangle-hold on the Conservative party, for the money which they have made out of the people is now paying for the "slush" on the billboards, said the speaker. Mr. Meighen's policy of obstruction was described, when the Conservatives held the House up for six weeks when they decided to oppose Mr. King when seeking re-election, which was a decidedly different policy than the Liberals used when Mr. Meighen wished to get into the House in 1921. This obstruction cost the people $20,000 a day, said the speaker.

THE HOSPITABLE DUTCH.

There are few things a traveller appreciates more than hospitality. I get a thrill from some spot of stupendous natural beauty or an inspiration from the sight of some legendary or historic scene, but when all is seen the thought of a good meal and a cheerful fireside in hotel, chateau or cottage at the end of the day is an important thing in the days life. The Dutch never hesitate to invite one to a meal, not only to a formal repast, but to their homes to take pot-luck. In attending contract to some nearby countries, where madame would undoubtedly never forgive her husband such an indiscretion as bringing home an unexpected guest, my Dutch friends always seem to have a hearty meal ready and no apologies. If it is pot-luck it is a lucky pot for it contains "snacks" for a glorious repast. As a rule they have good claret, and I have noted that Bordeaux is as much a favorite in Holland as Burgundy is in Belgium, and then in Holland you can always be sure of a good after dinner talk, a splendid cup of coffee and last, because first in enjoyment, a good smoke.

SAILORS DRIFT IN SMALL BOAT

Tossed About on Stormy Lake For 32 Hours After Ship Sinks.

CROSS ONTARIO.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Sept. 4 (Canadian Press) — After being tossed about in a small rowboat for 32 hours on Lake Ontario in one of the heaviest storms of the season, during which their ship had sunk, Captain Patrick McManus, of the Burt Barnes, owned by George Hart, Picton, Ont., and three members of his crew pulled ashore at Braddock's Point late last night. They had drifted and rowed across the lake with only a loaf of bread and two pounds of butter for food in a boat that would scarcely hold three persons.

The Burt Barnes was a 250-ton schooner, owned by George Hart of Picton, Ont., and sailed out of Kingston, Ont., Wednesday morning. She left port at Big Sodus Bay with a cargo of 210 tons of soft coal consigned to a Kingston firm. When she was just off False Ducks' Island, near the Canadian shore, she was struck by a heavy nor'wester.

McManus declared it to be a 50-mile-an-hour gale. Battered by a high wind and a heavy sea, the schooner turned back toward the American shore and labored heavily, shipping water continually. First the foremast snapped, carrying the main top sail with it. And then the main mast broke off even with the deck, leaving the schooner with no canvas.

Rolling in the lake Thursday noon, just off Longpoint, Ontario, she was shipping water so badly that the hold was flooded and water was dashing down the hatches in floods. The men left the ship just before she sank, late in the afternoon, and took to the water in a small life-boat.

They landed off Braddock's Point late last night and were taken by automobile to the Life Guard station at Summerville, where they procured dry clothing and food. Later they went to the Coast Guard station at Summerville, where they were put aboard the steamship Kingston, bound for Kingston, Ontario.

The crew were: Phillip Haskell and Ernest Zimmerman, sailors, and Edward Howard, steward. The men, all are sailors of long standing, declared it was the worst blow they had ever experienced and declared they were "through with sailing."

GIFTS FOR BRIDE.

Work Mates of Miss Josie Guerin Make Presentation.

Miss Josie Guerin was the recipient of a handsome tea-pot, sugar bowl, cream jug and tea-pot stand, when the dressing department of the Canadian Woollens, Ltd. (Auburn Mills) met at her home on Friday night.

Miss Annie Shaw made the presentation, while Miss Rose Walsh read the following address:

Dear Josie,—There are times in life when it is fitting to express appreciation of one another. You have arrived at one of these, and we take the opportunity to wish you the best of luck in this, your new venture of life.

May you and your husband enjoy good health and every blessing in your new home.

We ask you to accept this gift, not only for the value of it, but as a remembrance of our good-will towards you.

Signed on behalf of the Warp Room.

In a few well-chosen words Miss Guerin expressed her appreciation of the beautiful gift. The evening was spent in games and dancing and dainty refreshments were served.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL FOR 1926.

1. Modern Risque Type: In this compact style of house, comfort is never sacrificed for beauty. For instance, the cellar is placed on top of the top story, just under the roof, instead of beneath the lower floor, and the attic, which used to be where the cellar is by the new scheme, is where the cellar used to be by the old scheme before it was moved up to where the attic used to be before the position of the cellar was changed. This new arrangement makes it possible to walk down stairs after tending the furnace.

Other helps to the weary housewife include a staircase with only half as many steps for the same distance, necessitating just half as many steps; a front door which will open either in or out, depending on whether you want to go out or in; and an automatic safety folding bed which has its four legs bolted to the floor.

2. Parcheesi Model: An artistic triumph, with a porch that runs completely around the house so that it is absolutely impossible for baby to fall off. All the windowpanes are covered with a thick coat of black enamel on the outside, thus insuring absolute privacy from peeping trespassers. Unsightly lines are done away with partially by having the chimney, instead of going through the roof, run around it.

3. Mid-field Period: Just the home for the young married couple of today. The doghouse is fitted out with Phoenician-Graeco tapestries, and a biscuit belt-conveyor runs underground to the main kitchen. The parlor is converted into a bedroom by closing the blinds, and the kitchen is tucked neatly away in a corner of the dining-room. — Carl Shoup, Stanford, '24.

BY ANCIENT CONFLUENTIA.

You will not find Confluentia on your map of Germany, but a good historical atlas will identify it with Coblenz, situated at the confluence of the Rhine and the Moselle. The first thing to strike the eyes at this confluence is the impressive monument of Emperor William I.; is there anywhere else on earth a monument like it? The equestrian figure in copper rises to a height of nearly fifty feet, and a Genus bears a laurel-wreathed imperial crown beside it. But I did not come to see this so much as the little town of Ehrenbreitstein and the stupendous almost impregnable Fortress of the Broad stone of Honor, on its precipitous rock nearly four hundred feet above the river. The Treaty of Versailles requires that it be "disarmed and dismantled," but it can be visited before sunset any day in the summer, tickets being obtainable at the commandant's office. It gives a magnificent view of the country, and if you are interested, you will look for the house where Goethe lived in 1774, near the fortress.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's father, disillusioned by a faithless wife, warns him: Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time; envied by all men, adored by all women. Infamous Lucretia Borgia, at the peak of her power in Rome, intrigued by his reputation, invites him to her reception. Among the guests is wealthy old Duke Varnese and his exquisite daughter, Adriana, who is coveted by Borgia's cousin, Donati, despite the traditional enmity of the Borgias and the Varnese.

Something had seemed to tell her then that evil would come of the events of this evening that good might also come did not occur to her. She knew only that when Donati was presented to her his eyes made her feel as if worms were crawling over her. As Donati bent over her hand she tried to mask her disgust by smiling, and Cesare Borgia, watching her, smiled also. Her father, noting it, had the same premonition that had come to Adriana. Evil would come of this night.

Lucretia Borgia paid but little attention to Adriana. Her thoughts were of Don Juan, who had not yet come. She had given orders to Maia to inform her of his arrival the instant he came and now stood impatiently tapping her foot, the jewels on her breast rising and falling with her quick, sharp breaths.

Even then Don Juan and Pedrillo were riding into the courtyard, and Juan, glancing up at the house, was standing staring at a girl, one of Lucretia's maids, who had just then come out onto a balcony about twelve feet above the ground. The heavy brocade curtains that shut off the room closed behind her, and she stood looking up at the moon.

Juan nodded appreciatively. Pedrillo, whom Maia had summoned to the door where she awaited them the moment he dismounted, hurried back to Juan to tell him that he was to lose no time in going straight to Lucretia, but Juan commanded him to be quiet.

Pedrillo was insistent. Quickly, Excellency, Her Highness awaits you!" he exclaimed. Juan paid no attention to him for a moment, still staring at the girl on the balcony, who was smiling down at him. Finally, in reply to Pedrillo's urging, he spoke.

Opportunity ranks before the Borgias," he said, and swinging up on the luxuriant wistaria vine that climbed the balcony, whose trunk was as thick round as his wrist, he climbed it with the agility of his own pet monkey, and was on the balcony with his arm around the pretty maid almost before she realized his presence.

Helplessly Pedrillo shrugged his shoulders. Helplessly, too, Maia stared after Juan then, turning quickly, ran into the house to tell her mistress what had happened. Pedrillo hesitated an instant, understanding what she meant to do, yet not knowing just how to save his master.

Meanwhile Juan was smiling down at the girl, catching up one of her hands to kiss it and exclaim as ardently as if he had never used the phrase before, Your hand is like a little, trembling dove." And the girl lifted her eyes to his and smiled, just as the wife and mistress and sister of the Duke Margoni had lifted their eyes and smiled deep into his.

Maia had gone straight to Donati when she could not find her mistress and told him what had taken place. He in turn had gone to Lucretia and informed her of the facts, with a malicious little smile more taunting than his remark, You are very sure of yourself, but you will believe when all Rome laughs." Her incredulity was but a poor mask for her wounded pride. Abruptly she turned away to hide both and went to her own apartments, from one of which the balcony opened.

Pedrillo, frantically tramping the ground beneath the balcony, tried his best to make Juan realize the danger he was running. But his efforts failed miserably; Juan refused to pay any attention to his muffled calls of "Master! Master! I beg of you to come down at once!"

Finally Pedrillo, goaded into action by his own fears, himself turned to the wistaria and clumsily made his way up it to the balcony above. It broke and pulled away from the wall under his weight, and a shower of fragrant little purple blossoms fluttered about him. Twice he almost lost his balance. When at last he clambered over the balcony rail he was gasping for breath and trembling with fear.

"Master!" he cried, so far forgetting himself as to clutch Don Juan by the arm, "Master, the Borgia—"

Juan shook his hand off and would have turned back to the girl, ignoring him, but at that instant a noise from just behind the door's heavy hangings caught his attention. He released the girl and edged his way to a window beside the door. Just as Lucretia Borgia, her face taut with anger, threw back the hangings shielding the balcony door Juan slipped through the window and, cat-like, made his way to the middle of the room.

Lucretia swept the balcony with blazing eyes. Beneath their gaze Pedrillo cowered back against the railing, the picture of guilt, and the maid bent her head. A movement behind her made just enough noise to cause Lucretia to turn, and Juan bowed to the floor before her.

"My apologies for the wretch, gracious lady," he murmured. The mockery in his voice was so subtle that she could not be sure of it. "I had hoped to improve his morals by my own example."

Lucretia did not believe him, not for an instant. She did not want to. He had proved himself a man after her own heart in that one moment. Now she was more keenly interested in him than before. She smiled a little as the frightened maid hurried into the room, and over to the door, noting the sidelong glance that Don Juan gave the girl.

Again Juan was bowing before her.

"May a simple Spaniard pay his respects to the most illustrious flower of Europe?" he asked humbly.

Again she smiled, and without replying to him went out onto the balcony. Juan followed her, And stood close behind her, looking at her, a derisive little smile on his lips. But the instant she glanced over her shoulder at him the smile was gone, and to all appearances he was the ardent lover, his eyes, heavy lidded, gazing down into hers.

She turned back to the moonlit scene, and Juan stifled a yawn. If only one woman out of all the world could be a little different from all the others! But they were alike—the bitter truth that his father had taught him held for them all! Suddenly he felt lonely, desolate.

And then, in the garden below, he saw a girl, lovely as the white moonlight and the white flowers all about her. Not a girl, an angel, the embodiment of all beauty.

Forgetting Lucretia, he bent over the balcony railing to look down at Adriana. And Lucretia, watching him, lost the langour of a moment before. Her eyes became twin points of steel, her voluptuous mouth a hard, cruel line.

Blindly she reached out for some weapon that would hurt him. Jealousy would have made her kill him in that instant had it been possible. To look at another woman like that when she, Lucretia Borgia, stood beside him!

"Perhaps you are not aware that Donati is our best swordsman," she said, her voice silky, suave. "He may resent your interest in his lady."

THE GROWING GIRL.

Requires a Mother's Constant Care and Watchfulness.

In their early teens it is quite common for girls to outgrow their strength, and mothers should carefully watch the health of their daughters at this time, for it is when strength is sapped by too rapid growth that anaemia develops. The first signs may be noticed by peevishness, langour and headaches. The face grows pale, breathlessness and palpitation follow, with low spirits.

At the first symptom of anaemia mothers should act at once. Neglected anaemia often leads to decline, but if you see that your daughter's blood is enriched there need be no cause for anxiety. The finest blood enricher ever discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The pure, red blood created by these pills will quickly banish all signs of anaemia. They will build up your girl's health and ensure her a robust girlhood. Give your daughter a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. Make her strong like thousands of girls and women throughout Canada who have been rescued from the clutches of anaemia by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. F. Mears and Rev. Harold Stainton Adolphustown.

The pall-bearers were: John Wilson, L. Wilson, I. Walters, J. H. Stevens and Arthur Moore. Interment was at Emily Cemetery, where a brief service was held under Masonic auspices.

Among the numerous beautiful floral tributes were a square and compass from Omemee Masonic Lodge; wreaths from Mount Pleasant Canadian Foresters and the Ladies' Aid of the United Church, Port Hope; sheaves from the Bible Class of the United Church and the Gleaners' Society of the United Church; a pillow from the family; a large bouquet of gladiolus from the children of the neighborhood, as well as a large number of tributes from individual friends and relatives.

KILLED BY FIREWORKS.

George Hall, of Hamilton, Ontario, employee of the Hand Fireworks Company, who was killed at the National Exhibition, Toronto, when the fireworks "bomb' exploded laterally instead of into the air. A fragment struck him across the chest, kiling him almost instantly, while thousands of spectators looked on at the spectacle, ignorant of the tragedy. He leaves a wife and one young child.

"BUMPITIS" SPREADS.

DENVER, Sept. 4.—Two pilots who flew through a heavy wind and rough weather in the Rockies recently have severe bruises. The flyers call their ills "bumpitis" and say it is "spreading" among the flyers who cross the ranges. The bumping sensation is like riding in a spring wagon over rutty roads, they say.

URGES CLERGY TO EMIGRATE

Better Opportunity In Dominions For Children, Says Bishop.

RELIEVES INGRAM.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press).—During the absence of the Bishop of London, the diocese is in charge of the Rt. Rev. W. W. Perrin. Before assuming his present office, Bishop-Suffragan of Willesden, in 1911, Bishop Perrin was for many years head of a British Columbian diocese. In the second year of the war he publicly reproved the Lord Mayor of London for "the exhibition of intemperance in eating and drinking as indicated by the Mansion House banquet." The Bishop's reproof extended to Prime Minister Asquith for attending the function. He thought the Lord Mayor ought to have invited his guests to tea and coffee, to be followed by the usual speeches. The King's lead in forswearing intoxicants while the war lasted has been made impotent by His Majesty's ministers, the Bishop declared.

Bishop Perrin has also urged the younger married clergy to go to the Dominions. An appointment overseas, he says, may not mean much in increased pay, but it frequently provides better openings for a clergyman's children.

OFFICER BALKED.

D. N. McMillan, formerly customs officer at Morden, Man., who has declared in affidavit that his efforts to enforce the customs regulations were balked by former Conservative governments.

Justice J. V. Teetzel, Ontario supreme court judge, who passed away in the Barbardoes. A successful career as lawyer and barrister was followed by his elevation to the high court bench.

BOWS GROW.

Are Becoming Indispensable On Every Kind of Dress.

Last season's small and innocent bows have gradually become indispensable; they have grown up and now have established themselves on every kind of dress.

Watteau bows, says Parisian A. G.B., are to be seen on the back of the corsage, between the shoulders, Louis XIII bows on the front of the dress, with long loose ends hanging down to the bottom of the skirt, bows of taffeta, faille, satin crepe and lame, bows of fur placed like a long neck-tie or as an ornament on pockets, or as a wrap fastening, or again on the waistband, or panels or waistcoat. They are wide, long, supple, pretty and full of movement, and they give surprising effectiveness to all sorts of toilettes.

WOMEN MUST HOLD TOGETHER

Cannot Hope To Elect Ladies To House By Ordinary Methods.

MEN WON'T HELP.

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press).—That women's opportunities in the political field are largely a matter of sentiment is the opinion of Mrs. W. D. Ferris, a prominent Conservative woman. Many different things enter into the matter of who is elected, but in the main it depends largely on what sentiment is uppermost. If there was a great women's movement before the public eye, one in which large numbers were interested, a woman candidate would have a fair chance of election. She must get most of the women and some of the men behind her.

According to Mrs. Will J. Ross, a former president of the Liberal Women's Association, women have no chance of being elected in Edmonton. Under the old system of voting, if a woman is on a ticket, she will have some chance. If women were really in earnest and stood together, they could elect a woman, but they do not stand together, she says. "Women candidates have to count on men's votes to a great extent and I do not think the majority of men consider women as capable as men."

Mrs. David Bell, a prominent labor woman, says: Labor men ought to get the idea of men's superiority out of their system, but they cannot. They say the Labor party stands for complete equality, but it does not, she avers. She thinks the cause of women would be greatly advanced if six more women of Miss Macphail's type were elected.

JOHNSTON TAKES CANADIAN TITLE

Toronto Bantam Wins When Foley Comes In Overweight.

TORONTO, September 4. Canadian Press. — Although Jack Johnston, shifty little Toronto boxer, was credited with winning the Canadian bantam weight title from Victor Foley of Vancouver at the Arena Gardens in their ten round bout last night, the best he could do against Foley, in the opinion of Referee Marsh, was draw. The match was arranged to decide the holder of the title left ownerless by Bobby Ebbers failure to defend it.

Foley came in at 120 1-2 pounds, 2 1-2 pounds over the limit. Johnston weighed 117 3-4. He claimed Foley's $200 weight forfeit and took the title, after which the little fellow went on to box a draw in a fast contest.

ARMISTICE DAY ERROR RECALLED

British Heavy Gun Kept Firing Until Afternoon, Says General.

NOT NOTIFIED.

MONTREAL Que., September 4.—The last gun fired in the great war was on the Canadian front and that was by a British battery which had been overlooked in the delivery of the armistice message until well on in the afternoon of November 11, 1918.

This was disclosed last night at the reunion of the 2nd Heavy Battery C. E. F., Old Boys' Association, by Brigadier- Geneal A. G. L. McNaughton, C. M. G., D.S.O., Deputy Chief of Staff, Ottawa, and commander of the Canadian heavy artillery during the war. General McNaughton was replying to the toast: "The Canadian Artillery."

The gun which continued the conflict for four hours after the warring nations had agreed to call a halt was an imperial 12-incher. which had made its emplacement on the Canadian front near Mons in order to reach its target, a railway station far behind the German lines. The firing, said the general, was effective.

This particular unit was overlooked when the instruction to "cease fire" was issued, and did not reecive the order until 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Canadian guns were also in action up to the calling of the armistice, General McNaughton said. At 11 a. m., a Canadian 6-inch Howitzer Battery and some field artillery fired a salvo to mark th winding up of the hostilities. The Deputy Chief of Staff paid tribute to the work of the Canadian gunners during the war and to Sir Arthur Currie, whose plan had had always been to make shells do the work of men with a consequent saving in casualties.

GAME POSTPONED.

Deloro and Port Hope Will Play Here on Wednesday Afternoon.

Owing to the wet weather it was necessary to call off the Intermediate O.B.A.A. playoff game between Port Hope and Deloro. The two teams will play here on Wednesday afternoon instead of today, as was originally ordered. The game will be called at 4.00 o'clock on Wednesday and should be a good one as both teams will try hard to escape elimination.

NEW PREVENTIVE TO SPOIL ALCOHOL

U. S. Officer Adds Oil of a Disagreeable Odor and Taste.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.— As a result of the general condemnation of use of poisons to make industrial alcohol unfit for beverage purposes, the prohibition unit announced yesterday the chemical department has "developed the suitability of certain complex oil compounds of an odorous and disagreeable nature," for denaturing purposes.

Dr. J. A. Doran, head of the chemical division, exprained that the compounds in themselves are nontoxic, and when used with a minimum quantity of wood alcohol will not only remain with the alcohol under "manipulative treatment, but will so mark the concotion that nobody will consume the same unknowingly."

He said protection of lawful industrial alcohol use, coupled with maximum protection of the public, is the purpose. He believes it will be impossible for the chemists employed by bootleggers to extract the oil compound from alcohol as has been the case with many denaturants used in the past.

"Current scientfiic work of the department is being directed to strengthening these formulas, not by rendering them more toxic, but by rendering them less potable, and in working out these problems partial success has already been obtained," he said.

"There is a misapprehension in the public mind as to the underlying reasons for the use of a denaturing grade of methanol (wood alcohol).

"It is not generally employed, because methanol as such is commonly known to be a dangerous liquid to consume and physical harm may result to the drinker, not because the denaturing grade of methanol carries distinctive odorus substanstances which by their odor and taste disclose to the individual the patent fact the liquid is unfit for consumption."

MAN POISONED.

Alcohol Is Blamed For the Death of John Micks.

TORONTO, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press). — Alcoholic poisoning is blamed for the death of John Hicks, 32, in Western Hospital this morning. Hicks was found lying unconscious at the entrance of the Dufferin race track last night.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

DIX KEPT ON THE GO IN "SAY IT AGAIN"

Gets Lots of Action in Latest Paramount Romantic Farce

"Say It Again," which comes to the Capitol Theatre Monday is the third romantic farce in a row for Richard Dix, under the directorship of Gregory La Cava. And it is funnier and faster than either of the other two successes, "Let's Get Married," and "Womanhandled."

The picture has a long, colorful sequence of whole-hearted, two-fisted scrapping worked out in one of those side-splitting comedy situations which have caused such laughter and excitement in so many of Dix's features. Moreover, the fighting involves nearly one hundred people, all punching at once. The situation is funny because Dix, as the central figure in an intrigue around a throne, is not responsible for his predicament, being kept in ignorance of what all "the shooting's for."

The comedy becomes a riot when Chester Conklin, last laughed at in "The Wilderness Woman," appears as the prince for whom Dix has been mistaken.

As a background for the story we see the quaint streets, houses and citizenry of an imaginary small European kingdom, with the pomp and spectacle of its royal court.

Running through the picture is a thread of romance with real thrills glamour and heart-tug in it. The center of this is beautiful, blonde Alyce Mills, Dix's new leading woman, "Princess Elena." She is slender and tall—as all princesses should be — weighing just 122 pounds and being five feet five inches in height.

She will be remembered as Conway Tearle's leading woman in "Morals for Men," William Powell's in "School for Wives," and Lou Tellegen's in "With This Ring." Little more than a year ago, Miss Mills played a vampire role in Dix's Paramount picture, "Too Many Kisses."

AT THE REGENT

GEORGE O'BRIEN AS NOSTROMO IN "THE SILVER TREASURE," HAS FINEST ROLE OF HIS CAREER.

Surrounded by one of the most pretentious casts ever assembled at the Fox West Coast studio, George O'Brien, recognized as the screen's outstanding athletic star, gives one of the best charatcerizations ot his career as "Nostromo" in "The Silver Treasure," film version of Joseph Conrad's famous novel. This supreme attraction, which was directed by Rowland V. Lee, will open at the Regent Theatre on Monday.

Lovers of Conrad, who have longed to see the work of the master craftsman transferred to the silver sheet, will be amazed at the remarkable fidelity with which Director Lee has handled his story material. Lee, who has made a deep study of the famous Pole, seems to have caught the exact spirit of Conrad's appeal. He encountered many difficulties in photographing the dramatic sequences, but the result shows that his abiding sympathy never faltered.

Young O'Brien, as the outstanding character, rises to heights hitherto unattained in his screen work. From the outset he seemed to feel the full importance of the honor conferred by the Fox officials in selecting him to portray the Conrad lead. Although suffering from injuries received in the making of a previous picture, O'Brien would not agree to the use of a double in the strenuous fight scenes.

PETERBOROUGH WORKERS

Interesting Facts About Men Who Have Helped To Build Up Peterboro.

By Wilson Craw

AS we look back over the past Labor Day shines out along the pathway of labor's progress like a beacon light. No matter how great the struggles and sacrifices of each year there was always the satisfaction of gains made and recounted on Labor day. And the gains were always greater than the losses.

Labor organization has grown to enormous proportions in the last quarter century due entirely to the great devotion to the cause whereby the leaders would not recognize defeat. Its influence has revolutionized industry for the benefit of both the wage earner and the employer.

When labor was first organized the eight hour day was simply a dream for in those days ten hours was universally worked while many were kept at their task twelve, fourteen, sixteen, and more hours a day. The labor councils after unceasing work have placed the union movement on a firm basis and with this has come the eight hour day, Saturday half holiday, exclusion bills, compulsory education, widow's pension and many other reforms, for labor has never asked for anything that is not in the interests of the people in general. It has stood by the farmer in his efforts for economic advancement and it has always supported any practical legislation that would benefit the farmer.

With the development in labor conditions and of labor organizations the men so interested have become amongst the foremost leaders in the world and the best example of this is Ramsay MacDonald who was the upright and God-fearing premier of Great Britain.

In Peterborough, as in every town, city and village, there are men today who perhaps have not been foremost in the union but they are men who have benefitted by the work of the Labor congress. Where before conditions of labor existed involving injustice, hardship and privation, today when they return home at night they go into comfortable little bungalows which they can call their own. They have helped their home town to prosper, they have stood behind it in hard times, and in times of prosperity they worked with a vim and an enthusiasm that has put the city of Peterborough on the map. As a result of this may be found today in the thriving factories, for there is no other city in Ontario with as many large manufacturing concerns for its size and population. Everything is busy and the signs of prosperity are increasing from year to year. Some of the men who have stood behind this city in her labor problems in the past helped to build up this city and are continuing to do so.

Monuments are raised after men die to perpetuate their memory for times to come but there are men in this city who are known by their works today and who in time to come will leave behind them something that is better than a pile of stone, something that is a credit to this city and to the man that built it.

One of these men is J. J. Hartley, who has been in the contracting business in this city for years, and who has laid the brick and the stone of many of our large buildings. Mr. Hartley is a real laborman and has been engaged in labor activities in this city for many years. There are very few phases of the citys' life in which he has not been interested himself, being in the city council for ten years and on the Board of Education for fourteen years.

J. J. Hartley was born in the city of Peterborough a good many years ago on the corner of Antrim and Aylmer streets just opposite the corner where he now lives. He has spent practically his whole life in this city and has watched and helped it grow from a small town to a flourishing city. In that time he has constructed the masonry and the brick work for many of the factories, public buildings and dwellings.

When but a young man he left for the States, locating in Syracuse, N.Y., where he learnt the brick and masonry trade, but being a genuine Canadian and thinking that Canada was the land that he ought to help grow, and especially the town of Peterborough as it was then, he threw up a four dollar and a half a day job to return to his home town to work for two dollars a day. Just at this time he made a supreme sacrifice when he took up his abode with his mother, who was living alone, giving up a home of his own for her account. For four years he worked as a journeyman and then went into the contract work in partnership with the late David Carlyle who died suddenly after a couple of years. Since that time Mr. Hartley has carried on the contract work for himself.

Too numerous to mention are the buildings that he has built, for there is hardly a street in the city on which he has not left the mark of prosperity and development. A few of the most important are the Peterborough Hardware block on George street, the Bank of Commerce and adjoining buildings on Water street; the Stove Works, which later became the Carbon Works; the Cordage Works, now the Nashua Paper plant; the Shovel factory, now the Raybestos; the Crystal block on George street; the Lock Works; King George school; Y.M.C.A.; Y.W.C.A.; Isolation Hospital, addition to Queen Alexandra school; the Sunday school and wings on St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and a big addition to the Quaker Oats which was burned in the fire.

Some of the important dwellings that are the work of Mr. Hartley's hands are the houses on the corner of London and Water streets, which is now occupied by Alderman Meyers, and Robert Harstone's, Dr. Carmichael's, Dr. Burnham's and Dr. Halliday's residences.

The wages paid when Mr. Hartley started contract work were a great deal lower than they are today. Then the brick layer got twenty-five cents an hour for a ten hour day, and in 1896, when the Y. M.C.A. was built, Peterborough was going through a period of very hard times and the brick layer was receiving only a dollar and seventy-five cents for a ten hour day, and the best of laborers, for it took a little better than the ordinary man in Mr. Hartley's work, received a dollar and a dollar and a quarter a day. But times improved and with them the wages paid increased. Material then was cheap, for a thousand of bricks cost $6.00 and to-day they are twenty-one.

Mr. Hartley never had any trouble with his men in forty years of contract work for he always paid the highest wages and then employed nothing but the best of laborers. He always found it a good policy to pay good wages and then the men would be satisfied.

A union man for thirty years, he has always found the men of the union fair in their demands. The people have a misapprehension about his union, the brick layers' union, said Mr. Hartley, for a union brick layer does not have to lay a certain number of bricks a day, but it is the desire of the union that every man should do a fair day's work. The union does not believe in slavery but in honest work.

Mr. Hartley was for many years the treasurer of the union and has been for years the president of the bricklayers' union. There never has been any trouble in the union and when a man left, the union has always been willing to take him back in a very reasonable and kindly manner.

An alderman for ten years and on the Board of Education for fourteen, being chairman for two, is Mr. Hartley's record when he has been the people's representative. He was also chairman of the Board of Health for several years and is now a member of the City Trust, President of the Trades and Labor Council for four years, President of the Liberal Association in West Peterborough for twenty years, a director of the Y.M.C.A. and a member of the Little Lake Cemetery Board.

A former Noble Grand in the Oddfellows and a Chief Ranger in the Canadian Order of Foresters, and an official in George street United church are Mr. Hartley's achievements in the fraternal and religious side of life.

Peter Hamilton

The man who put Peterborough on the map in the implement manufacturing line was Peter Hamilton, who was a most prominent builder. He gave freely of his best efforts to the place of his birth, having been born in this city in 1841. He was educated in the local schools and on coming of age he entered the implement business, where he designed and constructed many agricultural implements of great merit and usefulness. He is credited with being the pioneer implement manufacturer of Ontario. At first he operated on a small scale but gradually increased his business until his name became a household word throughout the district and even wider. Hundreds of farmers were able to secure labor-saving tools only through the assistance of Mr. Hamilton. He was prominent in municipal and educational matters, serving in the City Council and being a member of the Board of Education for many years and chairman for seven years. He was a member of St. Paul's Church, and death came to him while at his post, he being stricken with heart failure on October 4th, 1912.

Henry Best

A pioneer, workman, explorer, traveller, citizen, and mayor was Henry Best, who was born in this city in 1836. He attended public school until sixteen years of age and then was an apprentice in the tinsmith trade. In 1852 he made his way by the Isthmus of Panama to the Pacific Coast, where he explored and prospected in British Columbia. Next he went to Valparaiso, Chili, where he was engaged in manufacturing wooden boxes. Not liking the country, he returned to Peterborough in 1867 and after a few years in Lindsay he bought out, in 1872, the business of James Stevenson, where he had served his apprenticeship twenty-one years before. He did a long and prosperous business and was one of the leading figures in the city's municipal life, being alderman and then mayor. He died on January 16, 1911.

One who has been instrumental in the executive work of the Labor Council and who has been deeply interested in labor work of all kind is Michael Henry Gainey, who was born in the town of Ashburnham on May 2, 1880, and who was educated in the public schools of Peterboro where he passed his entrance examination. A barber and tobacconist by occupation he has been an enthusiastic worker in the local barbers union. He has been secretary-treasurer of the Trades and Labor Council and a trustee of the same, and a delegate to the Canadian Labor Council.

In civic life Mr. Gainey was an alderman for four years and chairman of the parks committee of the council for three years. Today he is the city's representative on the Suruban Road Commission and has been the chairman of the same for the last two years.

He is a member of the Knights of Columbus and director of the Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Loan Society.

This story would not be complete without mentioning the names of Senator George H. Cox and the late James Stevenson who were instrumental in bringing the Edison Company here which has later become the Canadian General Electric and to the late George Matthews and his son, T. F. Matthews for the Canadian Packing Company, the Council of 1900 for the Quaker Oats, the council of 1912 for the De Laval, and many other men who are now gone but who have left their name behind them as the founder of some of our large industries.

Advice To The Handcuffed

(By Houdini, Count of Monte Cristo).

This service is rendered free to subscribers who find themselves in apparently inextricable positions. If you can't see your way out, ask the Count.

Dear Count:

Can you suggest a practical meth. of getting out of jail? Thanking you in advance, I am,

A Lifer.

Revered Sir:

What is the best way to escape from a powder magazine? I have been imprisoned by bandits, and I would like to get out, as there is a good movie on at the Lyceum.

Inquisitive.

Answer: Strike a match and await results.

Mr. Count:

What should one do if one were to be buried alive?

Anxious.

Answer: Think over a few incidents of your past life, such as the buying of that Lake Oil stock, the time you mixed lye with your sister's bath powder, the letters you wrote to the girl you didn't marry, and so on. This will make you feel like a worm. The rest is easy.

Honored Sir:

Fed Up.

Answer: Dear boy, take North, East, South and West Winds. Mix thoroughly. This will cause a whirlwind. Escape in the resulting confusion. Go on, ask me some more.—Dave Lamson, Stanford, '25.

A NEW MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE

A grave menace confronts the nation.

I have it from an authentic source (my brother-in-law's cousin's youngest son, who washes cars in a local garage) that a certain flivver manufacturer will soon have accumulated all the money in the world and that the medium of exchange will then become flivver parts instead of dollars and cents.

You will pick up your copy of The Examiner and read on the cover: "Price One Drive Shaft Bearing Cap Screw per Copy."

Instead of attempting to wheedle a thin dime from you, the bum who accosts you on the sidewalk will whine: "Listen, pardner, how's chances of letting me have a spindle connecting rod bolt or a crank case front bearing and spring clip assembly? I ain't had nothin' but a cuppa cawfee since yesterday morning!"

When you go into a bank to get some change you will probably say: "I'd like to have this transmission assembly changed. Let me see — you'd better give it to me in two fly wheel ring gears, four driven gear sleeve washers, five brake rod support bolts and nuts, six rear spring hanger bars and the rest in commutator pull rods and lamp and license bracket support assemblies."

STATISTICS.

Statistics are valuable because they enable persons to ascertain the true state of conditions at a glance. Words sometimes lie, figures never do. Consequently people have more confidence in figures than in words.

Advertisers appreciate this fact, and nowadays it is an inadequate staff indeed that does not number among its members at least one expert statistician.

For instance:

Ninety-three out of 100 married couples have arguments .The other 7 have separations.

Six out of 6 pedestrians are bumped sooner or later.

Two in 11 are old at 80. The other 9 are dead.

One out of 7 is a bootlegger. The others are customers.

Of 148 books and stories placed on a censor's table, 19 are "objectionable." That's all he has had a chance to read!

LABOR DAY

LABOR DAY

WHAT IT MEANS

By William Edgar

LONG, LONG YEARS AGO when that still frail and undeveloped thing which we call civilization was a tiny squalling infant, there was born into the world an uncouth lusty infant. He appeared in a humble environment, and it seemed as though he was the climax and embodiment of the rough manners and unwieldy vigor of his forebears.

Because of his lowly origin, he made no friendships at home or abroad. Children of respectable families looked askance at the grubby, hardy waif and spurned his timid, self-conscious overtures of amity; and he reached maturity, lonely and shy and wild. Long after other children had ceased to grow, he had increased in stature. While others attained the vigor of manhood and passed through the stages to old age and death, this strange creature increased in bulk with the passing of the years, until he became a giant, vast in stature, magnificent in strength and terrible when in anger. He possessed strength; but because of his ponderous frame, was without resiliency. He had another serious defect. Despite his mighty muscles and proportionate thews and sinews, this great creature never had been heard to speak. The giant was dumb.

This was a serious drawback but he had some qualities that commended him to observant onlookers. He was very docile and patient—in fact, he seemed to be almost a coward—and the combination of these qualities with his great strength appealed to the commercial instinct which manifested itself very early in the history of mankind. The kings and the great ones of the earth made him their beast of burden. His sons became their foot-soldiers and lackeys, and his daughters their hand-maidens and mistresses. In silence and submission he obeyed the behests of puny overseers whose skulls he could have crushed with one blow from his mighty fist. Day after day, smarting under the lash of the taskmaster's whip, panting and sweltering in the broiling sun, he reaped and sowed, digged and quarried, built and destroyed; his labors never ended. For a haughty prince who ruled the lands watered by the Tigris and the Euphrates, he labored to build a city that was the marvel of the earth, Babylon by name, with its palaces and towers and hanging gardens that have long since been buried under the dust of the ages; for an ambitious, superstitious monarch on the banks of the Nile, he cut huge blocks of the water-worn rocks of the Cataract and dragged them over leagues and leagues of sand hills, across the muddy flats that lined the course of the river to the barren plains of the desert. He piled these great blocks of granite and limestone, one above the other to make tombs for his master, and the Pyramids arose, fabled weird and magnificent, cemented with his blood and tears and sweat; and the Sphinx appeared above the sand and reclinedonits rocky couch, gazing across the desert, propounding the eternal riddle of the ages; that his master might worship in accordance with his aesthetic fancies, the restless horny-handed genie, raised as by magic, the great temples the gifts of the Pharaoh to his fathers, the gods; that his Egyptian master might possess the wealth of Asia and Africa, he built ships and sailed the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean to slay and plunder in distant lands. He crossed the Mediterranean into Europe and served the citizens in the pugnacious little republic of Greece, raised the Partheon, sacred to Athena, under the eye and direction of Pheidias; was bought and sold in the markets of Athens and Corinth and ministered to the wants of the generals and courtiers in the Empire of Alexander the Great. He was found on the banks of the Tiber when the little colony of rude farmers and herdsmen began its slow and painful development towards the leadership of the world. He followed in the wake of the conquering Caesars, transforming barbarian forests and swamps into smiling fields of corn and pasture; he built cities right in the heart of the lands occupied by the rude uncultured Briton or Gaul or German. And when the glory of the Caesars waned; and the grandeur of Rome became but a memory, he submissively transferred himself to the nomadic chiefs, who ruled in the halls of Augustus. The warrior knight feasted on the crops and fruits raised in the fields and orchards of his slave, lived in a tower or castle built by the weary, patient Titan, and sent him out to kill and be killed in all his many feuds. For the merchant princes of Florence, Pisa and Genoa, he brought untold wealth from ships and farms and mines; at the bidding of the Church, he reared the stately cathedrals and grand old abbeys of Europe; for the barons and princelings of High Germany, he built bridges and mills, he drained the Fens of England, and cut down the forests of Scotland. More than that, he heard of a New World on the other side of the Atlantic, and he sailed over the heaving billows and erected palaces and cities in the midst of the Indian wilderness.

And throughout all these centuries he had never been heard to speak! Some who studied him closely, asserted he did not even think. Haughty Greek philosophers, ever on the outlook for some new thing, debated with each other the question as to whether he had a soul; imperious Roman masters traded him like cattle, and frequently inflicted on him cruel and wanton punishment, merely to wile away an idle hour or a sleepless night. True, he was at one time extolled before all men, by a very poor and unworldly itinerant preacher, a man named Francis, who had a wonderfully joyous countenance and came from a town called Assisi in Northern Italy. But most men shunned him and spoke of him as a catiff, a serf, a slave.

But strange thoughts did sometimes surge through the mind of the usually submissive monster; inner questionings racked his brain and uncanny fires of resentment burned in his breast. At rare intervals, the scales dropped from his eyes and he saw himself, as he was, —friendless, oppressed and denied the enjoyment of the good things he was producing by the sweat of his brow—and the sight made him mad. Frenzied dreams haunted his imagination, he felt within him the lust to kill, the passion to destroy that which he had erected, and he became a shrieking wild-eyed demon eager to drink blood and eat flesh. Led by an "agitator" named Menestheus, he rose against the tyraninical priesthood and artistocracy of Athens in 1180 B.C., demanding the right to take part in the Eleusinian Mysteries, religious rites from which he was excluded, and when his claim was ignored, he fought with mad fury against the serried ranks of Grecian spearmen. Goaded to madness by Roman cruelty and exaction, he enlisted under the banner of a Thracian gladiator, one Spartacus, who challenged the might of Rome, and waded in Roman blood before perishing in front of the irresistible onslaught of the legions of the Emperor; under the burning words of a sullen discontented soldier in England called Wat Tyler, his sluggish spirit again took fire, and the green meadows of Kent were crimsoned with the blood of courtier and peasant, as he fought his way right into the presence of the king and saw his leader die under the royal dagger; on a warm summer day in France, he burst the bonds of centuries and became a maniac, insensate, relentless and cruel; he razed fortresses, exterminated ancient families, routed armies; he killed, he maimed, he tortured, and he watched in exultation as the descendant of a hundred kings passed into eternity under the knife of the guillotine. Drunk with blood, he shook his fist into the face of Europe, until the volcano within his breast became once more quiescent, leaving him the thrall of a designing little man, who wore a cocked hat and had a steely determined look in his eyes.

Early last century he made his first crude efforts at speech. Scornful laughter and ironic cheers greeted the attempt at self-expression. Amusement changed to anger and vindictiveness when the full realization of the unwelcome truth dawned upon an astonished world. The miracle had happended; the dumb giant had spoken. Labor, had become articulate and able to plead its own cause. Haltingly and diffidently at first, but soon attaining a deeper and richer tone, Labor proclaimed to the world its conviction that the old order must pass, and no longer was it a chattel, a serf and slave of a master, but a co-partner in the worlds work, determined to carve out its own destiny, to hold to its inalienable rights and to assume its long-vacant place in the Council Board of Humanity. Behind Labor stands an invisible host of saints and heroes, fragrant memories of causes defeated often but never conqured, an impressive list from the nameless champions exiled to Botany Bay for daring to combine their labor, down to Jean Jaures and Keir Hardie, in our own day. The statesman who would remain in office keeps his ear to the ground, early following and studying the tramp of the Labor host and the direction of Labor thought, without Labor, the mightiest army or fleet is paralyzed; if Labor were lacking, the daring of a Ford, the genius of an Edison, or the wizardry of Marconi are meaningless and their dreams idle chimera tempting but to deceive.

Labor has found itself.

That is the significance of Labor Day

PASSING THE BUCK

A Labor Of I Love Me

By C. J. Beauclerc

You all know George. He's a queer fellow, a member of the queer family. The "average man" and the "innocent bystander" are brothers of his, but even they are not so queer. "Why is he queer?" you say? Why, he does everything that nobody else will do. Sure you've heard of him. Perhaps you have even spoken of him. Whenever your lodge or church or neighborhood needs something done that will benefit you as much as everyone else concerned, but not one bit more, do you not say "Let George do it?" And George does it.

"Passing the buck" is really the great national pastime. Earning one's living by the sweat of the other fellow's brow is the ambition of many of the younger generation. Positions of authority are sought, not because of the opportunity to do something worth while, but because what work there is can be delegated to a subordinate. There is an old army story that illustrates the point.

"The colonel decided that the barracks should be thoroughly cleaned. He called his company officers and told them to look after their own portions of the work. The captains saluted, went to their company rooms, and called the platoon officers. The instructions were passed on, the lieutenants saluted, and went to their platoons. The sergeants were called, given the orders. They saluted, formed up the platoons, and assigned a duty to each man. The men couldn't salute the N.C.O.'s so they had to do the work."

But then this wasnt' really a case of passing the buck. Suppose the work had been done in a slovenly manner, and the General came for inspection. He wouldn't bawl out the privates for their carelessness in cleaning and polishing. Nor would he criticize the sergeants or captains. It would be the colonel, as the responsible head, who would have all his shortcoming pointed out to him in a forcible manner.

So in the office, when the boss takes a day off and delegates his work to a junior, it is the boss who loses if the work is not done right, or the department manager who is called up on the carpet by the directors for a mistake made by his assistant, whether he is on the job or not.

However, these are cases of letting somebody else do the work only, and taking the blame or the credit. Refusal to bear responsibility is found in many quarters. "Why should I obey the traffic laws? It is the duty of the police force to make violators alter their ways. "Why should I attend the meetings of the lodge. They might elect me to office or give me some work?" These are common expressions. The paid officials of the city or country are supposed to be all knowing and the idea of giving them a little help or a little information is not entertained for a moment. The George's in a lodge are the one that keep it going, do the work, it up with the sick brethren, and then the other fellows say they can't be bothered attending as there is a clique running affairs anyhow. Simply passing the buck.

There is an election campaign going on. One great party is being accused of gross maladministation. The other is being charged with usurping office by unconstitutional methods. The politicians are shouting their charges and their promises from the hoardings and platforms. Yet what do we find. Ask a man about the election, and unless he is a violent partisan of either party he will say he doesn't know who is going to get in and what's more, doesn't give a hoot, as all either party is thinking of is office and he can make a living under either. Try to convince him that one party or the other has done something or will do something to affect his pocket or his freedom and he says, "Apple sauce. This man coming along here will tell me the other party is better and I can't be bothered listening to either of you." He goes his way, doesn't vote, spends the next four years saying "Why doesn't the Government do this, or that?" and wonders why steps are suggested to make everybody vote. Just plain, ordinary, "Passing the buck", once more.

So it goes, Many other instances could be gleaned. Work and responsibility are left for others. No more work than necessary and no responsibility at all is the desire of many. Let Gearge do it. George runs for office, takes the responsibility for what is done. Let George do it, you said. Now George has done it. "There he goes again, trying to run things. Always pushing himself in where better men should be. That fellow has all the luck. He gets the good jobs and the honors." Thus he is greeted when he obeys that oft repeated saying, "Let George do it."

OITERS AS IS.

(A Schoolboy's Composition).

The oister, teacher says, is a bivalve. Well, so's the clam. The oister ain't got nothing on the clam, by Heck! If I had to chews between a clam and a oister, I'd close my eyes and take either one. Both are slippery, go down easy, and in the dark you can't tell the difference. Mebby the oister is a little more slippery'n the clam.

Oisters don't make good pets and they's too slippery for friends. Doctors and undertakers is the only ones very friendly to oisters, because oisters gives folks toemain poison. Oisters ain't got much ambition and spend all their days in oister beds.

Oisters ain't got only one bad habit, but that's bad enough. They will get "stewed."

In concluding, I might say oisters is peculiar, either the animal or the vegetable kind.

CROSSWORK BEDTIME STORY

Once upon a time in a place of abode or shelter located in a large compact collection of trees there existed with inherent powers a quarter dozen plantigrade carnivores with massive bodies and brief appendages.

Albeit predacious, they frequently enjoyed taking in as nourishment a certain food that is made by boiling coarsely ground grain in water or milk (or both) until it assumes a consistency. This was always served, piping hot, in concave domestic vessels.

One morning, while they were gone, une petite fille (with a mass of filaments the color of a very precious and malleable metal sprouting from the outer covering of her cranium), who had been perambulating in the immediate vicinity, remarked the strange domicile and entered it.

Once inside, she was surprised to see upon an article of furniture, with a flat horizontal top, between two and four partially filled porringers. Not being bashful, she seated herself and promptly absorbed the contents of every one of them.

When the plantigrade carnivores with massive bodies and brief appendages returned and found that their nutriment had evaporated, were they mad? You just bet they were! They commenced to search high and low for the impudent culprit. She was nowhere to be found.

Goldilocks (for that was her name) had escaped!

DIFFERENCES.

The world is full of a number of ways of describing things—a sunset for instance. You or I might say:

"Oh, look at the wonderful sunset over those hills."

The poet would say, perhaps:

"The little hills that nestle down,
All softly, tender, gray,
Are lit with faintly burning flame
That signals passing day."

While the free verser
"Look—
The sunset!
Convulsive!!
Voluptuous!!!
With sky incarnadined
Against pigmy hills,
Jade, mauve, taupe—
Variegated."

HINTS TO MOTORISTS

Most motors will start quicker if the ignition switch is turned on.

In case one of the cylinders is missing, a small ad should be inserted in the "Lost" column of The Examiner.

The principal function of the fly wheel is to keep flies off the engine.

If the motor fails to start on a cold morning, considerable action may be caused by building a bonfire under the car.

An effective method of discovering quickly wheher the gas tank is empty or not is to drop a match or cigarette into it. If the match burns slowly, the tank is empty.

If the universal joint of your car becomes stiff, a few osteopathic treatments will remedy the trouble

HOW TO KEEP A HARD WORKING HUSBAND

A Bedtime Story For Nightwatchmen

Once upon a time little Percy went to the zoo.

"Nursey," said he—for he had coined that nickname all by himself for his nurse—"Nursey, what is that animal there?"

"Shut up you brat," said Nursey.

"Ooo! Goody-goody! Then it is a giraffe!" said little Percy, full of childish excitement, you may be sure. "Why does he have such a long neck?"

"Because it's so far from his shoulders to his head," said Nursey, glad to explain. "After this you keep your trap shut."

"Nursey, how does the giraffe blow his nose?" asked little Percy, puzzled somewhat, as tiny tots often are. But Nursey did not answer.

"Are the bars to keep the monkeys in or the people out?" asked little Percy.

"Shut up. Monkeys are what people e—vol—ved from," said Nursey.

"You make me sick," said Nursey, understandingly.

"Nursey, does the kang-a-roo jump to sit or sit to jump?" asked Percy, little realizing — and I am afraid that many of my little listeners are like him — that questions sometimes become very trying.

That night, his mind still full of the zoo, little Percy said, "Nursey, tell me a bedtime story."

"All right," said Nursey. "Two men were talking, and one of them said—"

"Goody-goody!" said Percy, interrupting.

"And one of them said: 'Who was that lady I seen you walking down the street with yesterday?' And the other man said—"

"Oh, Nursey! I know what the other man said!" interrupted Percy again. Little children should never interrupt, as you know.

"What did he say?" asked Nursey.

"He said, 'That wasn't yesterday, that was day before yesterday'!" said Percy.

QUESTION BOX

Dear Ed.—I have made a bet with my next door neighbor on the coming elections. If I win, he will have to attend church in his pyjamas. If I lose, I will have to eat my straw hat with cream and sugar. My doctor advises me that eating my hat will give me indigestion. What shall I do?

Answer.—Cover yourself by placing a similar bet on the other candidate.

The Lonesome Amoeba

Alone, when eternity first began
The primeval amoeba slumbered;
Alone for an evident endless span,
Alone for cycles unnumbered.

And many a moonless, weary night
The amoeba wept in reflection
At how alone he must fight his fight
And grow wise by introspection.

Never a fellow-amœba to treat,
Never a luncheon or smoker,
Nor any barkeep or policeman greet,
Never a hand for stud poker.

Never a dear old alumnus amœba
To redrink the old drinks and rollick
Out to the game with a starry-eyed Sheba,
Never a kid to have colic.

O for a jovial mate so that he—
Or it—might live happy forever
In some sort of concert with some favored she—
Or it—not too damnably clever.

So the lonesome amœba said, "Here we begin—
"I'll part with myself" — and he parted—
"And now there are two of us, dear —a bit thin—
"But two—" and the trouble was started.

BUSINESS IS PICKING UP

"I want a radio set that will pick up Chicago," announced the brusque impatient business man, darting into the radio shop. "Very simple, sir," announced the suave salesman with a confident smile, "just be seated before the loudspeaker."

The salesman turned to a small, efficient looking set and twirled the dials. In a moment, distinctly and clearly, the announcement floated into the store: "You will now listen to Station WEBH, Chicago." A satisfied smile played over the prospective purchaser's face and the sale was closed.

Ten minutes later a native-born Californian stepped in. "Just try and pick up Los Angeles for me" he timidly suggested. "Very simple, sir," answered the enterprising salesman. Again, his skilled fingers caressed the dials. In a moment, even more clearly, the announcement was heard: "Station KHJ, Los Angeles." A look of delight illuminated the features of the diminutive Californian as he hurriedly purchased the set.

Six o'clock came and the store prepared to close up for the night. The efficient salesman walked over to the cellar door and cupped his hands. "Oh, Joe," he shouted down "come on up—it's quitting time. In a few moments Joe appeared with a telephone transmitter strapped around his chest.

"Good work, Joe," his companion announced, "we sold two sets to-day, but be sure to study up to-night on your Spanish and Irish dialects. There's a feller comin' from Mexico City and another from Killarney tomorrow to hear that set."

Facts About The Local Unions In Peterborough

The fortunes of trade unionism in Peterborough are substantially those of the movement in Ontario, and the periods of union prosperity and adversity in the city coincide with the same periods in the Province.

Trade Unionism entered the city in the later half of last century. In some cases, local unions were established; others were branches from the United States.

From the earliest days of trades unionism in Canada, the unity of interest existing between he organized workers in the Dominion and the Republic has been recognized Accordingly the principle of internationalism, so far as such term is applicable to relations between the two countries, has governed to a large degree the organization of labor in the industrial field. Unions within com[illegible] this principle [illegible] serious challenge, and [illegible] efforts have been made in Canada and elsewhere to establish unions on a purely national basis in Canada, the overwhelming majority of Canadian organized workers, whose work is deemed to make them eligible for membership in the international unions, are so organized.

With the growth of unionism, local, national and international, in Peterboro came the desire for inter-union fellowship, and a local Trades and Labor Council was set up with a charter from the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

This Trades and Labor Congress of Canada was founded 53 years ago, in 1873. It did not function again, however, until 1883. When it was reorganized it held session in Toronto on Sept. 14, 15 and 16, 1886. Since then there have been continuous annual sessions.

To get an idea of what labor organization meant in Canada in the 'seventies and 'eighties, it has to be remembered that the first North-West Rebellion was in 1870, that it took the troops three months of that year to move by portage and fur-traders' trails from Ontario to what is now the Province of Manitoba, that Winnipeg up to the late eighties was litle more than a Hudson Bay Company outpost, that the Riel Rebellion was in 1885, when the western lines of the C.P.R. were still under construction, that the population of the Dominion was much less than half what it is today, that most of the cities and industries, so to speak, and that labor organization of any sort was just passing out of the period when it was regarded as a crime for workers to combine in self-protection.

Despite the many obstacles in the path, the aims and ideals of trade unionism made headway, and the workers of Peterborough joined in the movement for better conditions of labor. In the early days at workers' gatherings in the city there was frequently heard a toast which possessed the minds of toilers on both sides of the Atlantic.

"Eight hours' work, eight hours' play, eight hours' sleep and eight shillings a day." This ideal was by no means easy of attainment, as is in evidence from the fact that on January 26, 1890, a meeting of Peterborough workers was held to discuss and urge the adoption of a nine hour day in the plants of the city. The meeting was addressed by Master Workman Elliott and Secretary Hogan.

Another red letter day in Peterborough unions occurred in the same month of the same year, when the District Assembly of the Knights of Labor held its annual convention in this city—a visit that stimulated the infant unions.

A noteworthy trial of strength between organized labor and employer was recorded on April 12, 1895, when employer and worker in the Edison Electric Works locked horns over changes made in the rules governing piecework in the factory. Many of the employees struck work in protest. A number of citizens undertook to act in mediation and a public meeting was held on April 25. The cause of the strike was very fully discussed, and the prevailing sentiment was strongly in favor of the strikers. On the 25th, a committee of citizens waited on George A. Cox, who was visiting the city, and laid the case before him. Mr. Cox expressed his sympathy with the men and referred the committee to Mr. Stephens, manager of the works, with whom an amicable settlement was reached after some negotiation, and work was resumed on May 3.

With the opening of the twentieth century came an impetus to the progress of trade unionism. It is interesting to study exactly the number of the workers whom organizers endeavored to weld together in union. In 1902, there were 800 employees in the Electric Works; 200 in the William Hamilton Company, 150 in the Peter Hamilton Company, 100 in the Peterborough Lock Works, 100 in the Auburn Mills, 200 in the Canadian Cordage Company, 60 in the three canoe works, 25 in the Turner tent factory, 100 in the Ackerman factory, 800 in the cereal plants, 100 in three sawmills, 50 in flour mills, 200 in tailors' and mantlemakers' establishments, 80 in the Matthews packing plant, 100 in three printing offices — making a total of 3,125.

Organizations sprang up rapidly, but many of them had only a brief existence. A union of Electric Workers was formed and lasted for several years, the majority of the members being drawn from the Electric Works. The Machinists received a charter on May 6, 1913, but the organization never became very strong, and at no time succeeded in raecruiting all the members of the trade in the city. The Builders, Carpenters, Stonemasons and Bricklayers, Painters and the Patternmakers were formed into unions, most of which are now extinct or in moribund condition. The Patternmakers, like the Carpet Weavers, [illegible] local union not affiliated with [illegible] international bodies, and have [illegible] appeared so far as this city is concerned.

The [illegible] Union, one of the oldest [illegible] in the city, is still in the [illegible] and is 100 per cent. strong. [illegible] Union was formed em[illegible] divisions — inside and ou[illegible] The Plumbers' Union [illegible] existence, as is also a [illegible] organization of electric employees. The Brassfinishers' Union, the Stationary Engineers' Union, the Brewery Workers' Union and the Express Workers' Union all had their day. Hanging on the walls of the Labor Hall are the charters of most of the Peterborough unions, existent and non-existent. The charter of the Tailors is dated June 1, 1902, that of the Metal Polishers, April 13, 1919, and that of the Barbers, July 2, 1902. Still existing are the Musicians' organization, the Theatrical Workers Union and the Typographical Union. The Typos form one of the best organized unions in America. This is the Union to which belong the handsome and intellectual gentlemen who set the type for the pages of The Examiner. The headquarters of the Union are in Indianapolis, and at Colorado Springs is maintained by the Union a magnificent home for members laid aside by infirmity. The Postal Workers' Union, which is fairly strong in other quarters, is in very low water in Peterborough.

In the heydey of the local Trades and Labor Council, Labor Day witnessed a colorful spectacle in the parade of the members of the various crafts in the city to the James Stevenson Park, where the sports were held. Its influence was exerted in municipal politics by the election to the Council of Aldermen Murray, Crowe, Gainey and Garside, all supported by the Trades and Labor Council, by the return to the Provincial Legislature of Thomas Tooms in 1919, and by an attempt, unsuccessful as it proved, to return T. J. McMurray as Labor member to the House of Commons in 1921.

The Trades and Labor Council has fallen on evil days. On the walls of its rooms, now so seldom occupied, hang charters of extinct societies, mute testimonies of elusive hopes, and recorders of names of pioneers who risked penury and obloquy in the cause of the working class movement.

The Business Man Writes a Letter:---

A few thousand years ago writing a letter was an undertaking acorded due recognition of impor[illegible]ce. It was not entered upon hastily or without thought. To begin with, a nice, suitable flat rock had to be found; then, after it had been cleaned and polished the letter writer would require about three days to chip out his message upon its surface. This would be done with an instrument about as suitable for the purpose as would be a modern ice pick if it were made of second rate bronze.

The modern business man growls, "Miss Robinson, w'yuh take a letter," and jerks out a few sentences puctuated by "ers," "ahs," and "no, change thats." A few minutes later he scribbles his signature and the thing is dne.

The craft of letter writing has been greatly cheapened. A hundred years ago, in the quill pen era, it was still an art. To-day the type writer has made it a trade and, oh, my Lord Chesterfield, some of the pliers of this trade!

The most poisonous combination is a man with a genius for confused dictation and a stenographer lacking punctuational sense. Their teamwork invariably produces something like this:

Silas S. Sockhound,
1994 Temple Bllg.,
Toronto.

Dear Mr. Sockhound:

With regard to your inquiry as to whether or not we are going to accept the tender for 1,000 wash-tubs which you so kindly sent us last week or not. I might say that these have been placed over our heads with another firm by the New York office, while I regret the step. Under the circumstances I feel that though your tubs were slightly lower than the others offered it may and remembering that we have placed four orders with you in the course of the last six months I am sure you will concur in this view be a wise move to place an order elsewhere, at this time I am,

Yours sincerely,
E. P. Biggle.

The telegraphic style supplies another interesting example of the mod ern art of letter writing. "Pep and Pith in every paragraph" are achieved by the wholesale use of abbreviations and the greatest possible economy in wording. A letter in this style runs somewhat in this fashion:

M. M. Mugg, Esq.,
8000 Confed'n Life Bldg.
City.

Dear Mr. Mugg:

Yrs. 30th ult. recd. Would state no action yet taken in this matter.Am at loss to understand why have not heard fro.1 Eng before this in re the matter. Expect to leave for N.Y. this p.m. but will phone you on return. Would say matter will be cleared up immediately on receipt of advices from Eng.

Y'rs etc.,
L. L. Lugg.

Wores, however, than either of the above is another type; the insipration writer, whose personality intrudes upon his every production, turns out, in answer to a letter demanding payment of a small account, something like the following:

Mr. John Smith-Smyth
The Iron Filings Corporation
Cornwall, Ontario.

My Dear Mr. Smith-Smyth,

You write asking us to pay your acount of $7.80 which I note has been on your books since two years ago last March.

Now, Mr. Smith-Smyth, our firm is anxious to co-operate with the Iron Filings Corporation in every way possible. The friendly relations which exist between this organization and the Iron Filings Corporation are a constant source of pleasure and gratification to us.

The wonderful spirit of service and unselfish co-operation which has been evidenced again and again in dealings between the Iron Filings Corporation and this company cannot be disregardel.

It is not only a duty but a pleasure to write you this letter. We are of course, not enclosing a cheque, bct we send you greetings of every good wish for continued prosperity and success.

With kindest personal and other regards, we are,

Yours very sincerely,

THE DIARY OF A DUB.

MONDAY—Met Bill Jones and his girl to-night and went out to her house and waited in front with Bill while he told her good night, so he wouldn't have to walk home alone.

TUESDAY—Bill and his girl almost drove past me this evening, but I hailed them and we went for drive. Half-way down a hill the brakes wouldn't hold the car, while I was picking a daisy that Bill's girl wanted, so they had to go on without me.

WEDNESDAY — Spent several hours with Bill and his girl in her parlor to-night, until Bill heard the fire engines on the next street. I went out and looked all over but it must have been a false alarm for I couldn't find the engines.

THURSDAY—Went out canoeing with them to-night. While Bill and I were changing places, he accidentally stumbled and pushed me into the lake.

FRIDAY—Sat in the park for a while with Bill and his girl. Bill left for a few minutes and while he was gone some thug hit me with a brick.

SATURDAY — Am hiding in my room to-night so they can't find me. I think that a young couple should be left alone once in a while.

LABOR DAY IN EUROPE

Are We Becoming Drones? By Arnold Bennett

A party of educated and experienced English tourists were wrecked one morning on an uninhabited island. The steamer sank slowly in a calm sea, and the passengers had time to put some useful bits of hand-luggage and stores into the ship's boats; but before this particular boat reached this particular island it went through some roughish, damp and exhausting oceanic adventures, in which the only two sailors on board were drowned.

However, the morning was fine, and warm, the scenery lovely, and the streams fresh; and there was no sign of cannibals or ravening beasts. When they had beached and emptied the boat a middle-aged millionaire, who had assumed command, said that the first thing to do was to light a fire, and he called on the girls for this task. All the girls said that they didn't know how to light a fire and never had lighted a fire.

"How do you manage at home?"

They replied that they just turned on a switch or they were instructed to get two dry sticks together, as the matches were soaked with sea-water, while a man with a gun went forth to shoot something. The man soon returned with a dead kid over his shoulder. But nobody knew how to dress the animal, and nobody knew how to book it. The girls said that they lived in service-flats and that when they felt hungry they rang a bell and food came: also drink.

There was a small cask of flour, but nobody had the least idea how bread was made; in their London homes bread appeared at the door in the mornings before anybody was awake. Nor could they milk a goat which the millionaire himself caught with a looped luggage-strap. They all had a notion that milk grew in sealed bottles, which usually arrived with the bread. Two girls knew how to mix a cocktail, and that was the limit of the party's culinary knowledge.

The First Day.

So that even after a fire had been lighted by means of a camera lens turned into a burning glass the party was not much better off. Still, the kid was cleaned somehow and cooked somehow, and after the girls had dabbed powder and rouge on their faces the kid was torn into morsels and eaten; and several persons had headaches later and took aspirin, of which there was a large supply.

Some clothes needed washing, but nobody knew how to wash, for at home dirty linen was moved into a motor-van and always came back in a few days more or less clean. One lady had the poor remains of a packet of Lux, which she thought she might as well employ to wash a pair of gloves.

The first day was rather trying, and it ended badly because nobody knew how to make a bed, and quite a few knew not how to undress themselves.

If the first day was trying, the succeeding days were still more so. Boredom as well as hunger afflicted them. To cut short a long and horrible story, the entire party died, for the simple reason that none of them knew how to live.

The above tale is quite untrue, but it might easily be true, and that is why I have told it.

Drones Increasing.

The fact is that a certain section of society, and not an inconsiderable nor a diminishing one, is becoming the slave of its slaves. And though of course I am not using the word "slave" in its strict meaning (but somewhat as it is used in the phrase "slave of habit"), nevertheless the history of the end of the Roman Empire is being to some extent repeated among us. The last Imperial Romans could not carry on existence without the help of slaves. And similarly a very large number of Imperial Britons would be utterly helpless without a menial or industrial class of workers.

By all this I am not predicting the fall of the British Empire. And I am not suggesting that we ought to organize our national existence with a view to the possibility of our being wrecked on an uninhabited island. I am only indicating, perhaps too picturesquely, a tendency of modern "progress" which might escape adequate notice.

The number of people who depend absolutely on others for the maintenance of their existence is beyond question increasing and will continue to increase. It must do so because the age of individualism is passing away, and an age of collectivism is taking its place.

Everybody a Specialist.

Collectivism involves specialization. It is said that a hundred people are needed to make a pin. In the same way a million or ten million people will soon be needed to make the existence of one person tolerable. And that one person will only be able to do one thing—and one little thing—for himself. There will scarcely be a man among us who would not be doomed to death if he was marooned on a desert island. Everybody will be a specialist. The all-round man will disappear.

Naturally everything will be done better than it is done today. The comforts and even the luxuries of life will multiply enormously, and more and more people will share those comforts and luxuries. Life will be easier, more convenient, more expeditious, and fuller for everybody.

A splendid prospect! Yes. But the reverse of the medal will be the sad fact that the ill-will of a small number of people can throw the whole of society out of gear. We talk of key-industries. In the future every industry will be a key-industry. All will be at the mercy of all. Even today the Government finds itself forced to take precautions lest the dissatisfaction of two per cent of the citizens who want half a crown a week more than they are getting should reduce the entire weal to starvation.

Here lies the grave disadvantage of collectivism. Already the danger is great. Soon it will be the supreme danger—not merely of this nation but of all nations of the whole civilized world. Machinery for the upkeep of goodwill and the spirit of reasonableness will have to be created if the danger is to be successfully met. Until that machinery is put together, ill-will and unreasonableness will increase, as they are notoriously increasing at the present moment.

RULES FOR GARAGE KEEPERS

If there is a lady in the car, look her over, and if her make-up doesn't suit you, push the gas nozzle in her face and say: "Have a bath on me."

When repairing any car, no matter how slightly, and if the car is fairly new, go over it carefully and put your finger marks on all the varnish. This always pleases the owner.

Always promise to have a car done at a particular time. When the owner comes for it, always say: "It will be ready next week."

When a car rolls up, walk out slowly, lean up against the rail, puff a cigar in the driver's face, and say: "Now what do you want?"

When a number of cars drive up and cluster about the gas tank for gas, always make a rule: "Last come, first served." This makes fine road feeling.

To the owner of every flivver always say: "Well, how does it feel to be driving a real car?"

THE COMPLETED VILLAGE

Stopping in a small town a travelling man said to a prospective customer:

"No."

"Well," said the travelling man, "I've been all over this country, and this is the first town I have seen that is what you might call actually finished."

A Letter Of The Contract - By Basil King

A NEW WEEKLY SERIAL

Maggie, as she is called, is the girl—or rather woman, as she appears on Edith's closer inspection—was dependent on Chipman, before his marriage, he tells his wife, and now again needs his help.

CHAPTER VII.
"You Can't Make One Law for Both."

"If she hadn't been a refined, educated sort of girl, entirely at sea in her surroundings, and stranded—stranded for money," Chipman tried to explain, "next door to going to starve—and no chance of getting a job, because she couldn't act a little bit—if it hadn't been for all that—"

"Oh, I know how you'd be generous!"

"Yes; but you don't know how I came to be a fool."

"Is there any reason why I should know—now that the fact is there?"

"Edith! What are you made of?"

She returned his look. "I think—of stone. Up till today I've been a woman of flesh and blood; but I'm not sure that I am any longer. You can't kill the heart in a woman's body—and still expect her to feel."

"But, Edith — Edith darling — there's no reason why I should have killed the heart in your body when I never dreamed of doing you a wrong—that is, an intentional wrong," he corrected.

"You knew you were doing some woman a wrong—some future woman, the woman you'd marry—as far back as when you took up what Billy Cummings dropped from his dead hands—"

"Oh that! That, dear, is nothing but talk. Men are men, and women are women." You can't make one law for them both."

"I wasn't thinking of men in general; I was thinking only of you."

"But I could hardly be expected to take it for granted—whatever men may be, or may have the right to be—that the man who asked me to marry him was already involved with another.

He moved impatiently. "But, I tell you, I couldn't get rid of her. I couldn't shake her off—or pay her off—or do any of the usual things. It was agreed between us before I married you—long before I married you—that everything was at an end. But, poor soul, she doesn't know what an agreement is. There's something lacking in her. She's always been like a child, and of late years she's been more so. At any rate, she has no right to haunt like a shadow the man who's befriended her—"

"But, I presume, she's befriended him. And—and continues to 'befriend' him—since that's the word."

He avoided her eyes, and whistled tunelessly beneath his breath.

"I said—continues to befriend him," she repeated.

The tuneless whistling went on.

She allowed him time to get the full effect of her meaning. As far as she could see her way, her line of action depended on his response. When he dodged the question she knew what she would have to do.

"Look here, Edith," he said, at last, "the long and short of it is this. She's on my hands—and I can't abandon her. I must see that she's provided for, at the very least. Hang it all, she's—she's attached to me; has been attached to me for more than ten years. I can't ignore that; now, can I?"

"No; I dare say not."

"But I'll undertake never to see her again—of my own free will."

She shook her head. "Oh, I'm not asking for that."

"Then what do you ask for? Just tell me, and whatever it is—"

"It's that, since you can't abandon her, you abandon me."

CHAPTER VIII.
The Break.

"What?"

She repeated the words more firmly.

"Never."

"Then I'm afraid it will be for me to abandon you." She gave him a little nod. "Good-bye."

She had turned and taken a step or two along the pavement before his astonishment allowed him to overtake her.

"Edith, for God's sake, what do you mean? You're not crazy, are you?"

"Quite possibly I am; I can't tell yet. Or perhaps I can tell. It's like this," she went on, after an instant's thinking. "A half-hour ago, while I was talking to that—that poor creature—before you came up—I was quite aware of being like a woman with a dose of cyanide of potassium in her hand, and doubting whether or not to take it. Well, I took it. I took it and I—died. That is, the Edith who was your wife—died. What survives of her personality is something else."

"Oh, don't!" he groaned. "Don't talk that way. Come in. You can't stay out here."

She looked over at their house. He thought she shuddered. "I can't stay out here; but I don't have to go in—there."

"What do you mean? Where are you going?"

"I'm going to Aunt Emily's."

"And do you think you'll be able to bear our being separated when you know I adore you? Why, you'll break down within an hour."

"That's just it. That's why I must hurry, I shall break down within half an hour. You don't suppose I can go on like this? I'm almost breaking down now. I must get to Aunt Emily's before—"

She was interrupted by a cry: "Hello, papa!"

Up the pathway two little white-suited men came prancing and screaming. The governess marched primly and sedately behind them.

"You see?" Edith said, quickly. "I must go. I can't see them tonight—or speak to them—or kiss them—or hear them say their prayers—or anything. You wouldn't understand; but—but I couldn't bear it. You must tell them I've gone to spend a few nights with Aunt Emily, as I did when she was ill. You must say that to the servants, too. Tell Jenny she needn't send me anything—yet. I have some things there—that I left the last time—"

"You are risking your happiness and mine."

She shot him a reproachful glance. "Do you say that?"

"Yes, Edith, I do say it. If I've broken the letter of the contract, you may be transgressing its spirit. Don't forget that. Take care. What I did, I did because I couldn't help it. You can help it—"

The children caught their father round the knees. Stooping, he put his arms about them, urging them toward their mother. They were to plead for him—to be his advocates.

But, when he raised himself, Edith was already walking swiftly up the avenue.

CHAPTER IX.
The Wife's Poor Privilege.

It was a strange sensation to be free. It was still more strange that it was not a sensation. It was a kind of numbness. She could only feel that she didn't feel. In spite of her repeated silent assertions, "I'm free! I'm free!" any consciousness of change eluded her.

It was true that there had been a moment like a descent into hell, from which she thought she must come up another woman.

Aunt Emily and the lawyer had whirled her somewhere in a motor. Veiled as heavily as was consistent with articulation, she had told a tale that seemed abominable, though it was no more than a narrative of the facts.

But even the horror of that moment passed, as something too unreal to be other than a dream, and, except that she and the children were staying with Aunt Emily instead of in their own home, all was as before. All was as before to a disappointing degree—to a degree that maddened her.

It maddened her because it brought no appeasement to that which for more than a year had been her dominating motive—to do something to Chip that would bring home to him a realizing sense of what he had done to her.

It was not that she wanted revenge. She was positive as to that. She wanted only to make him understand. Hitherto he hadn't understood.

If he had said but once: "Edith, I know I've sinned against you; I know I've made you suffer; I've broken the contract between us; I'm repentant; forgive me," it might have been different.

But he had said nothing of the kind. His letters, beseeching though they were, only aggravated her complaint against him. "What else could I do? . . . . The poor thing clung to me . . . As far as it affected my devotion to you it might have happened in another phase of creation." That was the amazing part of it, that he should expect her to be content with such an explanation, that he should try to deprive her of a wife's last poor pitiful privilege, a sense of indignity. She was not only to condone what he had done, but as nearly as possible she was to give it her approval.

As to this aspect of the case she might not have been so clear if it hadn't been for Aunt Emily. According to Aunt Emily, the man didn't live who was worthy of a really good woman's love. It was foolish for a really good woman to put herself at the disadvantage of casting her pearls before—well, Aunt Emily was too much of a lady to say what; it was all the more foolish considering the quantity of feminine tag-rag and bobtail quite good enough to be wives.

CHAPTER X.
Two of a Kind.

In the following autumn Edith went abroad. She didn't know what else to do. Aunt Emily was rich and kind; but there were limits to hospitality. Besides, it was easy to travel while the children were so young. The lawyer conveyed to Chip her intention of taking them, and returned with the father's consent.

She was not bound to ask for this, but she considered it courteous to do so. If, while she did it he chose to take the opportunity to recognize her continued existence by an inquiry or a word—well, then, she said to herself with a sob, it was there for him to make use of.

But he didn't take it. He maintained the silence on which he had fallen back ever since a final peremptory letter from her requesting him not to write to her—she wondered if she had made it more peremptory than she had intended!—and so she sailed away without so much as a gift from him to the children.

When the cold weather came she established herself at Cap d'Ail, where the lofty perch of the hotel above Monaco and the Mediterranean seemed to lift her into a region of friendly, flowery peace. She enjoyed this as much as she could enjoy anything.

With a book she hardly looked at in her hand she could sit at her window or on the terrace, soothed incomprehensibly by the blue-green sweep of the immemorial sea beside which so many other sad hearts had watched before her own. She felt herself caught into a fellowship that included not only Hagar and Hecuba, but myriads of unremembered women whose tears alone might have filled this vast inland ocean—drawing a comfort that was not wholly morbid from the reflection that there was an end even to the breaking of hearts.

She would gladly have spent the winter alone with her children and their governess had there not arrived at the hotel a woman she had known for many years and who was in a position oddly similar to her own. At school she had been Gertie Cottle. In New York she was Mrs. Harry Scadding.

She was now Mrs. G. Cottle Scadding for purposes of exact identification. She also had "freed herself;" she also traveled with two children.

It was impossible for Edith not to meet her and engage in amicable conversations, during which the lady talked freely of her "case," discussing the merits and demerits of her "co-," as though that person had been a kind of partner!

Gertie was a lively young woman, frank and amusing. Moreover, she knew the people who made up Edith's small world. While the two sets of children played together the two mothers sat on the terrace and talked.

It was talk in which Edith was chiefly a listener, but a listener who couldn't deny that she was entertained. She was uncomfortable only when discerning compatriots appeared and with visible nods and smiles rated them as "two of a kind." She began to be sorry for the "kind." Instead of shrinking from Gertie in the presence of the discerning compatriots, she made it a point to be seen with her, championing the sisterhood of loneliness.

CHAPTER XI.
The Frenchman.

Sometimes Edith grew fanciful with regard to the other Americans in the hotel. She imagined they slighted her, or disapproved of her, or watched her course with misgiving. With a certain family of good, simple people, she would have been glad to establish relations; but she never got beyond an occasional bow or smile, generally over some incident connected with the children.

Of one man she was afraid. She was afraid of him without knowing why, except that he seemed to watch her rather pityingly. She resented the pity; she resented his watching her at all. And yet . . .

If he hadn't been a grave man, evidently occupied with grave affairs, her resentment might have become annoyance. In the circumstances it was resentment modified by a little gratitude. She hardly understood her gratitude unless it was for a solicitude in a world where no one seemed to bother about her any more. He

He did bother about her. She grew sure of that.

She had no idea who he was. All she could affirm from distant and somewhat superficial observation was that he was Somebody—Somebody of distinction, position, experience, and judgment.

He roused her curiosity, even while the kind of interest in herself which she attributed to him—with what she admitted were the most shadowy of reasons—hurt her pride. It hurt it in a manner to make her the more resolute in going her own way.

Not that it was a really reprehensible way. The worst that could be said of it was that it brought her into contacts and promiscuities from which she should have been kept free. Even so no great harm had been done, especially in the case of a woman with her knowledge of the world.

None had been so much as threatened until the arrival on the scene of a young Frenchman, a friend of Mrs. Scadding's. Edith then found it necessary to submit to an introduction with daily, almost hourly, hazards of encounter.

He was a young Frenchman like many hundreds of his kind, who might have been a finished sketch in sepia. Gertie flirted with him outrageously—there was no tober phrase for it. It was the kind of flirting one was obliged to consider innocent, since the alternative would have been too appalling. Edith hoped for the innocent construction, lending an abashed countenance to the situation out of loyalty to the sisterhood of loneliness.

It was a countenance that grew more abashed whenever, in the process of lending it, her eye met that of the man who had constituted himself, she was convinced, her silent guardian.

Fortunately, Mrs. G. Cottle Scadding took herself off to Italy, the young Frenchman disappearing at the same time. It was a new proof to Edith of the depth of need to which she had come down that she missed them. She missed their frivolity and inconsequentiality because they were the only interests she had. She was thrown back, therefore, on her own desolation and on her memories of Chip.

She made the discovery with some alarm that Chip was becoming to her more and more the center of a group of memories.

She was losing him. That is, she was losing him as an actuality; she was losing him as the pivot round which her life had swung, even since her knowledge of his great treason. She was no more appalled by the loss than by the perception of her own volatility.

CHAPTER XII.
Sir Noel Ordway.

It was a perception that deepened when, some fortnight after Gertie's departure, the young Frenchman reappeared.

"He's come back on my account," was Edith's instant reflection. She was Edith's instant reflection. She was indignant; and yet something else stirred in her that was not indignation, and to which she was afraid to give a name.

Perhaps there was no name to give it. As far as she could analyze its elements, they lay in the twin facts that she was still young enough to be attractive to men and to find pleasure her attractiveness.

The young Frenchman reached the point of inviting her to dine with him at Monte Carlo and look in at the gaming afterward. She declined this invitation gently and without rancor toward him; but it made her think.

She discovered she was a woman whom a relatively strange man might invite to dine with him alone. She had passed out of the fellowship of Hagar and Hecuba to enter that of Mrs. G. Cottle Scadding. She had laid herself open to hearing those words, spoken ever so respectfully, with a sympathy no American would have approached:

"Madame is so lonely. Madame is too much by herself. Wouldn't it distraire Madame to dine tonight, let us say, at Ciro's, or the Hotel de Paris, and look in at the Casino afterward? Madame is always so sad."

The m n w s too insignific nt for her wrath, but not so insignificant that he couldn't be a warning. He was a warning that even if he failed to touch her heart it was by no means certain that another man might not succeed; and not long afterward a man did.

That was Sir Noel Ordway. She had met him almost at once after moving to Cannes. She moved to Cannes practically on the advice of the distinguished stranger.

OCHONE!

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Finnigan, sure an' I just passed your old man comin' down the road. It's no wonder ye love him it's a fine lookin' man that he is!!"

"Ach, Danny Hogan! It's the flattering tongue the divil has put into your head that'll be the ruination of ye yit!"

"Arrabh, Mrs. Finnigan, an' why shouldn't he a fine lookin' man with a wife that's the prettiest in the town, as who doesn't know it?"

"You're a fine man, Dan Hogan, to be standing there with your good looks an' your blarney carryin' on so to a poor woman that's man is always away at the salons from now till supper time."

"Ye dan't tell me, Mrs. Finnigan! An' here's myself would sooner be sipping some o' that tea you'll be makin' than all the beer that's ever brewed."

"Would ye care for a cup?"

"Well, I might at that.'

"Ye'll have to be quick about it for that husband of mine may be comin' back at this moment, an' him that jealous, the owl-face!"

"Sure, then, I think I'll be on my way then, for if I should see his ugly face it would spoil my appetite entirely so it would. Good day to ye Mrs. Finnigan."

"Good day Mr. Hogan!"

Leafs Win Second Game of Series With Baltimore

TO COMPETE IN FINAL PLAY-OFFS FOR LADIES' OPEN GOLF TROPHY

Present Title Holder and Ottawa Girl To Contest For Championship.

PLAYED REAL GOLF.

Feature in Semi-Finals Shows the Value of Short Game.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 4 (Canadian Press)—Miss Ada Mackenzie, Mississauga, Toronto, and Miss Helen Paget, of the Royal Ottawa Club, earned the right to play off for the title of Canadian Ladies' open champion, at present held by Miss Mackenzie, when they won their semi-final matches yesterday at the Elmhurst course here.

Miss Mackenzie played golf of real championship calibre to dispose easily of her youthful opponent, Miss Cecil Eustace Smith, of York Downs, Toronto, by a margin of 7 and 6, while Miss Paget, who holds the Canadian closed title, outplayed Mrs. Vera Hutchings, of the Jericho Club, Vancouver, in the short game to win by 3 and 2.

The match between Miss Paget and Mrs. Hutchings, which carried the chief interest of the day, was a real example of the value of the short game and the breaks. The Pacific Coast player had a marked superiority in the long game, being ahead from the time practically at all times, but her putter failed her miserably at times. Miss Paget, on the other hand, was deadly around the green. Miss Paget took the first two holes, and was never headed thereafter.

Mrs. Hutchings squared the match at the seventh, but Miss Paget took advantage of her opponent's mistakes at the eighth and ninth to win both and turn for home two up. The lead was increased to three at the tenth, again due to Mrs. Hutchings failing on the green, and although the Vancouver player played better golf on several of the remaining holes than her opponent, the situation remained unchanged at the sixteenth after a succession of halved holes.

Miss Ada Mackenzie gave Miss Smith absolutely no chance after the first hole, where she took three putts, but still won the hole, playing wonderful golf, the champion negotiated the first eight holes in a heavy wind in 35, only letting Miss Smith in twice for halves. The latter's first win came at the ninth where Miss Mackenzie sliced out of bounds from the tee, and was thus able to turn five up. The lead went to six at the eleventh, 235 yards up-hill, where Miss Mackenzie drove for a perfect three, and Miss Smith just failed to get down along for a half. The twelfth saw some loose play by both but Miss Mackenzie won it for the match when she chipped dead from a deep trap at the right of the green.

The scores of both semi-finals follows:

Miss Mackenzie:
Out ....544 354 356—43
In 535

Miss Smith:
Out ....655 456 656—48
In 546

Miss Paget:
Out ....456 346 655—44
In 545 545 5

Mrs. Hutchings:
Out ....565 355 566—46
In 645 545 5

Miss Helen Paget, Royal Ottawa, beat Mrs. Vera Htuchings, Jericho, Vancouver, 3 and 2.

Miss Ada McKenzie, Mississauga, Toronto, beat Miss Cecil Eustace Smith, York Downs, Toronto, 6 and 6.

Consolation:

Mrs. E. W. Whittington, Toronto Golf Club, beat Mrs. J. J. Ashworth, Toronto Golf Club, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Maude Ross, Royal Ottawa, beat Miss Evelyn Mills, York Downs, Toronto, at the 19th.

SECOND WOMAN TO CONQUER CHANNEL

Mrs. Clemington Corson of New York, formerly Mademoiselle Millic Gade of Denmark, who successfully swam the English channel on Saturday, is shown at the upper left with her two children, "Sonny," aged four, and Marjorie, two and a half. At the upper right she is shown in swimming garb, prepared to plunge into the water. At the lower left she is shown being fed by her trainer, Kelingley, during a trial swim. At the lower right she is shown being fed by her trainer, Kelingley, during a trial swim. At the lower right she is shown in swimming. She is only 27 years of age. She covered nearly 40 miles in 15 hours and 32 minutes. She and Gertrude Ederle may race around Manhattan Island for a purse of $25,000.

TORONTO ADDS ANOTHER GAME TO LEAD MARGIN

International League Leaders Win Second Game From Baltimore.

BISONS DEFEAT KEYS.

Three Runs in Second Inning Gives Canucks the Lead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—The Toronto steam-roller continued on its crushing way yesterday and the International League leaders added to their margin by turning back Baltimore, 7 to 2. Jess Doyle pitched masterly ball for the Canucks, and had the game in hand throughout. Three runs in the second gave the Leafs a lead which would have won the game. The Orioles used Henderson and Harwood in an effort to check the upward rush of the opposition.

The Newark Bears were idle, while Buffalo strengthened its hold on third place by once again walloping the Reading Keys, 15 to 4. Dyer held Jersey City to two hits and Syracuse annexed a 2 to 0 shutout.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, the Central League serious is all over, and Mister Joe Daley and his boys is boss for the year. They never was no doubt in my mind that they wasn't a better ball club than Belleville, and they proved it by taking the final game right in Belleville. Incidentally, Mister Daley showed the Peterboro bunch something when he volunteered to play the last game in Belleville's own backyard rather than take the long trip to Kingston. The Petes woulda had a much better chance if they had done the same thing in their clash with Mister Gerow's talent. There ain't no reason weeping over spilled beans, however, although I for 1 figger the Petes oughta played off with Kingston.

If Mister Daley and his gang'll go on and upset the Oslers again, my hat'll be in the air for them, although I hope the Ponies won't quit before the race is over like they did last year. They're carrying the colours of the Central loop and it's up to them to go on to the finish.

Our young Crescents, representing Peterboro in the intermediate race, was spilled out by Port Hope in a sudden death game Wed. Mister Bob Chalk, Mister Alex. Hills and other ancient members of what was once Port Hope's Central Leaguers, trotted their old bones out on the diamond and just managed to squeeze a 1 run lead over the youngsters. Them Hopers was always a tough bunch to beat at home, and they had a big edge on the Crescents in experience. So all things considered, the kids deserve a lot of credit for doing as good as they done.

The Firemen ain't a easy lot to put out as the Kingston softballers has discovered. The local winners win handily in Kingston, and on Sat. they tackle Oshawa. It looks as if Chief Gimblett's gang will before long be bumping into the winners from the Chief's old home town, Hamilton, where they'd rather play softball than eat—and at that they ain't bad with the knife and fork either.

Meanwhile the lads is getting ready for rugby. They is a lotta material around and a good season should be seen.

I for 1 hope so because it's a long jump between the baseball and the hockey season.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

DRYS FORECAST ARID CONGRESS

Predictions of U. S. Results Are Based on Primary Votes.

ATTACK REFERANDA

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 3.—(By John Snure, Canadian Press Correspondent).—The drys ars already claiming the next Congress. Not only that, but they predict the next Congress will have substantially the same number of drys as the present Congress. In other words, they expect it to be strongly against the wets.

Predictions of this nature have been made by Anti-Saloon League chiefs and other dry leaders. They base these forecast on results of the primaries thus far. Their analysis of the primary results both in making nominations for the House and the Senate, tends to indicate the nomination of so many drys that it is quite clear the wets will be unable to gain conrol of either branch of Congress. As a matter of fact, no well-informed observer of the situation has had any notion the wets would gain control of either House or Senate at this time, although some of the enthusiastic wets have made predictions of a great upheaval in this year's elections.

The real question which is yet unanswered is whether the wets make substantial gains in the November elections. It will be impossible to tell this until the ballots are counted and an anaysis of the membership of the new Congress made. While the drys insist they will control the new Congress in the same degree as they control the present one, the wet leaders by no means concede it.

Gains by the wets will quite evidently not be such as to enable them to control either branch of Congress but on the other hand if the wets should make considerable gains the moral and political effects, as well as legislative effects would be far from negligible. Gains in strength in Congress would unquestionably increase the militancy of the wets and would lead them to enter at once on a campaign to make still further headway in 1928. If the drys gain in strength in the face of all the efforts of the wets this year, the result can hardly fail to be a backset to the wets, while highly encouraging to the drys.

The drys do not concede the differn referenda in states this year, such as the one in New York, can have any effect. They assail the referenda as propaganda for the wets. Still, there is another side to it. Should referendums show a number of states are wet, especially states that favored ratification of the eighteenth amendment, it would give Congress and government officials something to ponder on. Dry leaders say prohibitionists will keep away from the referenda and not participate in them, a fact which brings from wet leaders the comment that the drys fear an open fight through a referendum.

YANKEES SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER WITH ATHLETICS

Cuts New Yorker's Lead To Five and a Half Games.

RALLY IN SEVENTH.

In Second Game Babe Ruth Smashed His 41st

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—The Yanks split a doubleheader at Philadelphia yesterday, while Cleveland was defeating Detroit, and the New Yorkers' lead was cut to five and a half games. The Athletics won the first game, 7 to 2, and lost the second, 7 to 4, the Yanks coming from behind in the nightcap with a five-run rally in the seventh inning. In the second game Babe Ruth made his 41st home run of the season. Grove was pitching at the time and no one was on base.

The Indians won from Detroit, 9 to 1, for their eighth straight victory. It was Uhle's twenty-third win of the season.

Boston ran up a total of thirteen consecutive defeats when Washington copped both games of a doubleheader at Boston yesterday. The scores were 3 to 2 and 5 to 1. The first game went ten innings, Goslin's triple and Myers' double settling the issue.

Only three games were scheduled.

REDS CUT CARDS LEAD TO GAME IN THE NATIONAL

Wild Throws in First Allows Two Runs For Cincinnati.

TIGHT IN PINCHES.

World's Champions Take Ten Innings Battle From the Cubs.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—Carl Mays pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 4 to 2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals at Cincinnati yesterday, and the Cards' lead at the top of the National League was cut to one game. Each team made seven hits, but the Reds' submarine twirler was airtight in the pinches. St. Louis used Haines and Bell on the mound. A wild throw by L. Bell in the first allowed the Reds to gather in two runs, but St. Louis tied it up in the second. One run in each of the fifth and sixth innings gave Cincinnati its margin. O'Farrell, St. Louis catcher, had two triples.

Meanwhile, the Pirates in third place, kept on the heels of Cincinnati by taking a ten-inning twirlers' battle from the Cubs at Chicago, 3 to 2. Hill, purchased by the Pirates from Indianapolis, pitched for the world's champions. He allowed ten hits but was steady and was given support. Tony Kaufmann allowed only two hits to the Pirates for nine innings but weakened in the tenth and was touched for three successive singles.

The Giants returned to the Polo Grounds after a disastrous road trip and wrecked vengeance on the hapless Boston Braves, who succumbed, 17 to 3. Five runs in the fourth and twelve in the fifth inning gave the Giants the game.

Brooklyn entertained the Phillies and incidentally won a ball game, 4 to 3. Jess Petty held the Quakers to eight scattered singles.

YOUNG DEFEAT OLD IN ART OF LAYING EGGS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. — The younger of the hen species is more prolific than her older sister, according to records of an egg-laying contest just received by the Department of Commerce from Buenos Aires.

The best record achieved by hens was by a White Wyandotte, which laid 131 eggs during the eight months. A team of White Leghorn pullets also laid a total of 810 eggs to the best total of 614 by six White Wyandottes among the hens.

CHEVROLET

First to get away!

YOU'LL find the Smooth Chevrolet always in the front of the traffic line. At the sound of the whistle or the sight of the word "Go", the smooth Chevrolet is first to get away.

Chevrolet will run rings around large, cumbersome cars—weaving in and out of traffic with an ease that is almost uncanny. Chevrolet may be turned completely around in the width of an ordinary road. It can be parked with ease in a surprisingly small space. It will gather speed on hills where bigger, costlier cars slow down. And always the Chevrolet driver knows that, pulsating quietly beneath the hood, is abundant power that will not fail him in an emergency, while Chevrolet, above any cars in its class, possesses the smoothness that makes driving—either fast or slow—a source of pleasure and satisfaction.

The Smoothest Chevrolet in Chevrolet history is selling at the Lowest Price for which Chevrolet has ever been sold in Canada.

LEAGUE COUNCIL ADOPTS REPORT ON NEW SEATS

Gives Germany Permanent and Spain Semi-Permanent Seat.

SENT TO ASSEMBLY.

World Court Committee Is Comparing Rules With Reservations.

GENEVA, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press). — The League of Nations Council to-day adopted the report of the commission on re-organization of the Council, providing for the creation of three new non-permanent Council seats and designating Germany as a permanent seatholder as soon as she is elected to League membership.

The League of Nations leaders plan to elect Spain to a semi-permanent seat in the League Council at the forthcoming assembly, despite Spain's probable absence from the Assembly. They hope this will induce the Madrid Government to abandon any idea of resigning from the League.

Sweden Opposes Increase.

Sweden alone expressed the opinion that there should be no increase in the number of non-permanent seats. After approving the report, the Council forwarded it to the Assembly, with a recommendation that it be adopted by that body.

The Council also instructed the League's Secretary - General, Sir Eric Drummond, to forward to Spain's representative reorganization the commission's resolution expressing regret that the Madrid Government's desire for permanent representation on the Council could not be met at the present time.

Viscount Ishii, of Japan, in reporting the commission's conclusions, was successful in having the Council pass a resolution to the effect that German alone should be elected to a permanent seat at the present session.

Study Court Rules.

The first meeting to-day of the committee of fourteen which is to carry on the work of the World Court conference, convoked to examine the five reservations to the United States adherence to the court, was devoted exclusively to juridical study of the court's regulations.

The object of the study is to determine how far the regulations as at present framed make it possible to accept the reservations.

ASSAULT ON GUARD QUICKLY PUNISHED

Two Prisoners at Pembroke Sentenced Next Day To Long Terms.

PEMBROKE, Ont., Sept. 4.—Quick and even handed justice was meted out in Pembroke Friday morning, when Ben Lalonde, aged 26, of Montreal, and his brother, Henry Lalonde, were sentenced to five and three and one-half years respectively in Kingston Penitentiary for an attempted jail break and assaulting Turnkey T. Boland, Thursday evening.

About five o'clock Thursday evening when Turnkey Boland had entered the corridor to unlock the cell doors the elder Lalonde, who had a short piece of iron concealed in his coat sleeve, suddenly attacked him, striking him on the back of the head and inflicting a severe cut. Boland, although almost overcome by the blow, grasped the prisoner and shouted for help. The younger brother, who had a stick of wood in his hand, belabored Boland about the head. Jailer William Brown, who was in the building, heard Boland's cry and immediately rushed to his assistance. When he arrived within the space of a few seconds, Boland and Lalonde were engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle and as he entered the younger prisoner backed away. Mr. Brown at once took a hand in the affray and handed the elder Lalonde a knockout with his fist. Both prisoners were then placed in their cells and medical assistance summoned for Turnkey Boland, who is rapidly recovering from the effects of the assault. The two Lalonde brothers had been in the jail but five days, having been sentenced for six months on Monday for burglarizing a store at Bisset's, some 80 miles west of Pembroke.

Too Many People Guess About Their Eyes

In fact, we believe most folks do that. It seems they try to make themselves believe they have normal sight rather than submit to an examination to learn the true condition of their eyes. Such an attitude is decidedly unwise. Why not give your eyes the consideration they deserve? Glad to be of service to you.

FIVE BADLY HURT IN CAR COLLISION

Sedan Skids on Wet Pavement and Runs Into Bus.

OSHAWA, Sept. 4 (Canadian Press).—Five persons were injured two of them seriously, when a sedan carrying five members of the Six Nations Indians lacrosse team of Brantford, collided with a Toronto Transportation Commission bus about 2 miles west of Whitby about eight o'clock this morning. The bus was conveying thirty-five employees of the W. E. Phillips Company, Limited, to the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. The sedan, which was driven by R. W. Green, of Caledonia, Ontario, skidded from behind another car and crashed into the bus on the slippery pavement, according to Eric A. Bright, driver of the bus. Mr. Bright showed presence of mind in steering the bus into a ten foot ditch, averting serious injuries to the passengers. The bus was not greatly damaged, but Mrs. James Higgins and son were slightly injured by broken glass. The sedan was completely wrecked and after the collision burst into flames. The five men who were injured were taken to Oshawa Hospital, where their condition is regarded as serious. The injured are Frank Hill, Elm I. Hill, Richard Fallis, Herbert Hiss, and Rev. Green.

STOCK MARKETS.

Waite-Montgomery Ackerman.

Interesting developments are taking place on the Waite-Montgomery copper-zinc gold property, which is located on the line between Duprat and Dufresnoy in North-Western Quebec. The Waite is located somewhat over seven miles to the northwest of the famous Horne property. The sensational surface discovery made about sixteen months ago has caused this property to be regarded as second in prominence only to the Horne itself. Following the surface work of last summer an intensive diamond drilling campaign was entered upon. No less than six ore bodies were located with the diamond drill. On an extremely conservative basis it is estimated that probable ore reserves are not less than $11,000,000. Most of this ore can be taken out by glory-holing.

Diamond drilling was halted several months ago and attention was concentrated on surface work. It was proposed to use electrical prospecting methods to locate other ore bodies, but up until the present this equipment has not been made available for use on the Waite claims. It is now understood that diamond drilling is to be resumed immediately.

Not a little interest is added to the Waite by reason of the acquirement of a majority interest by N. A. Timmins, Inc. There has been much speculation among followers of mining affairs as to when Mr. Timmins would make an offering of the stock. He is bound to do something within two years, but it has seemed likely that a decision would take place to incorporate the company at a much earlier date. The plan to show up more ore with the diamond drill may possibly be considered a prelude to the corporation. A limited amount of Waite participation units have been in the hands of the public for the last three or four months. The current market level for these units is $800 to $815, and on the basis of the latest bid price this would put a market valuation of $8,000,000 on the property.

The progress that is being made in bringing the Horne Mine into production is also carrying the Waite within sight of the production stage. The logical procedure would appear to be to erect a concentrating plant on the Waite and to ship the concentrator to the Horne smelter. The prospective completion of the branch railway line within about two months is important in its bearing upon the future of all the mining properties close to its right of way.

AMULET LOCATES MAIN ORE BODY AT 150 FEET.

COBALT, Ont.—Advices just received from the Amulet Gold property in the Rouyn district confirm recent rumors of favorable developments.

It is now officially confirmed that the main ore body has been encountered at the 150 foot level, thus adding immensely to the ore reserves. The information states that in both the east and west drifts this level is in high grade ore.

As this has already been shown on the surface and at the 75 foot level, this announcement is the most important which Amulet has yet been able to send out.

Just how much this will add to the value of the property cannot be accurately known until further information is at hand. The Company's ore reserves had been previously estimated at $3,500,000, and it is admitted that this will be greatly increased by the new find. 1d-56-2859.

DIES SUDDENLY.

TORONTO, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press.)— Stricken suddenly in the lobby of a local hotel, George R. Bauch, a prominent manufacturer of Rochester, N.Y., died here to-day. Bausch was a member of a party from Rochester which had spent some time in Northern Ontario on a fishing and hunting trip and was returning home after stopping over night in Toronto. They had intended going on to Rochester to-day. Dr. Williams, a member of the party, was nearby when Bausch collapsed and rendered medical aid. He pronounced the cause of death to be "angina pectoris."

TWO REMEDIES TO STOP GLARE

Chief Recommends Darkening Lower Portion of Lens.

COMMENDS TESTS.

Two very simple remedies for glaring headlights were described to The Examiner this morning by Chief of Police Samuel Newhall. One consists of having the lower portion of the lens darkened sufficiently to check the beam of light from travelling at an angle which causes it to dazzle the eyes of an approaching driver. The other device consists of having a small screen at the bottom of the lens, which has a similar effect.

The Chief expressed his gratification at the results achieved by the headlight tests conducted last week by the Kiwanis Club.

OBITUARY.

RUSSELL V. COPPING

Prominently identified with the municipal affairs of Peterboro', where he served as Alderman prior to his return to his native city, Toronto, four years ago, Russell V. Copping, who was in his thirty-sixth year, passed away suddenly on Thursday following four days' illness.

In business life, Mr. Copping was associated with the Brinton Carpet Company, Peterboro', his late father, prior to his death in 1915, having been President of the concern. Mr. Copping also found time to discharge the duties of a director of the Chlidren's Orphanage there.

Educated at St. Andrew's College, the decedent took a keen interest in golf and other sports. He was a member of the Argonaut Club, and attended St. Enoch's Church. His parents lost their lives when the Lusitania was sunk in May, 1915. The news came as such a shock that Mr. Copping's heart was affected, and he never fully recovered.

His widow, who resides at 140 Silver Birch Avenue, survives.

TO HOLD CONFERENCE.

Miners Will Discuss Resumption of Negotiations With Ministers.

LONDON, Sept. 4.— (Canadian Press.)—The Mines Department announced to-day that representatives of coal mine owners and the coal committee of the Cabinet will meet on Monday afternoon to discuss the calling of a conference of owners and workers.

This is the only item of progress noted to-day toward settlement of the coal strike. The week end holiday was observed as usual by nearly all the banks, and the leaders of the business and industrial world. A decided effort will e made early in the week to bring together the opposing interests in the strike and secure a basis for negotiations now that the miners have shown some spirit of compromise.

Cardin Admits King's Only Chance Is Group Government

VOTE CONSERVATIVE AND AVOID ANOTHER ELECTION

It cannot be too strongly emphasized in the present campaign that any hope that Mr. King has of forming the next government lies in the possibility that a combination of Liberals, Progressives and Indepdents will be able to outvote the Conservatives.

Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, in charge of the Liberal campaign in Quebec, said so only last Saturday.

He frankly told a Quebec audience that "with the help of our old friends the Progressives" his party would form the next government.

In other words, Mr. Cardin contemplates the bartering and intrigue which marks the last Parliament.

He knows that Mr. King cannot, under any conceivable combination of circumstances, get a majority over all, and in saying so he is more honest than many other Liberal speakers.

What the electors of West Peterborough are seeking is to restore political stability and put an end to auction-room politics and they are more and more sure as election day draws near that they can only help to do these things by sending a Conservative from this riding to Ottawa.

The country is sick to death of the group form of government as demonstrated by Messrs. King and Forke.

THE PROGRESSIVE TAIL

The spectacle of the Progressive tail wagging the Liberal dog has been too long in evidence.

Does anybody doubt that the Progressives dominated the situation in the last parliament so far as Mr. King's government was concerned?

If so, we'll let Mr. E. J. Garland, Progressive member for Bow River, Alberta, during the past two Parliaments, tell the story of Progressive supremacy as he told it to his constituents. Here it is:

"Every two days for weeks Farmer members sat in Cabinet with the Liberals and pounded INTO OUR FORM the legislation of the session. True it was UNDER DURESS. True it was compelled by the (Progressive) group and not by the wish of the Liberals. But co-operation there was."

If you want to help to turn over the government of the country to a Soviet of Progressives who will pound the legislation of the session into their form, vote for J. J. Duffus.

If you want to see in power a real government with the administration in the hands of Ministers who have accepted the full responsibility of government, vote for E. A. PECK.

REMEMBER MEIGHEN IS SURE TO WIN, and let West Peterborough ride with the winners.

MINE OWNERS REFUSE TO ENTER NEGOTIATIONS FOR SETTLEMENT GOVERNMENT MAY INTERVENE

Owners Won't Try To Settle Strike on National Basis.

CHURCHILL BLUNT.

Says 8-Hour Bill Was Passed To Nation-Wide Agreement.

LONDON, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press).—A new and serious complication has arisen in the coal dispute, threatening to prolong the strike indefinitely unless the Government employs its authority to impose a settlement.

It is the owners who are barring the way to a solution.

A conference at the invitation of the Government was held at Downing Street yesterday between Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and other Cabinet Ministers and representatives of the Mining Association, which is the owners' body. Mr. Churchill's aim was to induce the owners to consent to a settlement on a national basis. In this, he signally failed.

An exhaustive report of the conference, issued officially late last night, shows that a somewhat heated colloquy proceeded mainly between Mr. Churchill and Evan Williams, representing the owners. The Chancellor bluntly informed Mr. Williams that the Government would never have passed the eight hour act had it supposed it would be shutting the door to a national settlement.

He reminded the owners that before passing the bill they had acquiesced in negotiations on a national basis, and that he agreed there must be a district settlement on certain questions combined with a general national agreement.

Mr. Churchill said the Government wished both doors open and the settlement to advance through whichever was the most expeditious; he appealed to the owners to give the matter most careful consideration; it was not to be expected that the miners could be brought to negotiate in the face of such a turnabout on the part of the owners.

Mr. Williams, replying, tried his best to defend the owners against the charge of changing front, but declined to budge from his position, that the Mining Association no longer had power to negotiate on a national basis, and said that the Mining Association 's committee would meet today and would then take the opinion of the members. But unless every single district in the country assented to a national basis, a national settlement would be impossible.

Mr. Churchill strongly urged the owners' representatives to persuade the committee to meet the Miners' Federation to discuss the best means of ending the deadlock. The Government would wait to learn the final decision of the committee's meeting today.

But, he added, if the Association's last word proved to be that it would never negotiate on a national basis, then the Government would be obliged to move forward upon its own course of action in the absence of the Association. The Government's resoonsibility, he declared,was a very grave one, and it was impossible to leave matters where they are.

Victim Would Not Pay Up So Hold-Up Is Called Off

JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 7—His refusal to submit to the indignity of lying on the floor of the Michigan Central Railway pumping station here, last night, even though the demand was backed by a pair of revolvers in the hands of two youthful bandits, saved John Walker, an employe, the money he was carrying in his pocket.

The bandits entered the building and covered Walker with the revolvers ordering him to "lie on the floor, and make it snappy."

"I'm too busy for such foolishness," Walker replied.

"Listen, we're bandits and if you don't get down on the floor we'll plug you," one of the bandits said.

"I'll not lie on the floor, no matter what you do," Walker retorted.

"Well, if this guy won't do what he's supposed to, I guess we can't hold him up," one of the bandits said to the other.

The two, puzzled, walked out. Walker described the bandits as "little more than boys."

MEXICAN CLERGY GIVE UP HOPE

Final Statement From Mexican Episcopate Will Be Issued Shortly.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 7.—(United Press.)—What is expected to prove the episcopate's ultimate statement for the time being in the religious controversy will be issued shortly, it was announced.

The statement will include the memorial which the church hopes to present to congress.

The episcopate does not admit the slightest hope of favorable action by congress, even if the memorial is taken under consideration, and does not indicate what further steps it will take.

Reports To Pope.

Government To Build Ships For Canada West Indies Trade.

MERCHANT MARINE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press).—The building of five new ships for the Canadian Government Merchant Marine for service between this country and the West Indies, in accordance with the terms of the West Indies Trade Treaty, is expected in local circles to be undertaken shortly, according to J. E. Dalrymple, Vice-President in Charge of Freight Traffic, Canadian National Railways, and these ships will have refrigerator, passenger and freight accommodation. The vessels will be built in Canada, Mr. Dalrymple declared.

The offer to establish this new service has been made to the Government by the G.C.M.M., and it is anticipated that some action will be taken as soon after the elections as is practicable, Mr. Dalrymple intimated.

If the offer is accepted, Montreal will be the summer port of the service and Halifax will be the winter port.

FIFTY KILLED IN STAMPEDE FROM MOVIE HALL FIRE

CHILDREN TRAMPLED.

Started From Projecting Machine Which Stood Near One Door.

LIMERICK, Ireland, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press).—Fifty lives were lost and a dozen persons seriously injured Sunday night in a fire in a temporary cinema hall in the village of Drumcollogher near here.

The moving picture show was being given in a hall over a garage in a wooden building. The hall was reached by one stairway. The projection machine caught fire and in the panic women and children were crushed and trampled in the irantic stampede to escape from the blazing hall, and many were trapped to be burned alive.

The village has a poorly equipped water supply and the wooden building with the garage on the ground floor burned fiercely.

It was the first time the show had been opened to the public. There had been a trial showing the night before, at which everything went well.

The village of Drumcollogher has less than 500 population, but the announcement of the showing of the film, "The Decoy," attracted an audience from all the hamlets about for such a show was an unusual event in those remote villages.

The fire started within fifteen minutes after the opening of the show. The projecting machine was not protected by any screen and was placed within a foot of the only door. When it caught fire, it was a seething mass of flames within a moment or so and great panic seized the spectators, who had to pass through sheets of flame from the apparatus in rushing for the door. Men, Women and children were knocked down and trampled in the terrible rush.

The wooden building soon became a furnace. Some managed to get through the one door and hurled themselves down the narrow stairway. A few active young men climbed through a skylight and escaped to safety in the neighboring yard. A portion of the floor soon collapsed, dropping part of the spectators into the garage beneath, whence it was more easy to escape.

The fire burned itself out and the building was completely destroyed. Most of the bodies recovered from the ruins were burned beyond recognition. Throughout the night, rescuers were engaged in the task of removing the dead. Piteous scenes were to be observed during this work because of the distress caused the bereaved by their inability to positively identify their own dead.

The bodies recovered include twenty women, ten men and ten children. One family of six persons on a holiday from London perished. Some children who were thrown through the window escaped with bruises only. One young girl after clambering through the skylight, fell from the roof and was killed. A man trying to descend from the roof by a water spout fell and was badly injured. Both the operator of the projection machine and the owner of the show were arrested.

MARTIAL LAW IS PROCLAIMED WHEN ARTILLERY CORPS REBEL; REPORTED MUTINY SUPPRESSED

Help Had Been Offered by Corporations and Citizens.

ARMY IS LOYAL

Said Uprising Against New Promotion Ended Without Violence.

MADRID, Sept. 7.—In consequence of the internal situation martial law has been decreed throughout Spain.

In a long official note issued to the press it is explained that the reason for the declaration of martial law is the necessity to take strong measures against officers of the Artillery School.

Since the signing of the royal decree of June 6 modifying the ordinance of promotion in wartime and suppressing the article permitting resignations, "a series of acts of resistance amounting to absolute indiscipline," says the official note has been left unpunished by the Minister of War. But yesterday, the Government learned that the Chief of the Artillery Corps had ordered officers on leave to rejoin their regiments on his own initiative. The officer in command of the Segovia Regiment had also confined his troops to barracks without authorization "in case other regiments sent from Madrid should attack them." The arrest of these two officers was ordered.

Two Garrisons in Revolt.

At an early hour yesterday the Captain General of Valladolid and the Civil Governor of Segovia reported that the garrisons were in "a complete state of indiscipline" and even that the Military Academy cadets had been "stupidly involved" in the matter. In consequence of all this the Government had asked the King to come to Madrid immediately and authorize a declaration of martial law throughout Spain and her adjacent islands.

The King signed royal decrees suspending employment and pay of all officers of the Artillery Corps, prohibiting them from the use of their uniforms and entry into their barracks or offices, and exempting all the rest of the army from obeying them. The note says the gravity of these measures accords with the gravity of the offense. The officers of the Artillery School "have put loyalty to their corps before their military duty and love of country."

The trouble, deep, old and long permitted, was the origin of other troubles which until a few years ago were lamented by the whole country and made its life difficult. Circumstances now obliged the Government to combat this trouble. To hesitate would be "to fertilize fatal rebellions." The rest of the army will surely assist the Government, but it will be chiefly assisted by the idea that it is exactly doing its duty and by the irresistible support of public opinion.

Royal decrees have been published authorizing action by the Government. All officers resisting the measures taken against them will be considered rebels and very summarily judged. Those who directly or indirectly help them or ostensibly or by making excuses deny the Gov.

Trains Pheasants To Answer Police Whistle For Feeding

CROTON, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The sound of a police whistle at Croton Point Park does not necessarily mean bandits. It may be only Mrs. J. C. Gillespie, wife of the caretaker, calling her pheasants to be fed.

Sometime ago Mrs. Gillespie obtained thirty pheasant eggs from the Conservation Commission and set them under three ordinary hens. Soon young pheasant chicks followed their foster mothers around the barnyard. Each evening when Mrs. Gillespie fed them she blew a police whistle to accustom them to the sound.

The birds are now ten weeks old and roam around the 350 acres of the park. But promptly at 5 o"clock, when the sound, which in New York means trouble, reaches them, they start home.

EIGHT KILLED IN COLLISION

Rear End Collision of Trains of Holiday Makers in Chicago.

MANY INJURED.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7. — At least eight persons were kiled and 100 or more injured last night when a local train from Elroy, Wis., on the Chicago and North-Western Railway was plowed into by a Chicago and North-Western train from Madison, Wis.

The Elroy train was discharging passengers at Cortland Street Station, four miles from downtown, when the Madison train ran into it. The last two coaches of the Elroy train were telescoped, and it was in them that most of the deaths and injuries occurred. Both trains were composed of wooden coaches and were filled with passengers returning to Chicago after holiday outings.

As the crash occurred a northbound train with headlights blazing brightly was said to have been abreast the train struck, and that was given as the cause of the Madison train's engineer not seeing the halted train into which he drove. No one on the Madison train was killed.

The right-of-way was not torn up. The only property damage was the demolition of the two rear wooden coaches of the Elroy train.

Scores of patrol waggons and fire apparatus were rushed to the scene of the crash. Acetylene torches and axes were used in cutting out injured persons pinned down by the wreckage. Doctors and nurses from near-by hospitals were rushed to the scene, and gave first aid. The first body taken from the debris was that of a 2-year-old baby girl.

THE WEATHER.

While most of the harvesting has been completed and the grain safely housed, there is yet considerable in the fields. The heavy rain over the week-end, will still further delay operations. On Saturday the rainfall was .67; on Sunday .31, and on Monday .18 of an inch—a total altogether of one inch and 1-16th.—W.P.

LOOK FOR FIGHT IN EVERY RIDING

Nominations Made To-day in 218 Out of 245 Seats.

OTHERS LAST WEEK.

OTTAWA, Sept. 7. Canadian Press —The official nominations to-day marked the final line up of the candidates who will contest the ridings in the Federal general elections, a week from to-day. Nominations were held from 12 to 2 p.m., standard time for 218 of the 245 seats in the House of Commons. The other 27 constituencies, which are of particularly large areas, having held their nominations a week ago to facilitate preparations for voting.

With the exception of Quebec, where the situation is not quite so definite as in the other provinces and the riding of Provencher in Manitoba, where there was an acclamation in advance, the nomination indications, based on the early returns, were that there would be a contest in each constituency.

The acclamation in Provencher was due to the failure of the Conservative candidate to file his papers before the nominations closed. In the general elections a year ago there were no acclamations.

The probaility is that there will not be as many three cornered or four cornered fights in this election as in 1925, the issue settling down more generally between the two historic parties—the Liberal and Conservative, with in several ridings, a Liberal-Progressive fusion candidate being nominated instead of a straight Liberal.

The Labor nominees will total about the same as a year ago, when J. S. Woodsworth of Winnipeg North Centre, and A. A. Heaps of Winnipeg North, were successful.

CARTERS RETAIN LICENSE PLATES

Police Will Take Action If They Are Not Returned.

Some fifty-eight carters and taxi owners who were in business a year ago, and have since relinquished the same, have failed to return the tags provided by the police at that time. Inspector J. F. Reid told The Examiner this morning that unless these tags were returned within the next few days action would be taken by the police department toward that end.

WORRY DISEASE OF CONSCIENCE

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON.

"You worry too much," said the doctor.

"I can't help it," said the patient.

"No, that's right, you can't," said the doctor. "I don't know what it is that is troubling you, but whatever it is, if it were in my power to remove it, in another hour something else would pop into its place in your mind and you would be worrying as hard as ever.

"That kind of worrying isn't a thing to be proud of. It denotes, more or less, my good friend, a sickly conscience."

His patient need not have have been offended. The doctor was not being personal; he was stating a fact. And sickly consciences are probably doing more harm to the health and lives of the civilized human being than all the disease germs known to man.

No—not consciences. We need good healthy consciences to be on the job every second of our waking hours. But sickly consciences are a different thing. Sickly consciences are consciences that brood over the past, poison the present, and wreck the future.

If you have read Ibsen's, "The Master Builder," you will remember that Hilda, fresh from her mountain town, tells the Master Builder that she has a sickly conscience.

It happened that at one time heer was a fire—a fire he had wished for, but that eventually occurred without his knowledge of connivance. The results of the fire were tragic—a thousand times removed from what he had planned or expected. As a result he had secretly brooded and depaired. He allowed it to ruin his life, and he retaliated by ruining the lives of others. Over it all hung frantic fear of retribution. A clear case of sickly conscience.

Every one makes mistakes—mistakes of judgment, mistakes of omision, mistakes of commisssion, mistakes of weakness. "To err is human." Usually the things we fret about the most are the things over which we have had no control. Regret is not worry! Sadness is not worry.

Worry, nine times out of ten, is melancholy brooding. Most of us do the best we can. If we are not doing our best, we might try a little harder, and use our mistakes as foundation stones to build on.

TWEED NEWS

WESTERN FUEL.

It is announced that arrangements have been made for the shipping of three train-loads of Alberta coal, amounting to some 6,000 tons, into Ontario.

The Western fuel is to be laid down in this Province at a cost of $11.00 a ton, made up of $4.00 as the initial price of the coal and $7.00 for transportation charges, and the shipment is a test arranged by Hon. R. B. Bennett in co-operation with Premier Ferguson with a view to ascertaining the out-of-pocket costs of carrying Alberta coal here at $7.00 per ton.

There is no doubt that Ontario will readily absorb this trial shipment, and that much larger amounts, if the fuel could be laid down at $11.00, would be disposed of to customers in this Province.

The good qualities of the best grade of Alberta fuel have been recognized by those who have tried it, and the market is here if the price conditions can be made right.

The advantages of fueling Ontario from within this country, instead of having to depend on the anthracite fields of the United States, are readily apparent, and efforts that are being made to solve the problem should receive general support.

THE TWO LANGUAGES.

It is said that much of the interest created by the appearance of Premier Meighen in Quebec was caused by the knowledge that he had learned to speak in French and the people were anxious to hear for themselves how well he did it.

However that may be, the fact that Mr. Meighen's learning of the French language has occasioned so much interest throws a sharp light upon the failure of most of our English-speaking politicians to really equip themselves for their office.

In this country of two official languages it might be expected that those who aspire to high positions in Parliament would, as a matter of course, seek to acquire a fluent knowledge of both French and English.

Our French-Canadian politicians invariably do so, and most of them are able to deliver most eloquent orations in English.

On the other hand, an English-speaking politician who can make an address in French is, unfortunately, a novelty.

There is little excuse for such a condition.

Men who expect to make politics their life-time profession should be energetic enough to learn to speak both official languages fluently.

THE AMUSEMENT TAX.

The intimation from Premier Ferguson that the amusement tax, at least on cheaper tickets, may soon be abolished has no doubt been well received.

We are so generally harassed by taxation of all kinds that any sign of even a slight lifting of the burden are sure of enthusiastic welcome.

And yet it is doubtful whether the amusement tax, except to those who have had to collect, has been such an oppressive levy after all.

First adopted as a war measure and founded on the theory that those who could afford to go to theatres and other places of amusement could afford to pay a tax toward the Province's war activities, it has been kept in operation because it afforded the Provincial Government a considerable and easily obtained revenue.

People have grown accustomed to paying it, and on the whole neither during the war nor since has there been any great outlay from citizens of the Province over the levying of the tax.

If the financial condition of Ontario next year justifies its removal, all well and good, but there are other taxes that are more keenly felt by the people than the few cents they have to pay on movie tickets.

THEIR MINDS MADE UP?

From all parts of the Province comes the same story of an apparent apathy on the part of the electors toward the Federal election.

Old campaigners admit that they do not remember a political contest in which the great mass of the people took such little open interest as in the present campaign.

At first glance this condition is not a healthy one.

With voting day but a week away, the seeming indifference of the people to the result of the campaign is not a matter for rejoicing.

By some astute political observers, however, this failure on the part of the public to get excited over the claims of the warring parties is explained by the fact that the people have weighed the issues carefully, have their minds made up, know how they are going to vote, and have no desire to get into arguments over the thing.

It mayv be that this explanation is sound, and that next Tuesday will see a very large proportion of the electorate exercise the franchise.

Certainly, in the general interest, this is to be hoped for—were the present apathy toward the campaign to continue over election day it would be a most unfortunate condition of affairs.

JAIL FOR DRUNKEN MOTORISTS.

In the district of Ottawa and Hull many people are of the opinion that too much leniency has been shown, either by the police or the courts, toward men discovered driving automobiles while intoxicated. Nominal punishment for such offenders cannot be excused. A Montreal contemporary records a promising departure from such complacency:

"Judge Choquette of Quebec merits the gratitude of all citzen of this Province for the firm stand he has taken against drunken automobile drivers. In the most unequivocal language he has declared that he will impose the most severe punishment he is permitted to inflict under the law on all people found guilty of driving automobiles while under the influence of liquor, namely, one year in jail without the option of a fine. In order to lend additional weight to his decision, he has instructed officers of the special motor vehicle force to lay charges in future under the Criminal Code, and not under the Motor Vehicles Act, as the latter allows the alternative of a fine, whereas the Code does not."

Drunken motorists are a pest. Whiskey almost invariably leads not only to fast but reckless driving. A thorough investigation would probably lead to the discovery that at least half the accidents on the road are due to whiskey.

If these drunken or half drunken motorists were the only sufferers from such accidents there would be little to concern ourselves about; but they are a constant menace to everybody else on the road whether in cars or afoot. The most careful driver or pedestrian is unable to protect himself against this menace.

The garage attendants of Ottawa and Hull could a tale unfold about drunken drivers that would create a public sensation.—Ottawa Journal.

LANDS FOR THE HUNGRY.

The pessimism of Sir Daniel Hall over the world outlook for food was not allowed to dominate the Agricultural Section of the British Association at its recent annual meeting at Oxfrd. Sir Daniel, like Malthus and other prophets of the past century and more, foresaw the day when the increase of population would mean insufficient food for the population on the earth.

The resources of Canada were plainly brought to the attention of the members, and, with other parts of the world still uncultivated, and with advances in cultivation methods, the Association learned that the outlook was not as dark as it had been painted. Sir Daniel claimed the white population of the world was increasing at the rate of five millions a year, and that it required the product of two and a half acres to support one unit, or over twelve million acres of new land per year. There could not be, he claimed, a repetition of the marvellous expansion of the nineteenth century, when the wide areas of the United States were opened by railways and by mechanical progress generally.

Lord Bledisloe recalled that in his life-time the wheat production of the United States had trebled, and in the last twenty-five years Canada's exportable surplus of wheat had increased twenty times, while 240,000,000 acres still awaited development, of which a quarter was within fifteen miles of a railway. Much could be done to increase production by research work in originating new varieties and in combating plant diseases and pests.

It needs no long memory to bring hope to the pessimists from the achievements of Canada. The production of wheat in the Dominion has risen from 42,000,000 bushels in 1890 to 350,000,000 or 400,000,000 bushels in the past few years. The principal kinds of live stock for food—cattle, hogs and sheep—have more than doubled in that time, and the tendency is to speed up this growth. The area of land in Canada available for agricultural use is estimated by the Canada Year Book at 358,162,190 acres, of which there were under crop in 1924 only 57,852,550 acres, and 9,377,691 acres in pasture. Fertility is being advanced by the greater use of crops like alfalfa and sweet clover, which bring nitrogen from the air and deposit it in the soil, thus preserving much of its virgin quality.

It need not be assumed, however, that agriculture in Canada is yet at its best. Farms are too large and population too sparse to encourage the largest yield. While Holland, Belgium, Denmark and Scotland have an average wheat yield of 35 to 45 bushels per acre, the average in Canada is only 13 bushels. When population becomes denser and the market better, this condition will be remedied, and in that remedy will be found a further protection against the famine feared by Sir Daniel Hall.

The future will meet its food strain when it comes, and ,as The London Times says, the Old Country will turn more and more to the Empire. "It is to the thinly peopled lands of the Dominions," it says, "that we must look for the harvests that are to feed our growing population, and it is to these islands that the wisest Dominion statesmen and the best-informed Dominion opinion naturally look for the man-power wanted to extend and to develop their part in supplying the world with food. Migration of the right sort is the best way, and probably an indispensable way, for securing the adjustment of food to population. The land is in the Dominions and the men and women are at home."

Thus it is that the land and the laborers are not yet united. And when that is more fully achieved, and the population in the newer countries is more dense, science will keep step with population growth, and the day of food scarcity will be postponed indefinitely.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

One week from today will see the election over and the Peterboro Industrial well under way.

People may not have much to say about the election, but they are all talking about the Peterboro Exhibition.

Evidently there are some local motorists who do not know the stop-street regulation is in force here. And some more who look upon through streets as a speedway.

Young Peterboro is suffering today from a bad attack of those back-to-school-again blues.

The silent vote usually speaks with a loud voice on election day. That will have to be true on this occasion, for nearly all the voters must be included in the quiet class.

Sorry to remind you, but it won't be very long before you will be reading that "Do your Christmas shopping early" line.

The Canadian National Exhibition is sailing along toward a new attendance record, and everybody in Ontario is happy over the prospect. The Exhibition is truly a "national one."

The Canadian West, it may be imagined, is much more concerned over the scarcity of harvest hands than it is over the election. Getting in the wheat crop is of more importance than garnering votes.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE FAITHFUL DOG

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

Three famous newspaper editors were once asked what news story would interest the most readers.

Two of the three gave the same answer:

"The story of a dog saving the life of a child."

There is more than chance in the presence of the two elen ents of the story. For next to children, men feel their closeness to dogs.

A cat is the friend of a locality; the dog is essentially the friend of man.

In California a man and his dog were washed off a rock by a ground swell when fishing. The dog made the shore safely. The man, a feeble swimmer, was being carried out to sea when the dog plunged in again and struggled to bring him to shore. Exhausted, he went down, refusing to abandon his master.TTTT

Napoleon in his memoirs records an incident, comparatively insignificant, but revealing the fidelity of a dog, which occurred one night in a battlefield.

"Amidst the deep silence of a beautiful moonlit night," he wrote, "a dog leaping suddenly from beneath the clothes of his dead master rushed upon us and returned to his hiding place howling piteously. He alternately licked his master's hand and ran toward us.

"I involuntarily stopped to contemplate the scene. 'This man,' thought I, 'has his friends in camp, but he is forsaken by all except his dog'."

"Endurance, Fidelity," are two of the words inscribed on the monument raised recently in New York City to "Balto," the malmute dog who led the heroic dash to Nome last winter.

The preposition "of" might well be inserted between the two words to describe the nobility of the natures of dogs the world over.

From Wortley, England, comes a twenty-word story relating the tale of a humble and heroic vigil of unending fidelity.

After living six years among the graves where his master is buried, a black Pomeranian has died, says the cable.

Six years of silent, inviolate, unchanging vigil by a "dumb beast" which loved its master!

It is not to be wondered at that a court in a western state, with all due formality, handed down a legal decision that the dog is man's most faithful friend.

THERE, THERE

Some darling doll is broken now;
"There, there," and that is mended.
Some grief will cloud the little brow;
"There, there," and grief is ended.
Perhaps it is some fragile joy
That breaks the heart of Brother.
But this will heal the heart and toy—
The sweet "There, there" of Mother.

When youth shall have its larger loss,
If youth will but reveal it,
Will come to Mother with its cross,
She has a balm to heal it.
Though hurt may make the heart to bleed.
And seem the soul to smother,
Then this is all that children need,
That old "There, there" of Mother.

And time will bring us other days,
When men are much too clever,
Yet still there comes, our hope to raise,
The same old words forever.
Long after childish grief and tear
Time brings us many another;
God grant in memory we hear
The sweet "There, there" of Mother.

CROP REPORT

Harvesting was practically at a standstill all over Ontario during the past week. While there were some dry days, the grain was so saturated and the ground so wet that hauling was possible only in a few cases where stooks were turned out. Some cutting was done on the dryer land and threshing of housed grain was general in central and western districts. While some sprouting of grain alsike and alfalfa has been reported from several districts this condition is not serious. The short days of this time of year do not permit of rapid drying.

Pastures are luxuriant and late crops are doing well except on low and wet soils where there has been some water and moisture injury. Late blight of potatoes has been reported from a number of counties. Plowing conditions are favorable and teams were busy at this work while harvesting was impossible. New fall wheat has been seeded in Temiskaming, Bruce and some other districts in Western Ontario.

BRUCE—Heavy grass cattle are not moving freely to market. Large numbers are still on the grass, one farmer having 180 export steers still on pasture. A few loads of good steers were sent out during the week at 7 cents per pound. Harvesting operations have been seriously delayed by frequent heavy rains. There is still a considerable amount of grain uncut, most of which is very badly lodged, with the fields in many cases so badly flooded that cutting operations are not possible. Barley has filled well but the sample of oats generally will be very light.

MANITOULIN— Harvesting of grain came in with a rush as a result of warm weather and a severe attack of rust. Although the rust did not do a great deal of damage to wheat the oats have been severely injured and many farmers are cutting their crop while it is yet green, on account of the rust being severe they do not consider the grain will fill. So general has been the attack of rust that the oat crop is estimated at not more than 60 per cent yield of what it would have been. Due to ravages of wolves a great many farmers have been selling their entire flocks of sheep and lambs.

MIDDLESEX—Several carloads of beef cattle have been brought into the county this week. They are chiefly from the West and five carloads were delivered at one station. Many farmers sell their steers early in July and at this time of year they have considerable pasture which they restock with cattle from the West. Some threshing was done during the week but the grain was really too wet. Many farmers were able to draw in oats after opening the shocks out. Much rain fell during the week and there are still a few fields of wheat out where farmers depend upon stook threshing. There is a large acreage of alfalfa yet to cut. Farmers thought it was better standing than to have it spoiled by wet weather.

ONTARIO—Grain is about two-thirds in stook the balance uncut is badly lodged due to heavy winds and much rain. Alsike and fall wheat are turning out better yields than was anticipated earlier in the season.

PEEL—Inclement weather is delaying harvest and has done considerable damage to grain crops in particular. Oats and wheat are growing in the field and alfalfa which stood in the stook over last week end is also sprouted to some extent. As a result the yield will be lower and the colour of the seed will not likely equal that of last year. Growers are inclined to be pessimistic in regard to the potato crop and yields are expected to be low. Wheat yields continue to be good—a number of farmers report between 55 and 60 bushels per acre.

PRESCOTT AND RUSSELL—In driving through my district I have noticed that the red clover fields, which are kept for seed, are doing wonderfully well. Good many farmers are getting wise to the weed menace, and day after day we see them walking up and down their fields and pulling out weeds which otherwise would cause all sorts of difficulties in cleaning operations.

SIMCOE NORTH—A number of farmers in this district are getting excellent results feeding sweet clover silage as a pasture supplement. Sweet clover as a silage is rapidly gaining favor in Simcoe County. A practice commonly followed is to cut in the morning or afternoon and fill the following half day. In this way, with only one man in the silo, excellent silage is produced. Practically all the wheat and barley is cut and some of the oats, but some of the wheat remains to be hauled in due to the wet weather.

SIMCOE SOUTH—Owing to the heavy rains, harvesting has been at a complete standstill for the past week. There is still about half the grain out. Considerable plowing was done this week.

TEMISKAMING—Haying operations are pretty well completed throughout the district although here and there still remains a field or two to be cut. Farmers are preparing to harvest their seed crop of Alsike Timothy and Red Clover. These three give promise of a good yield throughout the district. Barley is ready for cutting in certain sections of the district and no doubt grain harvesting will commence during the coming week in a small way. On the Demonstration Farm 20 acres of fall wheat was seeded on the 21st instant. Weather conditions have been favorable for germination therefore we expect it will get away to a good start. A few others in the district are seeding fall wheat this year for the first time.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"COMPRISE" AND "COMPROMISE"

(The McClure Syndicate.)

Because of the similarity in appearance, these two words are sometimes confused. Although they look alike, there is no likeness in meaning.

"Comprise" means "to include, to contain, to encircle, to inclose," etc., as in the sentence, "A few words comprised his entire stock of French."

"Compromise" has various meanings, as "to adjust or settle by mutual agreement, to put in danger, to expose to suspicion or discredit, etc." We speak of a person being found in a "compromising" position.

It is this last definition of "compromise" that makes ludicrous the error in a recent "Book of Etiquette." The book gives as a sample invitation to the opera: "My dear Miss Smith, I have been fortunate enough to obtain a box in the parquet, where those of us who will compromise the party will be comfortably seated." Of course, "comprise" is meant.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

All city boys don't think we get milk from bottles. Some think we get dimes from them.

There are a couple of dozen things you should be doing instead of reading this paragraph.

Reading the signs of the times isn't so very difficult. They all say, "Go Right Ahead."

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP) Editorial criticsms on the Beauty Contest are here quoted:

Toronto Mail: Why should women upon whom the gift of beauty has been bestowed shrink from displaying that, of all talents the one that it is most difficult to hide?

"It was certain to happen," says the Stratford Beacon-Herald. "Toronto picked a beautiful girl for a beauty show in Atlantic City and next afternoon she made her first appearance downtown. In the rush to get a look at her three girls and a woman were shoved through a plate glass window. The appearance of a good-looking girl in Toronto is such a rarity that it well-nigh caused a riot."

None Seriously Hurt in Accident at Culvert Near Barrie.

BUS DAMAGED.

BARRIE, Ont., Septe 7. — One of the big buses of the Metropolitan Bus Co., Toronto, was overturned on the Provincial highway about seven miles northeast of Parrie at eleven o'clock Sunday night, and all the occupants, with the exception of a baby were slightly injured, the most serious injury being a broken nose. The night was rather foggy and the road greasy, and the bus hit a culvert, which threw it over into the ditch. The bus was badly damaged. It is said it was not running at an excessive speed.

All the occupants, except Len Chong, a Barrie laundry man, who had his nose broken, wer Toronto people. The injuries disclosed by examination at the Royal Victoria Hospital here were: Mrs. McWhinney, 105 Coleridge avenue, left arm hurt; Mr. McWhinney, chest injury, and small wounds; Mr. Webb, 38 Wallace avenue, both legs hurt and slight cuts; Mr. Elliott, 22 Royce Avenue, legs hurt; R. M. Chappell, the driver, 102 Edgewood avenue, slight cuts. The two year old child of Mr. and Mrs. McWhinnie, escaped without a scratch. With the exception of Lem Chong none required to remain in the hospital

"Fool-Proof" Airplane Is Predicted Soon; Invention Is Being Tested By N.Y.U. School

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7.—(Associated Press)—The "Fool-proof" airplane may be a reality in the near future, it was revealed here today in the announcement that students of the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics of New York University are trying out an invention which it is hoped will eliminate the dangers of flying.

Professor Alexander Klemin, head of the aeronautical school, told of the work at the opening session of the convention of the national aeronautic section of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The fearful nose dive, which is the cause of many fatalities in aviation, may be made impossible through this invention, Professor Klemin said. It also is expected to permit the airplane to glide safely to earth automatically whenever the engines stop.

The professor said other important improvements in air travel, were being perfected in his department.

The greatest steps in the conquests of the air will occur during the next five years, in the opinion of W. B. Stout, of the General Airplane Manufacturing Company, controlled by Henry Ford.

"Airplanes will be made safe and at such reasonable cost that the average man who owns an automobile will be able to buy a plane," predicted Mr. Stout.

"The people also will have become educated to the use of airplanes. The man on the ground has an idea that airplane riding will make him sick and be too thrilling. As a matter of fact there is not as much "kick in flying as there is in fast automobile riding.

"One of the big advantages in favor of the airplane is the fact there is no limit of space; the airplane will never have the traffic problem of the motor car. Of course, there eventually will have to be airplane police, but merely to regulate the proper channels."

BOMB DAMAGES HOME OF JUDGE

Second Outrage in Edmonton During Past Three Weeks.

NO PERSON HURT.

EDMONTON, Sept. 7.—The second act of terror to occur within a month startled Edmonton on Saturday night, when the home of His Honor Judge Taylor of the District Court was bombed, it became known yesterday. A similar attempt was made on the home of Police Magistrate McLeod three weeks ago.

No great damage resulted from the explosion Saturday night, and no one was seriously injured, but the bombing, following so closely that of last month, has startled the city. The damage at the home of Judge Taylor consisted mainly of shattered windows and broken dishes. The bomb was exploded at the back of the house, and also tore the kitchen door from its hinges. A further reward is to be offered for the arrest of the person who attempted to destroy the McLeod home.

CLEAR WEATHER FOR HARVESTING THROUGH WEST

Alberta is Believed By Cessation of Heavy Downpours.

LITTLE DAMAGE.

No Hot Weather To Cause Growing of Grain in Stooks.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 7. — For the first time since last Monday there are prospects of clearing weather in the Canadian West. The sun finally broke through in Alberta on Friday after five days of overcast skies and a number of downpours that turned the rivers into roaring streams and every creek into a spring freshet.

Parts of Saskatchewan escaped the weather blight and harvesting had been proceeding in these areas without interruption. In Manitoba not a binder or threshing machine has turned a wheel since last Monday and nothing can be done for another three days, even if prospects of clearing skies fulfil their promise. No rain fell Sunday and the sun was out for a short time in the afternoon. A light breeze has sprung up and every citizen in the country is hoping that the end has come to one of the most depressing weeks to mar the harvest season on the Prairies for a number of years.

Little Damage Expected.

Fortunately, the weather has not been excessively hot and there are no reports of grain heating or growing in the stooks. In view of this it is expected that if the weather now clears the damage to the grain will not be heavy, with the exception of a lowering of the grade.

Manitoba is 80 per cent. cut; Saskatchewan, 60 per cent., and Alberta not 50 per cent. If the weather had had broken practicaly all cutting would have been completed in Manitoba by this time.

Wheat is growing less in importance as the main source of farm revenue in Manitoba. For instance, the acreage in wheat in Manitoba this year is no larger than it was in 1903. This is due to the steady growth of mixed farming. Wheat has given way to oats, barley, clover and cattle. The result is that the harvesting season in Manitoba is spread over a longer period, giving steadier employment to farm laborers. The small threshing machine, operated by a couple of farmers and their families has taken the place of the big machine with the big crew. Due to this changed condition, Manitoba now does not draw largely on the other Provinces for harvest help.

With her own surplus labor, and the young men who go to the fields from the City of Winnipeg during the school and college holidays, this Province is becoming pretty well able to look after her own harvest help problem.

Harvesters Hard Hit.

The break in the weather has been most unfortunate for harvesters from the East, as they have been hung up, with no chance of making any money. Brandon reports that the number drifting into that city without money is creating a mild problem for the authorities. This will all change, however, if the weather holds fair.

Various Boards of Trade in Western Canada have been dealing with the harvester shortage, that will particularly affect askatchewan.

Adidtional harvester trains from the East have been arranged, and it is certain that every man can be put on to work once the threshing machines get to work again. The men will be required mainly in Saskatchewan. Alberta can draw on British Columbia for additional help. There should be six weeks' work available for any Easterner who cares to take the trip West.

PRESENTATION MADE

Ladies of Bell Telephone Staff Spend Pleasant Evening.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 7.—A very pleasant evening was spent on Thursday, September 2, when the girls of the Bell Telephone Company met at the home of Miss Kathleen Keenan to honor her with gifts and good wishes for her approaching marriage. The evening was spent socially and after lunch the following address was read by Miss F. M. McComb.

Dear Kathleen:

It was with much surprise and feelings of deepest regret that we, your friends and co-workers of the Bell Telephone staff, learned that you had severed your connection with our staff.

We wish you to know that you will be greatly missed from our midst, and as we cannot allow this opportunity to pass without, in some way expressing our appreciation for you, we ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of our regard and trust that you will always cherish fond memories of our associations together.

Now that you are to assume new duties we wish you much success and happiness in the future.

Signed on behalf of the Bell Telephone staff:

F. M. McCOMB,
GERTRUDE CALLAGHAN

Miss Gertrude Callaghan then made the presentation of a dozen silver teaspoons and a china tea set. Miss Keenan thanked the girls for their gifts in a few suitable words.

Miss Keenan has been a valued member of the Bell Telephone staff for several years and will be missed at her work by all associated with her. Her marriage takes place on Wednesday, September 8th, to ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

The following sermon was preached on Labor Sunday in St. John's Church by the vicar, the Rev. R. C. Blagrave:

"It is an essential feature of the Church's business to interpret the spirit of Christianity into actual life. Our Blessed Saviour did not leave us specific instructions to apply to the details of complicated social life of to-day, but He left guiding principles that do apply to all human relations, and it is not difficult to know what the spirit of Christ teaches under all circumstances. It is a cardinal principle of Christianity and in harmony with its spirit that we should all be interested in others' welfare, no matter who or where they are. We are our brother's keeper.

"The parable of the good Samaritan alone teaches that. It is our business as Christians to alleviate suffering, to remove injustice and to improve conditions of life, as far as we are able, so that none will be pressed down under unequal burdens. In other words, every churchman should feel it his bounden duty as a Christian to be in himself the reverse of selfish. The governing motive of his life should be to make life better in every way for all.

"I do not think any one can question the value in absolute terms of these principles. They lie at the back of all social effort, and they interpret the spirit of the Saviour of the world. We mean all this when we pray 'Thy kingdom come.'

"On Labor Sunday our thoughts naturally turn to the problem of labor. Probably the greatest problem of the world to-day consists in the relation of labor to industry and of capital to labor. It is the open sore of Bolshevism the ubiquitous cause of unrest, and the constant challenge to stable government. The greatest disaster in history has just recently been averted in England.

Through the native wisdom of the English people, and the coal strike has wrought untold suffering and loss upon that already overburdened nation, we have reason to be proud of the courageous stand taken and the earnest effort made by the leaders of the Church, even though unsuccessful. One thing ought to be obvious to everyone who takes the trouble to think, and that is, that the relations of labor and industry will never be permanently settled in the spirit of the big stick. It has been tried too long and has proved a dead failure. It cannot be otherwise because it is entirely unchristian. Selfish interests are bound to come into conflict sooner or later.

The only principle upon which the problem can ever be solved is that of fairness and justice in the spirit that is willing to sacrifice self for the common good; and that in the last analysis is the way of the Cross. Our Blessed Lord put emphasis upon certain spiritual values. When these values are given a leading place in industrial relations then, and only then, shall we find the solution for the greatest problem of the world to-day.

"As it is the Church's business to preach Christ, so it is her business, as far as this problem is concerned, to inculcate in the hearts of all her people the Christian feeling of love and sympathy and fairness which we know to be God's will for us. The Church's contribution to the solution of this great question lies just here. In the ranks of her membership are all sorts and conditions of people—representatives of large industrial interests, small manufacturers, managers and manual laborers. The Church is a great corporate fellowship for the extension and promulgation of the spirit of Christ. The highest interests of each are the interests of alls. 'If one member suffer the whole body suffers.' That is what Jesus meant when He spoke of His family relations as those who did the will of His Father in Heaven. But the membership of the Church must come to realize that wherever there is suffering or unfairness or wrong it is their business by the cultivation and extension of a Christian public opinion to seek a means to remove and remedy the wrong. Science has come to the aid of the spirit in searching back of conditions to causes and so furnishing a means by which iniquitous conditions of life may be improved. But what is needed for the Christian state to face its responsibilities is the driving power of the spirit of Christ as it is preached and interpreted in and by the Church. The motive power is a love for our fellow-men for Christ's sake, a sympathy for all who are oppressed with wrong and a passionate resolve to do all in our power to relieve oppression and to equalize the advantages of life.

"This spirit has made much progress in industrial life during the last century and is still advancing, but it has a long way to travel yet. It has to bring all industry to realize that workers are human beings, members of one human family, and there is no industrial interest to compare in value with the value of human life to God, industry and the State. Human nature is inclined to complain of its lot. The poor feel their lot hard in comparison with the rich. A sense of injustice generates unrest. These things must be reckoned with as constituents of our common life and nature. They ought not to constitute grounds of suspicion. On the other hand, the workers and employees ought to come to understand the difficulties of industry in these trying days. They also must come to appreciate the fact that honest toil in one occupation is as honorable and as worthy as in another.

"It is not the occupation but the spirit of the work that determines its nobility. The great exemplar of this simple truth is our Lord Himself, Who earned His living in a carpenter shop. Workers must come to realize that honesty and efficiency on their part is just as much to be expected as fairness on the part of employers. The one cannot be realized without the other. Loyal service as in God's sight is work infinitely ennobled, and touches the spirit of Christianity. It is in this spirit, and the spirit only, that labor and industry can work out their great problem, the spirit of Christian fellowship, sympathy and self-sacrifice.

"There is no such promise of the realization of this co-operative fellowship found anywhere in the world that can compare in significance with that which is offered in the Communion of the Body and Blood of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Here the spiritual value of the individual is heightened in the great King's feast, and equality in the sight of God, modified only by personal worth, is emphasized. In that great Sacrament we all face together eternal values and feel the call of God's spirit to righteousness and justice and to recognize the bond of brotherhood that unites us all together in the Divine life.

SCHOOL DAYS

All good things must come to an end some time, and today the 3500 pupils of the schools of the city have gathered together all their books for the tasks that seem so drab as compared with the joyous adventures of vacation time. To make the most of the holiday, the rising generation rose early and went late to bed, but the evil hour has come at last, and the pen, the pencil and the ruler are substitutes for the bat and ball; the schoolroom for the holiday camp and the teacher for the playground or camp supervisor.

Lessons never seemed so irksome as they do to-day to the little undisciplined minds not yet trained to concentration on the business on hand.

Spelling seems to be a totally unnecessarily and horridly laborious operation, after the long weeks of the easy gaiety of the comic strip, and grammar is of all terrible things most terrible, coming so soon after the conclusion of a care free existence when lessons seemed a dark unhappy far off dream. Even the older students grow restive when confronted with the problems of moths and the formulae of chemistry, and think regretfully of the halcyon hours so recently enjoyed. Teachers, wise in their generation, are indulgent to minor infractions today before tightening up the bolts of routine and discipline for the days to come.

But there are compensations for the gloomy reflection that holidays are over. There is the joy of living over again the happiest hours and most exciting experiences, as chum meets chum and notes are compared. The boy or girl who had a country holiday at the farm or summer cottage recounts the story to the friend who was taken to the big city; and the lucky one who was at the seashore, so far away, has a tale which caps all the others. And after all it is only ten months till next year's summer vacation and there are lots of holidays between times, and some really good things to be enjoyed while school term goes on its long round. So that after all school days are not such bad times, is a conviction that may fairly be arrived at, and a conviction that will increase with the passing years.

MILLBROOK C.G.I.T. OPENING MEETING

MILLBROOK, Sept. 7.—The Wide Awakes group of Canadian Girls in Training held its re-opening meeting for the fall and winter months on Thursday afternoon at the home of one of its members, Miss Eleanor Fallis, who had kindly invited the girls for the occasion.

Mrs. Edgar Fallis and her daughter welcomed their guests, and there was a good attendance for the meeting, though some of the members are still on vacation, and since some will be attending school elsewhere this term, the group is permanently losing some of its best workers. A special effort will be made to gain new members, girls who have passed their twelfth birthday being eligible, and when the roll is complete an initiation service will be held.

The kindness of Rev. Joseph Wilks was recognized, as he is presenting a text book on temperance and hygiene, with accompanying wall charts, to the group for study meetings this year; Mr. and Mrs. Wilks are also giving a set of 150 steriopticon slides, with two 'scopes, to the group, to be sent to Miss E. C. Hawken for use with her Ruthenian pupils at the Wahstao Home and Boarding School, Alberta.

The Bible study in the devotional period included the twelfth chapter of Acts, the story of the miraculous deliverance of Peter, with the lesson that "Prayer is the key which turns the lock of any difficulty whatever," the leader having charge of the Scripture lesson.

A report of the recent C.G.I.T. Training Camp at Beausoliel Island, Georgian Bay, was given by the two delegates, Misses Hazel McMahon and Wilma Fallis, and proved helpful and interesting. There were seventy girls at the camp, Miss Jessie McPherson, Girls' Work Secretary for Ontario, being in charge. Many suggestions for improving the weekly group meetings were brought home by the girls, among other items of interest being the information that an entirely new initiation service is shortly to be sent out from headquarters in Toronto, and when it is in the hands of the leaders throughout the Province all members, whether new or old, will have to experience the ceremony.

The matter of keeping the code received special attention, the members being urged to make a fresh start now at the re-opening of the work for another term. The code is the heart of all C.G.I.T. work, forming as it does constructive habits at this important period in 'teen age girls' lives.

A game of ball was enjoyed at the close of the meeting, and a dainty and substantial tea served, Misses Eleanor Fallis, Hazel McMahon and Wilma Fallis looking after the guests during the refreshment hour.

Field Crop Competition.

J. N. McGill, Secretary of the Agricultural Society, has received the following results in the field crop competition in oats for this year:

	P.C.
1.—Harold Tate	96
2.—W. R. N. Sharpe	94
3.—L. H. Winslow	92
4.—Kennedy Bros.	90
5.—R. J. McKnight	89
6.—W. A. Brown	88
7.—R. McCamus	86

The judge was W. Monaghan, of Wellington. The winners last year stood in the following order: W. A. Brown, L. H. Winslow, Kennedy Bros., W. R. N. Sharpe, D. A. Henry, R. McCamus, J. Whittington.

The directors have adopted the slogan, "Let's make it 40,000."

Given good weather conditions the objective should be reached. It is only 4,000 more than last year Let's do it.

The Curve Lake Indian Band will be on the grounds Wednesday afternoon and evening. They always prove an attraction as a 100 per cent. Indian Band.

Fred Jopling is out again with his challenge to the world. He will match his husky tug of war team against all comers. Entries for the tug of war may be left with the secretary.

Harry Beattie, who visited the Toronto Fair, says it is wonderful, but adds, wait until you see the Peterboro Central.

There are about 51,000 post-offices in the United States. The number has shown a decrease every year since 1901 when there were 76,945. Extension of routes through increased transportation facilities have cut down the number.

Meighen Can't Win!
IF YOU WANT STABLE GOVERNMENT
GIVE KING A WORKING MAJORITY.

The Liberals in 1926 gave the people the most popular budget the country ever had. You wanted that.
(Every Conservative Member voted against this Budget.)

The Liberals ran the country economically and thus were able to reduce your taxes. This is good for you and the country.
(Every Conservative Member voted against these reductions.)

The Liberals reduced the tariffs on automobiles. This cut down the price to the consumer and enabled more people to buy cars. This is good for you, for the workmen engaged in this industry and for the manufacturers. The proof of this fact—manufacturers of motor cars are selling more cars than ever before and are increasing the size of their factories.

The Liberals insisted that at least 40 p.c. for this year and 50 p.c. for 1927 of all parts in any car must be manufactured in Canada if the car manufacturers were to receive rebates. This is good for the manufacturers of accessories and helps to increase work for Canadian workmen.
(Conservatives in speaking forget to tell you this.)

The Liberal budget made Imperial Preference more effective and encouraged greater Empire trade relations.
(Every Conservative Member Voted against the Liberal Budget.)

The Liberal budget abolished the sales tax on many articles, abolished the receipt tax, the bugbear of retail merchants and gave you back penny postage.
(The Conservatives voted against giving you the benefit of these reductions.)

(The Conservative Members all voted against it.)

DO THIS AFTER SEVERE ILLNESS

How To Speedily Gain Strength and Put on Needed Weight.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines extracted from the livers of the common codfish to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

So nowadays, medical men who keep up with times are ordering a tablet containing the vitamines that give to frail folks vigor, strength and weight—a tablet that is known as McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablet — and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped of their natural strength after any severe illness.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on five pounds in 30 days. As a matter of fact, your druggist will return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

Great for weak, skinny, backward, run-down children, too, and gives them a hearty appetite.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Extract Tablet. McDermid & Jury, and Bond's Drug Store have a big demand for them and millions are sold monthly all over North and South America. They are sugar coated and as easy to take as candy. 60 Tablets—60 cents.

TORONTO GIRLS KILLED IN CRASH

Two Young Ladies Die When Car Is Hit By Fast Train.

COMPANIONS HURT.

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—Two young employees of the Bell Telephone Company, Toronto, in the persons or Miss Rose McGann, aged 25, daughter of Mrs. James McGann, and Miss Anna Skinner, aged 24, had their vacation cut short in a tragic manner yesterday, when a motor car in which they were riding was struck by a train on the road between Camden, N.J., and Atlantic City. Both young ladies were almost instantly killed. Mr. and Mrs. William Aitken, of Camden, N.J., Miss McGann's uncle and aunt, were also seriously injured, and a grandson of theirs, William Williams, aged 5, of Camden, N.J., was killed.

Yesterday morning the party left Camden for a day's auto excursion to the seashore. Aitken was driving. Just as the car neared the level crossing at Polson, 20 miles from Atlantic City, a snake crawled from the bushes at the roadside. For just a moment the reptile took Aitken's attention. The result was that he failed to hear the whistle of the approaching train on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway. The train was going at quite a speed. It swept down up him. As he saw and heard it he tried to stop and reverse, but without avail. The heavy locomotive shattered the automobile as if it were matchwood, and hurled its fragments in every direction.

Young Williams was thrown more than 20 feet. The bodies of Miss Skinner and Miss McGann were found badly mangled later about ten feet from the tracks by passengers who had descended from the train.

HOLIDAY CROWD JAMS FRONTIER

Thousands of Tourists Try To Get Back Across Bridges.

MANY LEAVE CARS.

BUFFALO, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press).—Thousands of tourists attempting to drive their cars into thte United States after holidaying in Canada overwhelmed the facilities all along the Niagara frontier last night and early this morning. Ferry boats between Buffalo and Fort Erie were unable to cope with the situation and many persons were forced to leave their machines parked across the river. Others who became impatient and tried to use the bridges at Niagara Falls fond conditions just as bad there with strings of cars several miles along stretching out on all the main roads leading to the bridges.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In January, 1917, I came out with 753 amputation cases in the Andania, soldiers who had recently lost an arm or a leg and in many cases both. It was at the height of the submarine scare and these poor wounded men and their nurses suffered additional hardships on a very long voyage. There were probably 500 French-Canadians amongst them, members of the French-Canadian regiments which had recently won immortal fame for their native country and themselves at Courcelette. Many of them lay on surgical beds in the long troop trains and it was pathetic when we came to the first signs of snow 50 miles inland from Halifax to see these suffering men sit up and cheer for the Canadian winter. As we neared the Province of Quebec some of them told me that they dreaded being taken off at their home-town stations and well they might for as we stopped at these stations from time to time great howling mobs of Nationalists besieged the stations and trains and had it not been for sentries at the train doors with fixed bayonets they would have succeeded in getting into the trains. As one of our senior officers remarked as the poor fellows were carried off, "God help them; their lives will be far worse at home than in the trenches. It was hard for me to believe that Canadians could treat the returning brave in this inhuman way. But it was true and my blood boiled then and it boild now when I think of it that Meighen is in the hands of those traitors and depends upon them to defeat the Liberals in Quebec. They are a fierce and determined people these disloyalists and just as they have made Meighen bow or lose his job they intend to make Ontario bow. They will not sell their hate for promises of power or office but they believe that Ontario will and with a cruel sneer they hold that threat over us. Now these people were the deadly enemies of Laurier and he lost 27 seats to them in 1911. They are the enemies of King who has met them fairly: "The highest destiny of Canada is as part of the British Empire." King says, and he is not afraid of them. We must speak the truth and give him the credit that is his due. Do you want to put the Nationalists in power at Ottawa where at a moment's notice they could break up the Conservative government just as the Progressives did with both parties at the last session. Meighen's wait-and-see war election would never even be held. God help Canada if these men and their political tools get control of it.

NEW CHRYSLER '50' IS WELL BUILT CAR

Description of Chassis Reveals Liberal Use of High Alloy Steels—Engine Develops Unusually Smooth Power, Says Company.

Description of the new Chrysler "50" reveals a combination of features, new to the field of low cost motor cars, which are calculated by the Chrysler Corporation to place it rapidly in the forefront among automobiles selling at its price.

These features, the company points out, were made possible largely through its recently announced policy of Quality Standardization for all Chrysler cars—an ideal that Walter P. Chrysler has been working toward since the announcement of the first Chrysler product nearly three years ago.

They include unusual body roominess and comfort, remarkably high gasoline mileage and other economy advantages, unusually smooth engine power and enduring speed ability, easier handling and speed with comfort up to the car's maximum. They indicate scientific engineering and research work with respect to space engineering, body dimensions, dynamic symmetry of design and appearance of the bodies, and the same study with regard to valve sizes, location, timing shape of combustion chambers and other engine developments that go to make up a highly efficient, economical power plant, yielding unusual performance.

High alloy materials are used throughout the chassis. The actual amount of fine steels and other long-lived materials in this car is greater than in many others selling at twice its price, the campany points out. Tolerances permitted show that the chassis is manufactured to remarkably fine limits—thus promoting long life, durability and continued good performance. At several points no tolerances whatever are permitted—a feature Chrysler has consistently followed in each of its other cars.

Engine Develops 38 Horse-power

The L-head type engine is extremely smooth in operation, besides retaining all the characteristic traditional four-cylinder advantages. Transmission of its power to the rear wheels with minimum loss has been accomplished by hanging the engine low in the frame to give stright-line drive to the driving mechanism.

The engine has a 3 5-8 inch bore and 4 1-8 inch stroke. Its rated horse-power is 21.03, with an actual of 38. Piston displacement is 170.3 cubic inches. In line with Chrysler practice of suspending the engine free from the frame to prevent the transmission of road shocks to it, its front end is cradled on a semi-elliptic steel spring. This is bolted to the gear case cover, with the spring ends resting on the frame cross member, thus liberally floating the engine front end in the frame. This arrangement also absorbs the torque impulses. Rear suspension is by steel brackets rivetted to the arms on the flywheel housing.

Frame has three heavy cross members, forming a rigid foundation to eliminate body weave, squeaks and rattles that would inevitably present themselves in a frame less rigid.

Lubrication is exceptionally thorough. Reciprocating parts are actually floated with oil at all speeds. Full force lubrication is provided to all crankshaft and connecting rod bearings from the pump. Spray from a small hole in each connecting rod bearing lubricated each cylinder wall, piston pin, camshaft bearing and entire valve operating mechanism. All other reciprocating engine parts are lubricated by positive spray from the same source, or from the front crankshaft bearing.

ANOTHER QUAKE IN STRICKEN ISLE

Little Damage Done But People of Horta Badly Frightened.

LISBON, Sept. 7 (United Press). — Renewed earthquakes caused panic among the inhabitants of Horta, in the Azores, last night. There was little damage reported, but the homeless refugees who suffered from last week's severe 'quake, in which twelve persons were killed and several hundred injured, were badly frightened.

Business was still paralyzed in the island to-day, according to a despatch to the Government here.

FEAR DROWNING OF YOUNG MEN

Canoe Found In Which Two Toronto Youths Left Cottage.

PADDLERS MISSING.

TORONTO, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press)—James Swanston, 16, and his chum, Fred Sowden, 21, are believed to have been drowned in Lake Ontario between New Toronto and Hanlan's Point yesterday afternoon while paddling eastward down the Lake from their cottage at Etobicoke. With a broken thwart, their upturned canoe was found floating in the lake by members of the Life Saving Service. In it was a pair of gray trousers, in a pocket of which was $2.05 and a comb, and a single blade paddle.

The two young men had set out in their canoe to go to Hanlan's Point

King Cabinet's Guilty Knowledge?

Here Is Proof Aplenty

It was proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and members of his Cabinet were fully informed in 1924, if not earlier,

That the Customs service of Canada had broken down;
That the Treasury was being defrauded of millions of dollars;
That the Customs Preventive Service was in the hands of a gang of crooks and thieves;
That legitimate business men were being driven into bankruptcy by competition from smugglers.
That the Minister of Customs, Hon. Jacques Bureau, was disregarding all rules and regulations governing the collection of the public revenue.

This is borne out by correspondence filed before the Committee between R. P. Sparks, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Commercial Protective Association, and the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

In June, 1924, the conditions had become so bad that a group of business men asked for an appointment with the Cabinet to lay the whole situation before them.

August 6th, 1924, a large representative deputation met the Prime Minister and these five members of his Cabinet—Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Hon. J. H. King, Hon. Jacques Bureau, Hon. E. M. Macdonald and Hon. George H. Graham.

The delegation represented such organizations as:

The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada,
The Canadian Jewellers' Association,
The Wholesale Dry Goods Association of Canada,
The Canadian Association of Garment Manufacturers,
The Canadian Manufacturers' Association,
Merchants' Association of Montreal,
Manufacturers' Credit Bureau, Limited,
Board of Trade of the City of Montreal,
Board of Trade of the City of Toronto,
and many other Boards of Trade.

A report of this meeting made at the time was filed before the Customs Investigation Committee.

It was not until December, 1925, after the Stevens motion for a Special Committee of Investigation was actually on the order paper, that the King Government made its first move in the direction of a clean-up by dismissing the crook Bisaillon!

Members of the King Cabinet, Liberal Members of Parliament and Liberal politicians involved before the Customs Investigation Committee, either by sworn testimony taken before the Committee, or by documents read into its record, were the following:

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice.
Hon. E. M. Macdonald, Minister of Militia and Defence.
Hon. Jacques Bureau, Senator and ex-Minister of Customs and Excise.
Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Acting Minister of Customs and Excise.
Hon. A. B. Copp, Senator and ex-Secretary of State.
Hon. B. C. Prowse, Senator.
Hon. J. E. Sinclair, ex-Minister without Portfolio.
Hon. P. J. Veniot, ex-Liberal Premier of New Brunswick.
William Duff, M.P. for Queen's-Lunenburg, and Deputy Speaker.
P. F. Casgrain, M.P. for Charlevoix-Saguenay, and Liberal Whip.
L. J. Lovett, ex-M.P. for Digby-Annapolis.
P. L. Hatfield, M.P. for Shelburne-Yarmouth.
Pius Michaud, ex-M.P. for Restigouche-Madawaska.
Robert E. Finn, ex-M.P. for Halifax.
J. G. Robichaud, M.P. for Gloucester.
A. E. McLean, M.P. for Prince.
F. L. Kelly, ex-M.P. for Cape Breton North Victoria.
W. J. Hushion, ex-M.P. for St. Antoine.
W. K. Baldwin, M.P. for Stanstead.

Is a Government, under which the machinery for the collection of the public revenue completely broke down, now to be entrusted with the reorganization of that machinery?

The Investigation Committee recommended the prosecution of firms and persons for the recovery of about two million dollars out of which the public treasury had been defrauded. The pressing of these prosecutions will be in the hands of the incoming Government. Liberal Ministers and Liberal members of the Committee have attempted to defend and justify these frauds.

Every case won by the smugglers and lost by the taxpayers will be welcomed as a vindication by the King Government. Every case won by the taxpayers and lost by the smugglers will be a reflection on the King Government.

Can a Liberal Government be depended upon to press them to a successful conclusion in the interests of honest taxpayers?

SHOULD VOTE FISCAL POLICY SAYS MEIGHEN

Conservative Leader Addresses Large Crowd at Meeting in Niagara.

IMPORTANT SPEAKERS.

Claims Robb Budget Reduced Taxes at Expense of Treasury.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Sept. 7 (Canadian Press)—Liberals as well as Conservatives should vote for the present government on the strength of its fiscal policy, Premier Meighen told audiences in this part of Ontario yesterday. He spoke at Niagara Falls, Paris and Brantford, stressing the issue of protection. Stability of government could not be obtained unless the Liberal Progressive policies of the last five years are voted down, he asserted.

At Niagara Fall, the park beside the Falls was thronged with a picnic crowd of two thousand odd. On the platform with him were Conservative candidates from several surrounding constituencies including the present Minister of Trade and Commerce, Hon. J. D. Chaplin, who spoke briefly.

At Paris and Brantford in the evening, the Prime Minister was accorded a good reception. He described the Robb budget as a sham, especialy as it dealt with automobile taxes. The budget of 1926 had reduced taxes at the expense of the treasury of Canada, and therefore did not really reduce the obligations which must be met. Nobody objected to the reduction in taxes on autos, perhaps the time had come when they should be reduced, he said. Perhaps some might say that taxes on, say, clothing, ought to have been reduced as soon as that on autos. "You cannot have cheaper clothing and cheaper autos too," he added, but in any case, the Liberal government by manipulating the sales tax, had left the protection on autos as high as it was before, and the makers of cars were not affected by any changes made. The treasury was the only thing affected, he said.

If Canadians voted for "the ineffectual, vacillating policy of the Liberal Progressive combination," said the Premier, they voted for a continuation of uncertainty in industry, and the "intimidation of capital." He promised that he would put the tariff on the products of the farm just as high as that of the United States, if returned to power. "If the United States farmer gets his products in here, he will have to pay a tariff so high that he will know what a Fordney tariff in Canada is like," said Mr. Meighen.

On manufactured woollen goods, as on other goods, said Mr. Meighen, the Conservatives intended to put a tariff high enough to enable the industry to function, and leave it there until the industry was on its feet. He challenged Liberals to seek election in Ontario and Quebec on their tariff record and present policy. They dared not do it, he declared, and dared not let the Conservatives make that the issue in Quebec in the last two elections. If they had the Conservatives would have a majority of fifty seats in the House of Commons this year, he said. As it was, the Liberals were still endorsing free trade tendencies while they were in the West, while Liberal speakers in Quebec said that Meighen's tariff was not high enough!!

WEDDING BELLS.

GRAHAM—SMITH

MILLBROOK, Sept. 7.—One of the prettiest of early Fall weddings was solemnized in St. Thomas' Church on Saturday, September 4th, at 2.30 p.m., when Gladys Marian, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Smith, Millbrook, became the bride of Mr. Havelock Cameron Graham, B.A.Sc., of St. Catharines, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Graham, of Elmvale; the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, assisted by Rev. P. R. Howard, officiating.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, early fall flowers, in an attractive and fragrant color scheme of pink and white, banking the chancel rail either side of the arch of feathery asparagus, with clusters of asters intermingled, under which the bridal party took its place for the ceremony. White streamers, with knots of asters, cosmos, and drooping fern, indicated the pews reserved for the guests.

The service was fully choral throughout; the surpliced choir, singing an appropriate hymn, preceding the bridal party up the aisle. Mrs. (Canon) Allen presided at the organ.

The bride, who entered the church leaning upon the arm of her father, was charmingly gowned in a French sleeveless frock of pink georgette, with touches of silver showing in the dainty embroidery, the full skirt having narrow flounces in rose-petal design on its escalloped edge, a similar trimming outlining the graceful arm openings. A black velvet picture hat was worn, and the bouquet was of butterfly roses and baby's breath; brocaded silver shoes, with stockings of a matching shade, completed the becoming costume.

The bride's sister, Miss Muriel Smith, was her only attendant, her dress being of daffodil yellow georgette, and her bouquet of yellow roses and gold-centered pale mauve flowers. She wore a close-fitting, black velvet hat, with touches of gold in the trimming, black satin shoes and gold stockings. Mr. William Needler of Toronto supported the groom, and the ushers were Messrs. Graham Russell, and Frank Cheseman of Toronto.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. W. McKee Bingham of Toronto sang very sweetly. "O Perfect Love."

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, about sixty guests being in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Graham received with the bride and groom, the bride's mother wearing a handsome French gown of black georgette over shell pink, with touches of silver in the trimming, black velvet picture hat, and corsage bouquet. Mrs. Graham, the groom's mother, was attractively gowned in a French frock of black georgette over black and white crepe de chine, black velvet hat, and she also wore a corsage bouquet.

Masses of pink and mauve asters, with feathery asparagus, made the drawing-room a bower of fragrance and beauty for the reception, shaded pink gladiolas and gracefully-drooping ferns, forming a background for the reception party. The hall was banked in gold and green, and in the dining-room, centered with the attractive bridal table, the color scheme was pink and white.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Graham, amid showers of confetti, left on a motor trip through Quebec province, the bride travelling in an ensemble suit of brown and sand, with sand hat, and shoes and stocking of a matching shade. Upon their return they will reside in St. Catharines.

Among those from outside points who were guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Graham and Miss Mildred Graham of Elmvale; Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Scott of Englehart; Major Garnett and Mrs. Greer of Kingston; Mrs. (Dr.) Greer of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. W. McKee Bingham of Toronto; Misses Janet and Alice, and Mr. William Needler of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. R. Harland Smith of Sandwich; Mr. and Mrs. Chant of Unionville; Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin of Toronto; Miss Margaret Robertson of Toronto; Mr. Frank Cheseman of Toronto.

LIBERAL POLICIES STRONGLY UPHELD

J. J. Duffus Touches on Local Issues in Speech at Rally.

A large meeting, composed of representatives from every part of the riding was held in the Upper Hall of the Duffus Building on Saturday evening. J. J. Hartley, president of the Liberal Association occupied the chair.

John R. Marshall, the first speaker, declared there was a greater difference today between the Liberals and Conservatives than at any other period in the history of Canadian politics. The Liberalcs not only said what they were going to do, but they had shown it in the legislation of the past four or five years. Mr. Meighen adapted his policy to suit the people to who he was speaking. Mr. Meighen, declared Mr. Marshall emphatically, was not genuine.

Len Humber.

Mr. Humber who commended Mr. Duffus as a worthy candidate criticizide the Meighen government for the use of the Governor-General's warrant in expenditure which, he said, was opposed to British practice. The Old Age Pensions Act was killed by the Conservatives, who voted against it and Mr. Peck also voted against it.

Mr. Dudney of Nogies' Creek addressed the gathering, and said the Conservatives were usually of the wealthy classes and the Liberals of the working classes. Mr. Dudney strongly criticised the Protection policy of the Conservatives.

R. R. Hall, K. C.

As an illustration of the importance of Canada's agriculture, Mr. Hall pointed out that the annual field crops of the three Prairie Provinces were 270 million dollars greater in value than the total gold production in the world last year. Changes were not made in the tariff to injure any industry but to assist this most important industry.

J. J. Duffus.

The electors were called by Conservative propaganda, said Mr. Duffus, "to return the Conservative party and rebuke corruption." Four Conservative speakers in the riding were declaring the customs scandal was the sole issue. Seven or eight Conservatives were men who had been involved in scandals, some of them having been read out of the party and Provincial Legislature.

When the present Minister of Customs took office, he announced he was going to stop smuggling At the present moment declared Mr. Duffus, there was more smuggling at the border than ever before. One of the Conservative candidates had written to the Minister asking that the pressure of watching the border be lessened and the Minister in reply ordered the preventitive work to be applied in such a way as would not "interfere with many people in the constituency."

Declaring that he would use every endeavor to urge the completion of the Trent Canal, and the investigation of the power situation in the neighborhood of Peterboro, Mr. Duffus asked the meeting to get solidly behind him to assure a Liberal victory on September 14.

SLOW AND EASY.

All puddings that should be smooth and creamy such as tapioca, bread, rice and corn-starch pudding, should be baked very slowly. Too rapid cooking produces that uninviting curd and whey product.

OBITUARY.

THOMAS CALLAHAN.

WOOLER, Sept. 7.—On Thursday morning, September 2, a great shock came to this village and community, when the news of the death of Thomas Callahan was made known. Mr. Callahan retired in apparently good health, and although a man in the seventies, he was always very active, but in the morning it was found that he had passed away during the early morning hours. He leaves to mourn his passing his beloved wife, three sons, Dr. Callahan of Toronto, Jack, lawyer of Toronto, and Morgan of Toronto, and one daughter, Mrs. W. Cowan.

WILLIAM FRY.

BURNBRAE, Sept. 7—There was laid to rest in Burnbrae cemetery on Saturday afternoon another of the pioneers of the Burnbrae district in the person of the late William Fry. The deceased, who was in his eighty-seventh year, had been in failing health all summer and his advanced age made recovery almost impossible and he passed away on Thursday at his residence on the old Burnbrae farm, where he had lived almost forty years.

There are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father, three sons, George, English Line; Thomas, Petherick's Corners, and Will at home; and four daughters, Mrs. John Naylor, Milton, Ont.; Mrs. B. Naylor, Campbellford; Mrs. W. Longmuir, Prince Edward, and Mrs. Annie Naylor at home.

The funeral service on Saturday afternoon was conducted at the house by Rev. D. A. McKenzie, pastor of St. Andrew's church, assisted by Rev. Hugh Shaw of Menie. The pall-bearers were all grandsons of the deceased, Messrs. Harold, Lindsay, Leo, Roy and Fred Fry, and Ronald Longmuir.

The late William Fry is best known throughout this part of the province as the veteran thresherman of Burnbrae. Until the season of 1925 was over Mr. Fry followed his trade and even at his advanced age his mind appeared quite clear and he was still able to master the intricacies of the modern threshing mill. The story of Mr. Fry's life is almost identical with the progress of the threshing-machine. His experience with the business goes back to the day of the old open cylinder machine and later the closed cylinder hand fed mill with a straw carrier. Both of these were operated by horse-power and many tales are told of the threshing days of long ago when three or four days were required at each job. Then came the portable steam engine and Mr. Fry purchased one. Later improvements were added to the separators, the chief one being the blower, by which means the straw could be blown to almost any part of the barn. The last outfit which Mr. Fry and his son Will have operated together for several year was a modern traction engine with a mill equipped with a self-feeder and other modern attachments. Few men have had the strength to stand the hardships that Mr. Fry has endured in the pursuit of his profession during the many years that he has lived past the alloted span of life.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's father, disillusioned by a faithless wife, warns him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time, envied by men, adored by all women. Infamous Lucretia Borgia, at the peak of her power in Rome, invites him to her reception. Among the guests is exquisite Lady Adriana Varnese, coveted by Borgia's cousin, Donati. When Lucretia notices Don Juan's interest caught by Adriana, she warns him that Donati is the best swordsman in Europe.

CHAPTER IV.

"Perhaps you are not aware that Donati is our best swordsman. He may resent your interest in his lady."

Lucretia Borgia's words had no meaning to Juan for an instant. He was much too busy with his thoughts as he gazed down at Adriana in the garden below. Then, suddenly, he caught Lucretia's meaning. He turned to her with an amused smile. And she, realizing that he knew that jealousy lay behind her desire to make him lose interest in Adriana, blushed—for the first time in years.

Angry with herself for letting him understand her, and because of her own clumsiness that had made it possible, she turned away from him. As she did so Maia crossed the room and came to the balcony door. For an instant she stood there, until she caught Lucretia's eye. A glance passed between them, sharp, significant, yet for all their quickness Juan saw it, although apparently he was interested in nothing but the marvelously carved hilt of his sword.

Maia held at her side a small mirror, caught in a frame of exquisitely wrought gold. She held it out to her mistress, and Lucretia, with a smile of apology toward Juan, held it close to her face so that the light from the room within would strike it. Someone had written message on the mirror's surface in a thick, white substance like soap. Lucretia read it at a glance.

"Neri awaits you," it ran, and was signed "Cesare."

She turned to Juan in dismissal gave him her hand to kiss, but Juan remembering various short and ugly tales about the Borgias, merely bent low over it. Lucretia's smile hid her disappointment. She turned away, and Juan, bowing again, went into the inner room.

Apparently he crossed it without a glance about him; in reality his eyes swept it and noted that, although the walls seemed merely four solid bits of beautiful paneling, one of these panels was just slipping into place. There was a tiny crack between it and the next panel, and in that crack was a man's face, a face with dark, burning eyes.

Juan sauntered on across the room, left it by the door leading to the wide hall and started down the great marble staircase. But he descended only a few steps. Then, turning quickly, he ran back to the top and stepped behind a pillar, standing so that he could look into the sitting room of Lucretia Borgia's private suite which he had just left.

Lucretia, watching from the balcony until she saw that Juan had left the room, crossed it to the panel which he had seen moving and, touching its hidden spring, caused it to open again Within was a small room, containing but a few bits of furniture, whose walls were honeycombed with secret cupboards. There were curious, sinister things everywhere about it, all the equipment of Neri, the sorcerer, whose skill in devising secret poisons was so great that in all Europe there was none other like him.

From his place behind the post Juan could see a corner of the room and catch a glimpse of Neri himself. Puzzled, he stood staring. Then, shrugging his shoulders indifferently, he turned and went down the broad marble stairs. After all, it was no concern of his, this little weakness of the Borgias for murder.

Meanwhile in Neri's little room Lucretia faced her brother and the sinister looking Neri. There was little light, which fell from a lamp placed high on the wall. In the flickering shadows that crept forward from the corners of the room the signs of the zodiac seemed to writhe and crawl across the wall on which they had been placed.

Neri said no word of greeting to Lucretia, but merely crossed the room, picked up a tiny crystal phial and from it let three drops trickle into another, even smaller phial. Handing it to Cesare, he remarked:

"A pity that the Duke Della Varnese — worthy gentleman — will suffer a heart attack before dawn!"

Carelessly Cesare took the tiny bottle and slipped it into his black velvet doublet. Neri smiled. It always amused him, this attitude of Cesare's toward death—that is, the death for others. Sometimes Neri played with the idea of death for Cesare himself. How calm would the head of the House of Borgia be then?

Juan had gone on downstairs, saunting from step to step, lazily, and as usual, the more slowly he moved at such a moment the more rapidly his mind raced. For whom were the Borgias preparing a swift ascent to Heaven? How successfully had these little plans of theirs ever been foiled? Amusing, to cheat them of a victim on some sweet evening such as this!

He cared little about going into the great room where most of the guests were assembled. Instead, moved by the thought of the girl he had seen from Lucretia's balcony, he turned aside when he reached the foot of the stairs and went out into the garden.

Adriana was there. He saw her at once. She was standing in the gateway that led to another part of the garden, and bending over her was Donati. Juan did not know him, but remembering Lucretia's remark about Adriana it was not hard to guess his identity.

It was not hard, either, to guess the girl's feelings. She had drawn away from Donati until her body was pressed hard against the delicate iron work of the gateway, and suddenly she forced her way past him and came down the path toward Juan. He told himself that her walk was more beautiful than other women's dancing, that her beauty made other women's faces look like mere suggestions of what beauty might be. And, smiling cynically, he marvelled at himself, who had known so many women, for being overwhelmed so completely by the loveliness of this girl.

She had almost reached him when a trailing end of her white gown was caught by a flowering bush, which, like Juan, wanted to detain her. Eagerly Donati hurried after her, as she paused to disentangle it. In three strides Juan was at her side, an instant before Donati reached her, and bent to loosen the floating end of delicate fabric. Eagerness made him clumsy, and a long, sharp thorn pierced his finger.

As he straightened up Adriana noticed the blood on his finger. Her little cry of pity was soft as the cooing of a dove, but it went straight to the heart of Don Juan—the world's greatest lover!

"Only a drop of blood, Signorina," he exclaimed. "But all I have is at your service."

He spoke vehemently. Even Adriana, young and unread in the ways and voices of men though she was, could not doubt that his words shaped no mere pretty speech. Almost frightened by his ardent tone, she faced him for an instand more, then turned and almost ran into the palace. And Donati and Juan were left facing each other.

LIBERAL RALLY HELD IN DOURO

Hon. G. N. Gordon Gives Interesting Address on Progress of C.N.R.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

One of the most enthusiastic rallies of the present political campaign was held last night at Douro in the interests of the Liberal candidate, J. J. Duffus. The hall was crowded to the doors, many not getting in, but desiring to hear the speakers present the issues that are before the country, they crowded around the windows outside. Fred Walsh acted as chairman and the other speakers were Hon. G. N. Gordon and Joseph Wearing.

Mr. Gordon dealt with the C.N.R. describing the progress made by that great government owned railway since the Liberals came into power, when a huge operating deficit had been turned into a $29,000,000 operating profit this past year. This alone in time to come would be able to help pay the taxes of this country. Mr. Gordon gave as the reason of this election the inability of Mr. Meighen to administer the affairs of this country after misleading Lord Byng into allowing him to form an administration.

The speaker called the Conservative campaign one of hypocrisy for he had been down in Western Ontario lately, where the custom bars were let down more than ever they had been; and a purity campaign with men like Garland, De Witt Foster, Ryckman and Jones. These men have become corrupt within and are the weakest aggregation since confederation, many of them being discredited. The old age pension bill was also discussed by Mr. Gordon, which was thrown out by Conservative majority of the Senate. At present the ratepayers in the township of Douro pay nearly a mill and a half for the upkeep of the old people's home in this county, this will and a half would have been taken off the township rate and assessed on the whole country if the bill had passed in the Senate. In closing Mr. Gordon made an appeal to the electors to support Mr. Duffus, for he was the kind of man needed to send to Ottawa and recently he had had a talk with Mr. King in which he thinks there is a pretty good thing in store for Mr. Duffus.

Mr. Duffus.

A vigorous attack was made upon the speech of Mr. Regan on Saturday night when he contradicted that he was the Liberal candidate through some actions of Mr. Gordon, for he said that he was the unanimous choice of the Liberal party. Meighen's policy of blue ruin talk in the last election did untold damage to this country in the eyes of the world and the public are finding out today that there was no truth in the statements for industries are progressing, the farmers are prosperous, and the railways making profits.

The Liberal policy was the one that was in the interests of the classes and not in the interests of the big interests as was the Tory policy. The workers at the General Motors were made the scapegoat of the big interests when they went to Ottawa to protest against the government's budget just like I am being made the scapegoat, according to Mr. Regan, of Mr. Gordon in this election.

In closing Mr. Duffus promised that the first thing he would do if elected was to apply his energies to see that an old age pension bill was introduced.

LADIES' AID MEETS

Campbellford Ladies Are Guests at the Society Meeting.

BURNBRAE, Sept. 7.—St. Andrews' Ladies Aid regular meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Watson on Thursday afternoon. A very large crowd attended including the ladies of St. Andrew's, Campbellford, who were the guests of the Burnbrae society. A most interesting reading on Famous Women of Today, by Mrs. (Rev.) McKenzie was much enjoyed as was a solo by Miss Helen Oddie. Business matters occupied much of the afternoon. Arrangements were made for the annual fowl supper on October 12th. Anniversary services will be held on Sunday, October 10th.

After the programme was over lunch was served by the hostess and a number of girl friends.

Messrs. Will Hume and Marshall Miller who recently suffered acute attacks of appendicitis were operated upon early last week. Both are reported to be gaining rapidly under expert care, to the great relief of their many anxious friends.

Mr. A. T. Donald recently motored to Barrie with Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Black and family who were returning from their holidays, part of which were spent here. Mr. Donald visted Hon. E. C. Drury's farm at Crown Hill, and also paid a flying visit to the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto.

For the first time in years Messrs. Alex Hume and Co. are not exhibiting Ayrshire cattle at Toronto. Heavy sales during the summer left the herd short and lack of help was also a factor in the decision not to show.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Todays' Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SCARECROW

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

Through the little patch of woods back of Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow, and toward the fields, hopped the bunny rabbit gentleman. In the air overhead soared the black crow.

The bird had sadly flown to the bunny's home, telling a sorrowful tale of his wife's birthday piece of cheese, as I related it to you last night.

"Yes," said Mr. Crow, telling his story over again. "I was flying home with my wife's piece of cheese, when down in a field below me, a ragged man waved his arm at me. I opened my mouth to caw at him and, forgetting about the piece of cheese, I dropped it. The cheese fell in the ragged man's pocket and he won't give it back."

"You didn't tell me, before, that the man was ragged," said Uncle Wiggily. On hearing the crow's story, the bunny had started out, making up his mind to get back the crow lady's piece of cheese.

"Didn't I?" asked the crow. "I meant to. Yes, indeed, the man who has my wife's birthday present is very tattered and torn. Perhaps you know him. He may be a friend of yours."

"He is no friend of mine, but I think I remember him," said the bunny. "Here we are at the field now. Keep back a bit until I look over the fence."

The crow fluttered down to a big rock and anxiously waited. Uncle Wiggily peered over the top rail of the fence. Surely enough, in the middle of a field where sweet corn had been growing until a little while ago, stood the ragged figure of a man.

The hat on his head was flapping as were his coat tails, and also the sleeves, which were so ragged that no one could tell what sort of hands the man had.

"Do you see him?" croaked the crow.

"Do you see that big pocket on the side of his coat? It was in that pocket that my wife's piece of cheese fell, Uncle Wiggily.

"Yes, I see," said the bunny. "That man must be a tramp. Tramps are always hungry. That is why he kept your wife's piece of cheese. But, I shall make him give it back!" So, bravely and firmly, Uncle Wiggily called: "Ho, Ragged Man! Give the crow his wife's piece of cheese!"

But the man did not answer. Instead he seemed to be flopping his ragged arms and the crow croaked:

"That's what he did to me and I thought he was waving to me. But he wasn't. All he wanted was my cheese!"

"He is a bold fellow," said the rabbit. "I shall have to do something else. I will throw a stone at him!" Taking up a stone, the bunny tossed it so that it landed on the hat of the ragged man. Still he did not turn around, nor did he say a word.

"This is very queer!" croaked the crow.

"It is more than queer, it is alarming," whispered Uncle Wiggily. "I do not like such a man so near my bungalow. He isn't the one I thought he might be—the farmer who gives me carrots. It is a stranger. I guess I had better telephone for the Police Dog."

But, just then, out of one of the ragged man's trouser legs ran Mrs. Nibbler, a field mouse, and when she saw Uncle Wiggily she squeaked:

"Oh, have you come to visit me in my new home? Welcome!"

"Why, where do you live?" asked the bunny.

"In one of the scarecrow's legs," answered the mouselady. "And, what do you think? Just now a beautiful large piece of cheese fell out of his pocket. Oh, wonderful!"

"That's my wife's piece of cheese!" croaked the crow. "Her birthday piece of cheese!"

"My goodness! I should have known!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "That ragged chap isn't a man at all. It's a scarecrow! A lot of old clothes stuffed with straw. I should have thought you would have known that, Mr Crow!"

"I guess I'm getting so old I can't see very well any more," said the blackbird. "But, if he's only a stuffed image, I'll get my wife's cheese back." And he did, for it fell right through a hole in the scarecrow's ragged pocket. There was enough cheese to give some to the field mouse lady and still have some for the crow lady's birthday, so everything came out all right.

The bunny hopped back to his bungalow, the crow flew to his wife and as the wind blew the scarecrow flapped his ragged sleeves. And, if the watering can will sprinkle a little powdered sugar on the ice cream to make believe it's winter, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's queer fish.

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Why do you rub your eyes? Has nobody ever told you it is harmful to do so?

You rub them because they itch, burn, feel sticky, or are otherwise uncomfortable.

Let me see if I can make clear to you that rubbing is bad for them. The simple fact that you know your hands are not clean should be reason enough to keep your fingers away from those precious organs.

Discomfort in the eyes or lids is almost invariably due to congestion. That is, there is too much blood there. To rub the eyes is to increase the blood supply.

If your hands are cold you rub them to "improve the circulation." That means you rub them to get more blood into your hands. For the same reason rubbing your eyes will cause more blood to rush to tissues which are already overcrowded with blood.

You can see at once that whatever it is that has caused your eyes to be inflamed, you will only make the congestion worse by rubbing the lids.

The most common cause for congestion is overuse or improper use of the eyes. Reading too long or reading by bad light will produce it. Long use of the eyes at sewing or embroidery will cause congestion. Manicuring or hair cutting in defective light will do the same thing. Poring over a ledger, adding up endless columns of figures, staying too long at the movies, working over a hot stove in dust and smoke or counting money for too many hours—each of these is a possible cause for eye congestion.

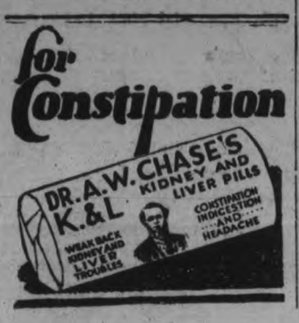
Nature is very kind to us and she will permit almost unlimited use of the eyes, provided they are normal as to sight and provided we are normal in general health. A healthy person can do very much more eye work than can a sickly or weak person. The general vigor has everything to do with the eye vigor.

It is amazing what a great proportion of persons have defective vision of one form or another. The first thing to be thought of if the eyes itch and burn or give other signs of congestion is to see what is wrong with the vision. It is possible glasses will help.

In these days of bobbed hair, rouge and other modern accomplishments there should be no hesitation about wearing glasses. It is exceedingly foolish to reject them if they are needed.

Let me say for your comfort that it may not be necessary to continue the use of glasses. With the disappearance of the congestion and the restoration of normal health the eyes will be as good as they were originally. Then you may dispense with the glasses, perhaps, at least till there is a recurrence of the symptoms.

I beg of you, don't rub your eyes. Wash them in cold water and then find out just why you are having the congestion.



Answers to Health Queries.

Mrs. B. C. K. Q.—Would antitoxin given for diphtheria be apt to weaken the health of a four-year-old child who does not seem to be as strong since taking it?

2.—What would you advise for an excessively oily scalp and hair in an eight-year-old child?

A.—No. The child is probably growing too fast or her system may be a little run down. Watch her general health and give her a good, general tonic. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2.—This is usually an indication of some constitutional disorder. The condition of the hair depends to a great extent upon the condition of the general health. Shampoo the hair frequently, being careful to rinse thoroughly and use a good stimulating hair tonic. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

* * *

Betty. Q.—What causes the eyes to water every time I go out in the air?

2.—What will make the eyelashes grow?

A.—Have your eyes examined, as possibly there is something wrong with the tear ducts, or you may need glasses for eye strain.

2.—One per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment applied to the lashes at night should increase their growth.

* * *

F. P. Q.—Kindly advise me what the normal blood pressure for a man aged sixty should be?

A.—It should be about 150.

* * *

M. S. W. Q.—What causes a pain in the lower part of the back?

* * *

A.—Your trouble is probably due to lumbago. Massage and application of heat should give relief. Strapping the back is also effective. Have your doctor advise you.

A waterfall is hotter at the bottom than at the top, because the water generates heat as it strikes the ground.

More than 44 miners were killed when an explosion wrecked a shaft of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation at Clymer, Pa. The upper picture shows relatives of the entombed men waiting anxiously on a hillside overlooking the mine opening waiting for rescue workers to emerge with some tidings of the victims. Below, a rescue crew is seen proceeding into the mine, equipped with gas masks to combat the deadly black damp. This crew saved the lives of a few of the miners.

Evening Examiner "Ideal Fashions" by Jean Belle Hamilton

One of the Season's Smartest Frocks

Charm and grace are admirably combined in the desirable little frock pictured here which is developed from printed crêpe relieved by plain contrasting silk in the collar. The long lines follow the favorite silhouette of the day with relieving fullness lent by the flared section below each hip. A slight fullness at the shoulders gives ease for a graceful line, and a novel tab collar outlines the V neck. Bell sleeves harmonize nicely with the lines of the dress. NO. 1401 is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 36 requires 3½ yards 39-inch figured material, and ¼ yard plain contrasting. 20 cents.

Our new Fall Fashion Book, illustrating the newest and most practical styles, will be of interest to every home dressmaker. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR WEDNESDA , SEPTEMBER 8, 1926

Astrologers read this as a day not important in planetary direction. They declare that caution should be exercised in all important matters.

The moon is in a sign that is not favorable for many sorts of activity, since it is supposed to precipitate indecision and to increase danger from negative thoughts.

Uranus in adverse aspect may seriously affect the public mind, increasing a critical and pessimistic outlook.

Much wrong-thinking may be expected in the coming weeks when mental suggestion of a dangerous sort may be prevalent.

Under this rule many superstitions may be revived, for reactionary leadings will be widespread.

Occultists will gain many followers and strange cults will be introduced, it is foretold.

Improved commercial conditions and a better understanding of American aims are presaged with the ingress of the autumn solstice.

Progress in municipal affairs in many parts of the country is forecast and community enterprises having as their aim artistic education will succeed.

The seers declare that in books, plays and extremes in dress, the people of the world have reached the farthest limit of license and a decided recoil from recent standards may be expected.

While divorces will increase, there is to be a decided improvement in marriage ideals, which promise domestic stability in the future.

Writers are to be even more numerous than ever before, the seers prognosticate, and new publishers are to multiply.

The signs are most promising for all the arts. Theatres, art museums and opera companies will increase in number in all parts of the country.

Persons whose birthdate it is may sustain losses in the coming year, which should bring unwonted pleasures as well as unexpected setbacks.

Children born on this day may be strongly individual. Both boys and girls should be capable of large attainments. They are likely to be much concerned with love.

WHO WROTE THIS?

A Series of Popular Quotatoins from Famous Authors, Selected by J. WILSON ROY.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

1. "Property has its duties as well as its rights."
2. "Gentle of speech, beneficent of mind."
3. "What the weak head with strongest bias rules
   Is pride, the never-failing voice of fools."
4. "And the nightingale's sweet music
   Fills the air and leafy bowers."
5. "Even children followed with endearing wile,
   And plucked his gown, to share the good man's smile."
6. "No change of circumstances can repair a defect of character."
7. "His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth."
8. "Some bold adventures disdain
   The limits of their little reign,
   And unknown regions dare descry."

UNION PROPHESIED.

Toronto Man Elected Supreme Director of Loyal Order of Moose.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Eventual union of the United States and Canada was prophesied here by Norman G. Heyd, of Toronto, Ont., newly elected Supreme Director of Loyal Order of Moose and first citizens of this country other than the United States to hold office.

'The most that Canada has to sell goes to the United States," he said in a newspaper interview, "and the most that the United States has to buy is purchased in Canada. The union of nations is basically an economic institution that may take some time to work out, but is sure to come."

Mr. Heyd was greeted upon his arrival here Thursday night from Los Angeles by officers of his order and taken to his hotel in the historic stage coach drawn by four horses.

C.N.R. EARNINGS.

Increase of 7 Per Cent. in Gross Receipts During Past Week.

The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the period ended August 31, 1926, were $7,260,592, as compared with $6,759,722 for the same period of 1925, an increase of $500,870, or seven per cent.

The Beauty Doctor

By Ninon

Posed by Hazel Hurd.

Condition—A nervous tension that seems to be concentrated in the back of the neck.

Diagnosis—You need to relax and relieve the strain.

Treatment—Plant your thumbs in your shoulders, and with your fingers massage with firm rotary strokes the back of your head up into your hair and as far down your spinal column as you can reach without moving your thumbs. Use considerable pressure and move slowly. After five or ten minutes of this lie down for a few moments, and you will find yourself greatly rested and beautified.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

A CHANGE IN PLAN

I drew Joan Meredith nearer to me along the cushion of the splendid limousine. "Time is a great healer," I said.

"But I miss him so, Judy, I miss him so very much. Oh, I know all about it. I know he wasn't worthy, but I think that makes it even harder to bear. I had so much to give and wasted so much. Perhaps you think I am silly, but it is because you never have said so that I have wanted you to be with me.

"Judy," she said, cuddling closer to me, "I have decided that I do not want to go to Europe right away. I want to stay on here a little while—at least until Leila is out of the hospital. I'd like to watch the little button on Barry Junior's face turn into a nose. It promises to be as interesting as the opening of a rose. Don't you think you can stay a little while longer before we sail?"

She asked this as coaxingly as though it were I instead of herself who had made the plans in the first place.

"Why, of course, my dear, we can stay. You know it is up to you. All I have to do is trail along. All you need do is call up Jerry and tell him not to get the steamer reservations."

Joan looked relieved.

"At least I really should stay until my brother goes on his expedition, don't you think so Joan?"

"Well, I know if he were by brother, I'd certainly stay," I told her, as we got out at the gate of her country home, instead of driving up to the door.

This was a practice of Joan's and certainly I did not blame her. The whole estate from gate to house spread itself out in one of the most beautiful aspects of nature. The flowers, trees, birds, could not help but put one into a happy frame of mind, even if one had been unhappy at the gateway.

"I'm glad to hear you say that, Judy. You do like John, don't you?"

"I have more than a mere liking for him, Judy." I answered, honestly. "Although I have never met him but for an hour or two this morning I feel as though I had known him all my life."

"Are you falling in love with my poor, dear crippled brother, Judy?"

"I don't consider him crippled," I asserted indignantly. "He doesn't seem so to me. I noticed he was slightly lame, that is all."

A CHANGED MAN

If you only knew how happy you have made me, Judy, when you speak like that about my brother," said Joan. "I never thought that he would ever speak to a strange woman. One of the strictly forbidden things at the camp was to bring any girl friend with me when I went up there to see him.

"I came to think that nothing I could do would hurt him so much as to disobey this order. You see, although he was so young when our mother died, he has always remembered that he was repulsive to her and consequently has always thought that others looked upon him with the same horror as did our beauty-loving mother."

I could not help exclaiming, "How awful! What a terrible heritage your mother left to your brother, my dear." I wondered if she ever realized that she had scorched and seared a human soul until its scarred semblance showed through the flesh.

"But Judy, mother thought that everyone would pity John and pitying him they would commiserate her. I cannot tell you what an effect he had upon her. She wanted a boy so badly that my perfect physique did not make up for his imperfections."

"That was very selfish of her, Joan. I must say this although she was your mother and has passed on, no woman in the world has any right, especially a child's own mother, to make him conscious that he is not as other children and so make him unhappy all his life. As for me I might as well confess to you, dear, that I have never met a man who has affected me in the same way as has your brother, John Meredith."

"Who called John Meredith?" asked a strong voice—a voice so different from the bitter one I had heard in the morning that I did not recognize it.

Unconsciously we had been standing by the stone steps, our conversation being so interesting that we had come to a stop.

Around the corner almost on a run came Joan's brother. He was limping frightfully. He had lost his cane somewhere, his hat was off and he was in no way trying to disguise his lameness.

For the first time in all his life he had completely forgotten himself.

"I would not have known him," said his friend to me a little later.

"Neither would I," I answered.

SHADED COSTUMES

Two or three shades of the same color are an interesting feature of smart French street frocks. Browns and bieges are especially lovely in combination with burnt orange or rust.

SILVER AND MIST

For the young girl, a dance dress of silver lace and white tulle is a suitable expression of her youth and innocence. The simple round neck line and bouffant skirt is a strictly debutante style in this type of frock.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(United Press).—There's always something new in Flapperdom! Some new little fad or trick of wearing the hair which distinguishes the flapper from the young matron.

For instance, the wee hatbag called the Charleston, was designed specially for the chic young Miss. It's a small black oilcloth bag exactly like a stiff traveling hatbox in shape. It is lined in oilcloth since it is used for carrying wet bathing suits. Some of them are fitted with vanity pouches for powder rouge, comb, etc. Hat bags of leather or oilcloth have become quite important of late since women are using them as overnight bags, shopping bags and whatnot. Thus the diminutive hatbag becomes a fad with the young bathing girl.

Another beach fad is the rubber doll bathing bag which is made of bright colored rubber and is designed in the form of a large doll with swinging arms and legs. A drawstring is fitted at the back of the doll head.

And have you seen the new per hair-do? The hair grows longer at one side of the head than on the other and the longer hair is whirled across the back of the head until it overlaps the short hair giving a long-haired effect. The head looks as though the hair is plastered to it.

A new hat designed for youthful misses is called the "tea for two" chappeau. It's a small head-shaped felt without a brim but with a tab resembling a horse's blinder downward over one side of the head, almost covering the eye. Thus a girl can make eyes at a man at the next table without her escort seeing her.

Whatever length the matron chooses for her fall frocks, the flapper will still consider the shorter the merrier. Her skirts will not grow longer if she can help it.

Brilliant red finger nails and earlobes must harmonize, say the flappers. The very tip of the ear is exposed after all these years of concealment and it pearly paleness is glorified with the rouge pot. Nails are tinted red and then enameled to give additional glow.

LEAGUE MEETING.

Forty-four Attend Regular Gathering Held on Thursday Evening.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Sept. 7.—In spite of the very busy season, the regular League meeting on Thursday evening drew an attendance of forty-four. The programme was conducted by the devotional department. In the absence of the convenor of this department, Mr. Thos. Fry, the meeting was led by Miss Agnes Thomson. The devotional topic, "Stewardship Down Through the Ages," the last of the stewardship series, was given by Rev. Mr. Daniel, who gave a short sketch of the whole series of topics which have proved most interesting and helpful during the past year.

The annual meeting of the League will be held on Sept. 23rd so that the new officers will have time to arrange for the rally programme the first week of October. The regular meeting led by the social department will thus be on the 30th of September.

A number of Petherick's Corners people attended the annual social evening of the Rylstone Sabbath school held on the lawn at the home of Mr. Malcolm Totton, superintendent of the school last Monday evening. A splendid crowd attended in spite of the cool weather, and the total proceeds were almost sixty dollars. Music was supplied by Spencer's orchestra. Miss Irene Stephens, Mrs. Amort, Mrs. Crossen, Messrs. Ed. Anderson and Roger Lain, Mr. Malcolm Totton, all contributed numbers which added to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Mrs. W. T. Allen was hostess at a delightful party last Wednesday evening in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Allan, of Chicago, U.S.A.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barnum attended Toronto Exhibition during the week end.

Carpenters have almost completed the erection of Mr. Thos. Fry's new barn. This up-to-date steel structure will replace the one destroyed by lightning over a month ago.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

One of the most potent of gems is the jacinth, assigned as to-day's talismanic gem. The wearer of this stone may look for a pleasant and safe journey if he travels to-day. Disease will not touch him, even though he pass through the midst of an epidemic. However, effective, this stone must be worn around the neck.

To-day's natal stone is the coral. It protects those who travel, especially if the journey be by water. The ancients believed that to whose born on an anniversary of this date, the coral brought unabating vitality and the power to attract the opposite sex.

Yellow is the color decreed for wear on this day by those who desire to benefit from legacy or other generosity.

Cosmos will prove fortunate to-day if used as a decoration. Courtship will be successful if pursued under the influence of this flower.

Women Tell

Others how this new hygienic pad discards easily as tissue — no laundry

BECAUSE one woman so advises others, and because doctors so urge, most women are deserting the old-time "sanitary pad" for a new and better way.

Eight in 10 better-class women now use "KOTEX."

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads.

Deodorizes, thus ending ALL danger of offending.

Obtainable at all drug and department stores simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitancy.

Package of 12 costs only a few cents. Proves old ways a needless risk. In fairness to yourself, try it.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

REV. JOHN WESLEY AND MRS. VAZEILLE

The founder of Methodism found in women a quicker responsiveness to his ideas and they in him, an inspiring teacher and amiable friend. So it was that he was very susceptible to the feminine influence and was at various times ready to marry four women. One was the daughter of a clergyman, but she was already given to another. The second and third nursed him through sickness and his gratitude could have taken the form of matrimony; the fourth was a Mrs. Vazeille, a widow of a London merchant, who became the Mrs. Wesley. Wesley had met with a mishap while walking on London Bridge; he had slipped and injured his ankle. The next eight days he rested in the home of Mrs. Vazeille, and at the end of this period, the couple went out and were married.

A few weeks later Wesley wrote to his wife:

". . . Do I write too soon? Have not you, above all people in the world, a right to hear from me as soon as I possibly can? You have surely a right to have every proof of love I can give and to all the little help which is in my power. For you have given me your own self. O, how can we praise God enough for making us helpmeets for each other. I am utterly astonished at His goodness. Let not only our lips, but our lives shew forth His praise!"

But never was a hasty marriage so thoroughly repented in leisure as this one. Wesley's life became a nightmare. His wife was jealous and added to this failing a variety of others. The domestic state of the Wesleys can be judged from the following excerpt from a letter written by John Wesley to Mrs. Wesley seven years after their marriage:

". . . I insist on choosing my own company. I insist upon conversing, by speaking or writing, with those whom I (not you) judge proper . . . You will denounce against me all the curses from Genesis to the Revelations—but you gain no ground thereby."

Butterflies Live Longer With Heads Removed

PARIS, Sept. 3.—(Associated Press).—Life without a head is not only possible, but as the Academy of Sciences was informed, there are insects that live longer without their heads than with them.

In describing the investigations carried on for many years by the Reverend Father Cambouet, a missionary in Madagascar, Professor Bouvier said they were in continuation of those described by Edmond Perrier, before the Academy, in 1911, in which certain caterpillars survived the loss of their heads and became chrysalises and then headless butterflies.

Father Cambouet found that over eighty headless butterflies, belonging to two different families, not only survived the loss of their heads but lived appreciably longer than other members of their families which had not been deprived of their heads.

CONQUER CONSTIPATION EASILY

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN relieves constipation because it is 100% BRAN

Mr. McEnery tried part-bran substitutes — but only ALL-BRAN brought complete relief. Here's what he says:

"For fifteen years I was constantly bothered with constipation. . . . About two years ago I tried out mixed bran and corn flakes but did not get much relief. Some eighteen months ago, I began using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. From the first week to this good day, I have never had to take a dose of any laxative medicine of any description."

JAMES D. MCENERY
(Address on request)

Constipation is the enemy of health. The cause of more than forty diseases. Don't let this insidious trouble send its poisons through your body. Pimples, spots before the eyes, indigestion and headaches—are warning signs.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation or your money is refunded. Delicious with milk, fruit or with other cereals. Fine in cooking.

Made by Kellogg in London, Canada. Sold by all grocers. Served everywhere.

Daily Short Story

LEFT-OVERS

Helen Ames sighed a little as she watched Blake Pettit dancing with Lucile Forrest. Lucile was a graceful dancer and danced in perfect rhythm with Blake. Helen was a beautiful dancer, too, but Blake never asked her.

"A combination hard to beat," murmured Helen to herself.

"You said it!" ejaculated a pleasant voice beside her. "Say, you and I appear to be left-overs. Will you dance this with me?"

"Bob! I didn't know you were there," and Helen blushed, for if she admired Blake Pettit, she scorned homely Bob Benson, who could not dance without trampling all over his partner's feet. Helen was quite indignant now that he should classify her as a "left-over!"

"Thank you, Bob, but I am tired," she smiled up at him. "I am glad to rest here for a while."

"I suppose you've dated up for every dance," he said wistfully.

She nodded brightly, but she felt guilty indeed, for she was hoping someone would ask her, and thus rid her of the amused glances of the other girls who passed them every minute or two.

"Poor Helen," she heard Lucile's nasty little laugh as she danced past them with Blake.

"Why 'poor Helen?'" queried Bob's cool voice beside her. "Is that little Forrest cat scratching you because you're sitting here with a left-over?"

"Does it matter what she thinks?" blazed Helen, and suddenly, as if in the flame of her own wrath, it was revealed to her that it didn't matter what Lucile Forrest thought or said. Helen saw Blake bowing stiffly as he released Lucile to the custody of her mother, and he came back across the floor, darkly handsome, his eyes on Helen. Her heart fluttered.

"He heard what Lucile said—he is sorry for me," came the quick thought, and Helen smiled and dimpled at Blake's handsome, good-natured face as he stopped before her.

"I'm sorry, Blake—Bob and I are resting a bit," she said. Blake went off, flushed. He was not often refused for such a yokel as Bob Benson and he would wait many a day before he asked Helen again. Helen knew it, and the knowledge left a sting in her heart.

"That was fine of you, Helen, to speak in that way, but you've ruined a good dance for yourself," Bob remonstrated.

"Shall we dance?" she smiled recklessly, and they danced! Bob did the best he could. He was eager to learn, and Helen found that, if she helped him along, he would improve greatly. But alas for her satin slippers!

"I'm not worth it," groaned Bob when it was over and he knelt down to polish her little slippers with his handkerchief. "You see, when I was in college, I was too busy grinding an education to indulge in any indoor sports—but I can skate and ski—how about it, Helen, will you go skating with me at Boody's pond? The ice is perfect there and a full moon!"

"That sounds tempting," she laughed, "but I cannot skate!"

"I'll teach you to skate—and there will be some music there—and a peanut stand—and hot dogs—Do you like 'em?"

"I adore them!"

She had forgotten all about handsome Blake Pettis, for Bob's blue eyes were holding her own steadfastly.

The next evening was the happiest she had known. On the ice, Bob was at his best. Blake Pettis skated well, but Bob was without a peer. Under his guidance, Helen Ames found herself gliding across the steely ice as if on wings.

"Better than dancing, eh?" murmured Bob.

"Almost," she smiled, for Helen had always loved to dance. "Why, where are you going—what is the matter, Bob?" He did not answer but darted away like a swallow toward the upper end of the pond and a dark, ugly spot where a red muffler glowed.

"Man through the ice!" called someone as they raced past her. "Two of them," she heard another call. "It's Blake and Lucille." Helen was trembling all over when she reached the danger spot. She saw them take Blake out of Bob's dripping arms—saw him lift Lucile above the ice. Then the ice cracked with a sharp report. Bob had rescued two, and wearied by the supreme effort had crumpled up and gone under.

Helen quetly fainted.

After what seemed a long, long time, she opened her eyes in the pavilion on the bank.

"Where is he?" asked Helen. "Is he safe?"

"Right as rain," chirruped Blake Pettis smugly.

"I mean Bob—where is Bob?" she asked fiercely.

"I'm all right, Helen," said Bob's big, quiet voice beside her, and then she discovered that it was Bob who was behind her all the time, his hand holding a hot drink to her white lips.

A great peace came over her—the peace and joy of knowing that the one man in the world had spoken to her sleeping heart and awakened Love. "Do not go away again," she murmured.

Bob laughed, a big satisfied laugh. "No one can scare me away from you as long as I live," he said softly, so that only they two could hear.

CANADA FEELS EFFECT OF THE FRENCH CRISIS

Exchange Situation Must Be Straightened Out Says Speaker.

BRITISH CAPITAL.

Vincent Eastwood Discusses Matter With the Local Rotary Club.

That unless the United States assists in restoring the exchange situation in France to something like normal, Canada will wait in vain for the flow of British capital necessary to develop her resources, was the opinion expressed by Mr. Vincent Eastwood, local manager of the Royal Bank, in a thoughtful address before the Peterboro Rotary Club to-day.

Mr. Eastwood explained that causes of France's financial plight as fifty per cent. political and fifty per cent. technical. He showed how heavily the burden of the war had pressed upon the French people, with the northern industrial district overrun by the invaders, the vast investments of the French in Germany and Russia wiped out, and with the country owing vast sums to the United States for the repayment of which no arrangemen capable of being carried out by France could be made.

The result of this condition made it impossible for France to liquidate any of her large debt to Britain and British capital suffered accordingly. This, in the view of the speaker, shut off from Canada any present hope of the assistance of British capital which was needed so much in this country.

Mr. Eastwood was introduced by Rotarian G. A. Gillespie, and the thanks of the club were extended to him after his address by Past President J. W. McDermid.

Past President Fred L. Roy was in the chair to-day and the attendance was good.

Forbidden To Cut Hair Girl, 14, Shoots Herself

BRIDGETON, N. J., Sept. 7 (United Press). — Because her father, a church deacon, refused to permit Annabelle E. Lewis, 14-year-old High School girl, to have her hair bobbed, Annabelle killed herself on Monday.

All summer long she begged permission to have her hair bobbed. Howard F. Lewis, her father, said bobbed hair was against the word of God and refused. She brought school chums to her home to tell her father of the comfort of a bobbed head and to show him how stylish it was.

"I was unable to take her to a barber," the father explained. "She became sulky. When her mother asked her to help with the breakfast dishes she continued to read a newspaper. I scolded her. Without a word she went upstairs, sulking. Then I heard the report of a gun, and, rushing to the second floor, there was Annabelle's body on the floor of my bedroom."

Annabelle was a popular sophomore at Bridgeton High School. An inquest will be held on Tuesday.

CANADIAN DELEGATION DECIDES TO WITHDRAW CLAIM FOR SEAT IN LEAGUE OF NATIONS COUNCIL

Other Dominions Likely To Follow Lead of Canada.

FUTURE CLAIMANTS.

Feeling Indicates Necessity of Reckoning Them Among Council Candidates.

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent).

GENEVA, Sept. 7.—The Canadian delegation to the League of Nations met secretly to-day and decided temporarily to abandon its claim for a semi-permanent seat on the League Council.

"For the present, Canada will not press claim to a Council seat," Sir George Foster told the United Press, "although she will reserve the right to put forward such a demand in the future."

This decision naturally does not commit the other Dominions, which retain liberty of action, but since Canada was considered to be the most prominent potential candidate for the Council among the British Dominions, her abstentation from the scramble for a Council seat evoked the belief that all the Dominions would refrain from urging similar claims during this session. Together with Canada, it was understood heretofore that Australia might become as strong a contender for a seat. The sentiment of the Dominion delegates indicated that they must be reckoned among the future claimants for direct representation in the Council.

LAWN BOWLING

This city may have been very quiet in some parts yesterday, but those who happened to go past the bowling green saw a tournament in full swing. On Labor Day the Peterborough bowlers had intended to go to Cobourg to bowl but yesterday morning they received a phone call telling them that the grounds were too wet to play and as the Peterborough boys were determined not to lose a day's sport they organized a tournament and had eight outside rinks come, six from Cobourg and two from Campbellford.

The tournament took the form of Scotch doubles. J. Bennett and J. Howden were the winners, L. Curvin of Cobourg, came second, T. C. Elliot third and M. McCullough, Cobourg, fourth.

RADICAL PAPERS CALL STUDENTS MONARCHISTS

German Press Points To Bonn Convention as Example of Reaction.

Monarchists Control.

Prussian Government and Diet Defied in Resolutions Adopted.

That the ex-Kaiser would be invited back to rule Germany, the Republican Constitution of Weimar nullified and Pan-Germanism and anti-Semitism exalted to national virtues, if the present leaders of the students of German colleges had their way, is the consensus of German Liberal newspapers, following the riot of reaction that prevailed at the "Studententag" held in Bonn the first week of August.

The overwhelming majority of the some 200 delegates and officials of the college groups linked together in the National Students' Association voted down nearly every progressive measure and adopted resolutions defying the Prussian Ministry of Education and the Prussian Diet opening the way for a schism in the association through making demands unacceptable by the student bodies of some of the more liberal universities, such as Heidelberg and Bonn.

Characteristic of the spirit of the convention was the applause that greeted Herr Poehlmann, leader of the anti-Semitic students in Hanover, who made life so unbearable last spring for Professor Theodor Lessing, a Jewish Liberal, that his classes were suspended and he received an assignment for special research work as the result of a compromise settlement between the rowdy students and the college authorities.

Herr Poehlmann recounted with pride his part in the affair, and the students adopted a resolution approving his acts and demanding that the college authorities and the Prussian Ministry of Education drop the proceedings instituted against eleven of the ringleaders in the Hanover row.

On Aug. 18 a Jewish Telegraph Agency dispatch from Berlin reported that an official statement issued in Hanover said the anti-Semitic students would not be prosecuted for their share in the Lessing affair.

Call Dr. Becker Too Lenient.

This announcement drew much caustic comment from the Liberal papers, which already had frequently criticized Dr. Becker, the Independent Democratic Minister of Education, for his leniency toward the reactionary leaders among the students and his failure to assert his authority in the face of their defiance. Some of the papers wanted to know if Otto Braun, Socialist Premier of Prussia, did not think it about time to take a hand in the matter and show the young reactionaries that they were not above the law.

A feature of the Bonn convention was the adoption of a resolution declaring that race, not nationality, was the basis for affiliation with the Students' Association, and calling upon the unit in Heidelberg to revise its local rules in conformity with this decision before next January or be expelled.

This was also a challenge to the Prussian Diet, which only a few weeks previously had instructed Dr. Becker to have the Prussian universities adopt the nationality principle instead of the racial. Under the nationality rule groups of German students in Austria and Czechoslovakia, which now play so big a part in the reactionary Pan-German movement, would be barred from official affiliation with the Students' Association.

In voicing admiration for the hard fight for liberalism put up at the Bonn convention by Herr Hober of Heidelberg and a small number of students of West German colleges against the reactionary majority, several Democratic and Socialist newspapers pointed out that when the National Students' Association was organized directly after the World War, the students, most of whom had seen actual service at the front, were anti-war and republican in sentiment, whereas their successors knew hardly anything of the horrors of war and were being brought up by reactionary professors and parents to regard the "good old days" of the Kaiser as worthy of admiration.

Fortunately, the critics continued, the masses of the German people are learning to reason for themselves and not to depend upon college men for their opinions on systems of government.

Mussolini Bars Gerlach.

Helmuth von Gerlach, the well-known Liberal publicist, writes indignantly in the Welt am Montag, his Berlin weekly, about his recent experiences in trying to make a trip to Southern Tyrol, or Upper Agide, as that territory is officially called since coming under Italian rule.

It appears that Herr von Gerlach had planned to spend part of his vacation in Upper Agide for the purpose of seeing if conditions were as bad for the Germans and Austrians living there as they were painted during the exchange of left-handed compliments over the situation between Rome and Berlin last spring.

So the German writer went to the Italian Consulate in Berlin and had his passport visaed for entry into Italy without any difficulty. But when he arrived at Brenner Pass he was ordered from the train by the Italian border guards and subjected to a detailed quiz, at the he could not continue his journey. When Herr Gerlach drew attention to the visa of the Italian Consul General in Berlin the border official shrugged his shoulders and remarked, "That doesn't make any difference to me."

Herr Gerlach says he does not dispute the right of the Fascisti to prevent foreigners from studying the functioning of their system of government if they wish to, but he thinks it is a shame for the Consulate in Berlin to issue visas that are worthless when the border is reached. Consequently he has taken the matter up with the Foreign Office.

Ebert Tablet in St. Paul's Church.

When the civic associations of Frankfort-on-the-Main announced a couple of weeks before German Constitution Day that they were going to place a tablet to Frederick Ebert, first President of the German Republic, in the historic St. Paul's Church in commemoration of his visit to the church three years ago, during the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the meeting there of the German National Assembly in the revolutionary days of 1848, the church authorities raised a protest. They pointed out that the late President never had belonged to the Evangelical Church, nor had he been of any significance to it.

This brought a volley of criticism from the Liberal papers, which remarked that such narrow sectarianism was a disgrace to the city of Frankfort, and that St. Paul's Church was more than a mere Evangelical house of worship through its association with the history of the early struggles of German republicanism.

Then the City Administration gave notice that, as the owner of the church, it intended to have the Ebert memorial placed in St. Paul's. And on Aug. 11 the tablet was duly dedicated as the climax of the Constitution Day celebration by the municipal authorities.

Rumania Bars "Potyomkin."

A Get poor quick device ....

I have concluded that the tricycle recently acquired by my daughter Doris is nothing more nor less than a scheme to sell nuts and bolts. We get a loss of a gallon of nuts and bolts to the mile. I have it in my lap half the time, putting on new parts. Doris gets no farther than the first trees before it starts to lose hairpins and screws.

Sooner or later I am going to investigate the tricycle industry and see who is really behind it. The truth is that when I paid down my forty-nine cents for that tricycle, I was a little suspicious. I knew there was a catch in it somewhere. Why, we can leave that tricycle in the corner overnight, and in the morning the floor will be all littered—it drips worst than a Christmas tree.

Our vacuum cleaner has indegtion once a week when it gets an overdose of tricycle accessories.

COULD CATHOLIC BE PRESIDENT

Analogy Drawn Between Smith and Laurier By New York Paper.

CITY DISTASTEFUL.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 7. — (By Canadian Press).—There has been much speculation in political circles and in the newspapers lately regarding the chances of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York receiving the Democratic nomination for president in 1928 in view of his Roman Catholic faith.

Bishop Adna W. Leonard of the Methodist Episcopal church, president of the New York Anti-Saloon League, recently stated that "no governor who kisses the papal ring can get within gunshot of the White House." The bishop was referring to an action of Governor Smith, as told by the newspapers, in connection with the recent Eucharistic Congress.

Mark Sullivan, writing in the New York Herald-Tribune from Washington, D.C., makes an interesting analogy between the late Sir Wilfred Laurier, prime minister of Canada from 1890 to 1907, and Governor Smith, in commenting on the question whether a Roman Catholic can be elected president of the United States. Mr. Sullivan says:

"To assert that no Catholic can ever become president of the United States is a risky adventure into certainty about the future. Some degree of analogy to the present situation in the United States can be found in a Canadian condition that existed from thirty to fifteen years ago. In Canada, at the beginning of that period, political tension between Catholics and Protestants was stronger than it is now or ever has been in the United States. It was stronger, among other reasons, because it paralleled a racial division between French-Canadians, who were practically all Catholics, and persons of British descent.

"Yet in 1896, against confident prophecies that no Catholic and no French Canadian could become Premier, Wilfred Laurier, who was both, became Premier of Canada and was kept in office through three succeeding general elections—in 1899, 1903 and 1907. It was not until 1911 that Laurier and his party were turned out, on an issue as far as possible from religion—the issue of tariff and commercial reciprocity with the United States.

"But this analogy of Canada and Laurier has more bearing on the general question whether a Catholic can ever become president of the United States than on the specific and immediate question whether Governor Smith of New York will be the next president. Between Laurier and Smith and between their respective situations there is wide disparity. Laurier was the practically undisputed idol of one of Canada's united parties, the Liberals. That Smith is the idol of rather less than half of his party, and that his party is bitterly divided, is so clear that the real problem of Smith is not whether he can be elected president but whether he can get the nomination of his party. Also Laurier was identified primarily with new and alluring policies of self-conscious nationalism, and with other policies agreeable to most of Canada; whereas Smith's primary identification in the public mind is with a policy about prohibition, which, according to all past tests, is distasteful to something more than two-thirds of the voters.

"Smith's administrative achievements as Chief Executive of New York are submerged by his identification with the wet movement and other aspects of his personal position. Another distinction between Laurier and Smith lies in the fact that Laurier, while born among the French Canadians, spent his mature life in western Canada and came to reflect all Canada.

"Governor Smith's handicap consists of the fact that he is a Catholic, plus the fact that he is the outstanding wet in the country, plus the fact that he is from Tammany, plus the fact that he stands in the country's eyes as the personification of New York ideas which the rest of the country finds distasteful. The Methodist Bishop of Buffalo, in adjoining sentences to the one already quoted, said: 'New York is in danger of suffering from the township mind; there is an America outside New York.'

"New York may not know that much of the rest of the country dislikes it; and Governor Smith may not realize that if here were a nominee for the presidency many voters throughout the country would hail the opportunity to show New York what the rest of the country thinks of that city."

NOBLESSE OBLIGE

Being a "Little Tin God" Comes Lessons for Grown-ups.

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON.

The other day in a railroad station I witnessed a little drama. A young man was sending his three small nephews and their mother away on a short vacation.

I stood by while the donor of the holiday was buying the tickets. "Three full fares and a half-fare ticket to C——," said the young man, laying a couple of bills on the counter.

The unusual ticket agent eyed the little group through the grating. "You don't need three full fares if you're not going yourself, do you?" he remarked. "That chap there doesn't need a full-fare ticket, does he?" nodding at the middle-sized boy—all three were almost of a height.

The uncle hesitated only the fraction of a second. "Yes, he does," was the answer. "His birthday was the day before yesterday."

"Little chaps for their ages," said the ticket dispenser, turning away to stamp the slips for the trip. "You could have fooled me on a couple of them."

"Say, John," said another man who also had witnessed the little scene, "What made you do that? They're not your own children and you're doing the kids a kindness. Why didn't you let the railroad stand half? You're not a millionaire and you're doing without your own vacation."

"Well, I'll tell you," laughed John. "I'm in a funny position. The boys think I'm a little tin angel and a Greek God and George Washington all rolled into one. And they were listening.

"I guess you couldn't have done any different yourself. I have to watch myself every minute, I tell you. If I ever slipped up and later on any of them went wrong, I'd think it was me that did it.

"It isn't any too darn comfortable, having a reputation to live up to, but I just have to stand it, that's all. Anyway I suppose it's just as good for me as it is for them. I don't know who's doing who the favor."

First thing the presidents of hundreds of important mining companies do when The Northern Miner reaches their desks is to read it. Letters remain untouched and important work goes to one side while they read The Miner.

Not only does it put them in contact with results of work in all fields, with new deals, with financing arrangements, but it frequently gives a president a fresh and independent angle on developments at his own mine.

The Northern Miner occupies a unique position in the mining industry. All its news is first hand—official. It is written by men who have been associated with mining for a great many years and who know personally the thousands of men who occupy active positions of responsibility, directors, mine managers, superintendents.

Members of The Miner staff are constantly on the move, going from mine to mine, camp to camp, wherever new developments promise news interesting to mining men, shareholders, or the public at large.

If you own mining property or mining shares you should subscribe. The Miner will be just as valuable to you as to company presidents. It brings reliable, understandable information of the greatest importance to anyone who has money invested in the mines. Its news tells what mines are growing, and how, and helps investors to avoid

The New EDISON MAZDA LAMP

The Better Lamp with the Inside Frost

EDISON Mazda announces the greatest achievement in lamp making of the past ten years—a NEW, better, stronger MAZDA Lamp, frosted on the inside. This lamp is of a new, pleasing design and in a neutral, pearl grey tint that blends with any decorative scheme. The inside frosting banishes glare, sheds a soft, diffused light and actually gives more light than old-type frosted lamps. Because the outside is perfectly smooth, the new lamp is more easily cleaned. Added strength has been given by the improved construction. Four sizes of these new Edison Mazda Lamps will take care of your every requirement.

Ask your Edison Mazda Lamp dealer for information regarding proper illumination for your rooms. He will help you to enhance the beauty of your home.

Mr. M. N. Campbell, Progressive Member for Mackenzie, Alberta, voted against the Liberal Government. This is the reason he gives in the House of Commons on Friday, June 25, 1925.

On referring to the report of this committee, I find in the sworn testimony of Mr. Sparks, he refers to a letter dated June 23, 1924, addressed to the Prime Minister, and although it is rather long, perhaps it is important enough for me to weary the House by reading it. It reads:

"Dear Sir.—Confirming the writer's conversation with your secretary, Mr. McGregor, we would respectfully ask the opportunity for a delegation representing this association to lay before the government certain matters in connection with the wholesale smuggling of various classes of goods into Canada.

"We think it would be desirable, should you grant this request, that the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Customs and the Minister of Justice might be present, as the matters which we wish to lay before you affect these three departments.

"We believe the Minister of Finance would be interested in the statement of our opinion that the loss of revenue will exceed $10,000,000 per annum.

"As the prevention of smuggling comes under the Customs Department, certain very important facts which we propose to put before the Government in reference to the ineffectual methods now adopted by the Customs Department will be of interest.

"We shall also call attention to the fact that conditions in the ports, particularly in Montreal, are such that smugglers are practically immune from punishment.

"The whole question of smuggling has become a national problem. It is seriously affecting business, and, as pointed out, causing a tremendous loss of revenue. This association for more than a year has studied this problem and we would like to lay before your government a comprehensive statement covering the matter.

"Trusting you will see your way clear to meet this delegation, and awaiting your early reply, we remain,

Your respectfully.

Canadian Association of Garment Manufacturers. per (signed) R. P. Sparks,
President

This is addressed to the Prime Minister under date of June 23, 1924. In the sworn evidence, Mr. Sparks states that the deputation appeared before the government on the 6th August, 1924. When asked what ministers were present he answered as follows:

"Right Hon. Mackenzie King, Hon. Jacques Bureau, Hon. Mr. Lapointe, Hon. Mr. Graham, and Hon. Mr. King.

Yet, Sir, we find a number of these ministers denying absolutely on February 2 last, that they had any knowledge of these conditions. To my mind, that is amazing.

I am not going into many details, but in my opinion the government had one opportunity to vindicate itself before the country, and I took occasion to point that out to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mackenzie King) privately.

Now I say that this government lost an opportunity of vindicating itself by not going on record as being prepared to face the situation fearlessly and courageously. As I have told the Prime Minister, had he taken that course, I would have been prepared to vote confidence in his government and would have been glad to see them still in the treasury benches. If the government had faced the situation as they ought to have done, I would have felt that the ends of justice were being satisfied.

Toronto Splits Double Game With the Bisons at Home

M'GILL CRICKET RETAINS LEAD IN FINALS FOR ROBERTSON CUP

Belle Telephone Lower For Five Wickets For First Day.

MATCH CALLED.

Play Will Re Resumed Today With McGill at Bat.

MONTREAL, September 6. Canadian Press. - The result of the first day's play in the final of the Ross Robertson Cup Series leaves McGill cricket team in a favorable position over their rivals, the Bell Telephone team of Toronto. Batting first, the Bell Telephone compiled a total of 117, while McGill had made 127 for five wickets, when the stumps were drawn on account of failing light. Play will be resumed to-day with McGill completing their first innings.

Bell Telephone won the toss and went in after a late start, which proved disastrous. Greenwood was bowled by Potter for 1 and Buckley was caught with only 4 on the board.

Hoyle went in and helped to add 23 for the third wicket, before Mitchell upset his stumps. MacNab was next batsman, and 59 was reached before Tate was bowled by Potter after a good innings for 35. Claret was the next to go at 64, and Heather had just gone in when the team adjourned for lunch.

On resuming McNab was at once bowled by Potter, and next Hall, the same bowler also clean bowled Carpenter. Heather and Holland then added 35, when the former was caught at wicket off one of Almas slows.

Dive was run out at 107, and the last wicket added 10 before Byrne fell to Potter, the innings thus ending for 117.

The analysis showed Potter six for 33; Mitchell one for 28; Blaikie one for 29, and Alwin one for 15.

McGill fielding was good although several catches were dropped.

McGill began battling with Alwin and Goodman when with only three scored the latter was bowled by Buckley, making way for Munro. A long stand followed the partnership, adding 99 runs before Munro was bowled by Tate for 57.

Blaikie went in at 102, but a run later Alwin, who had played a long and steady innings for 37, consisting entirely of ones and two.

Rain caused an interruption and on resuming play Potter fell at 121. Wanstall was cleverly caught without scoring, making five down for 121 -Canacho assisted in raising the total to 127, when an appeal for bad light was sustained and stumps were drawn.

LEAFS BREAK IN DOUBLE-HEADER WITH BUFFALO

Bisons Overcome Three-Run Lead to Win Second Lead.

RETAIN LEAGUE LEAD

Reading Loses Its Fourteenth Consecutive Game to Baltimore.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(Canadian Press). Toronto and Buffalo broke even in their double-header at the Queen City yesterday, the Leafs winning the morning game, 3 to 2, and losing in the afternoon, 6 to 5 after the Bisons overcame a three run lead. The Leafs retained their ten game leading margin.

Newark, entertaining Jersey City yesterday, had to postpone the first game because of rain, but played the second game up to the ninth inning only to have Jupe Pluvius finish it with the score tied, 0-0.

Reading lost its fourteenth consecutive game yesterday afternoon to Baltimore. Reading fans braved uncertain weather to see the home team take a 6 to 1 defeat and lose a chance of a comeback when rain descended.

Rain also put a stopper on the second Syracuse-Rochester contest at Syracuse. The first game went through after a delay, for a Rochester win, 4 to 1.

MARY K. BROWNE TURNS PRO. TO OPPOSE LENGLEN

To Play Opposite Suzanne Lenglen on Her Professional Tour.

BRILLIANT CAREER.

Is Expected Her Entry Will Net Her Around $50,000.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press)—Mary K. Browne of Santa Monica, Calif., for 15 years an outstanding lawn tennis star and former national champion, yesterday became a professional.

Ending a brilliant career as an amateur which at one time found her achieving the remarkable feat of reaching the finals of the national golf and semi-finals of the national tennis championships in the same year, the versatile California player announced that she had agreed to oppose Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen in the French girl's projected professional tour under the management of Charles C. Pyle.

While both declined to venture into the subject of compensation, it was revealed that Miss Browne expects her entry into the professional ranks will net her between $40,000 and $50,000.

Admitting that she had been "agonizing" over the matter for several days, Miss Browne described her action as "a matter of business necessity."

"I am dependent upon my own resources and have to earn my own living. The offer of Mr. Pyle was such that I could not refuse it," she declared.

DEFAULT GAMES.

Players on Sick List Force Hydro To Leave League.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 7.—With Adamson and Johnston on the hospital list and DeCarroll out of town, the Hydro were forced to default the remaining games in the semi-finals of the Association softball series to the Clerks and the Mill team will now hook up with last year's champions in a best two out of three series, the first game Tuesday night at 5.30 p.m.

These two aggregations are so evenly matched that the series is likely to go the full three games before a winner is decided. Each has beaten the other once, in their former starts and both games were hard fought and exciting to the last out. Fans are assured of two or three great struggles before the the handsome silver cup donated by the Campbellford Cloth Co. finds a resting place for the year.

It was unfortunate for the Association that the Hydro were forced to default but with Adamson suffering three broken ribs, the result of a collision with Ibey in the fifth inning of last Thursday's game and Johnston not fully recovered from an injury received in a fall some time ago and DeCarrol hte pitcher, called out of town on duty, the Electric boys could not muster a formidable team and decided to default would be the best course to pursue.

The executive held a meeting in the parish hall Saturday night in connection with Fred Adamson's accident and after hearing Ibey's version and the evidence of other representatives of the association, decided it was purely accidental.

PIRATES AHEAD ONE MORE GAME OVER CARDINALS

Red Birds Win First Game By a Rally in the Fifth.

ONE IN SIXTH.

Chicago and Cincinnati Divide Double Labor Day Bill.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press)—The world champion Pittsburgh Pirates returned home from its disastrous western trip yesterday and divided the double holiday bill with the St. Louis Cardinals. The visitors won the morning game, 8 to 1, and in the afternoon the Buccaneers took the contest, 4 to 2. Neither team made any advance in the flag race.

Rhem held Pittsburgh to four hits in the first contest, while three local hurlers, Morrison, Songer and Yde were hit freely by the Cardinals. After having scored one run in each the first and fourth, the Redbirds rallied in the fifth, making five more. The eighth marker came in the seventh. The Pirates made their lone tally in the sixth when Wright scored from second on Cronin's single.

The Cardinals outhit the Pirates in the afternoon but Kremer was master of the situation. Southworth's home run with Douthit on base in the third inning put the visitors in front with two runs but the champions, aided by a walk to Traynor, Cronin's triple and a wild pitch, tied the score in the fourth. Sotheron was driven from the mound in the seventh when Cuyler singled with the bases loaded to drive in a pair of runs.

It was estimated that 10,000 fans saw the morning fray, while 27,000 were present in the afternoon.

Chicago and Cincinnati divided the Labor Day bill at Cincinnati, the the Cubs winning the morning game, 2 to 0, and Cincinnati taking the afternoon contest, 7 to 4.

The morning game proved to be a pitcher's battle, only six hits being made by the two teams. Chicago got two safeties, both off Meeker, a recruit from Portland, Oregon. Errors helped them to score their two runs.

In the afternoon Blake was hit hard while Rixey kept the hits well scattered up to the ninth inning.

Brooklyn and the Phillies split at Philadelphia. The Robins won the first game, 8 to 6, but lost the second, 8 to 2, in seven innings. The Phillies fell on Vance for five runs in the final inning of the opener.

Leach hit a homer in the third inning of the second with the bases loaded and Ulrich kept the Brooklyn hits well scattered thereafter. Rain halted the night cap in the seventh.

TWO IN EIGHTH LOSES ATHLETES GAME TO YANKS

Philadelphia Couldn't Stand Strain of Yankees' Attack in Second.

DIVIDE BILL

Five-Run Rally in Fifth Couldn't Overtake Indians' Lead.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press) — The New York Yankees came from behind today to score two runs in the eighth in a drizzle of rain and beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 2 to 1, in the second half of a doubleheader. Howard Ehmke, after winning the first game for Philadelphia, 5 to 2, rushed into the breach when Walberg weakened in the second but could not hold the Yankee attack.

St. Louis and Cleveland divided a twin bill yesterday afternoon, the Indians winning the first, 7 to 6, and the Browns gaining a 3 to 1 victory in the second.

A five run rally by the Browns in the fifth inning of the first game could not overtake the lead of the Indians, who hit St. Louis pitchers for six runs in the first two innings.

Cleveland had the bases filled and one down in the ninth inning of the nightcap, but Spurgeon hit into a double play.

The Senators copped their tenth straight victory yesterday by taking the first of a home doubleheader from Boston, 2 to 1. The second game was called in the third on account of rain with the Red Sox leading, 1 to 0. The contest closed the home season for Washington.

Chicago won two home games from Detroit, taking the morning game 5 to 4 and the afternoon contest 7 to 5. In the first game Faber, who celebrated his thirty-eighth birthday yesterday, held the visitors safe until the ninth inning when he weakened and was replaced by Connelly. The White Sox won that contest by bunching their hits. In the afternoon contest erratic support behind Rip Collins enabled Chicago to win the game in the eighth inning, three errors and three hits resulting in four runs.

COCKTAIL FROCKS.

Can Be Worn Anytime, Say Designers of These Dresses.

A cocktail frock is one that is good any time and is equally good for young things and grandmothers. The house of Nicole Grout sponsors it and Mme. Grout wore one at the recent winter openings. It was made of gray moire silk and was described by the designer of the house as "what Americans would call an all-the-way-round dress."

OPERATOR TELLS ABOUT TRAGEDY

Says He Didn't Want To Start Show in Irish Village Hall.

DRUMCOLLOGHER, County Limerick, Ireland, Sept. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—An old wooden building without any sort of fire apparatus, packed with men, women and children, an unprotected motion picture projector standing in the middle of the little hall, and inflammable films lying on a nearby table with a candle burning at the other end. This was the stage setting for the Drumcollogher movie disaster as described at the inquest to-day.

William Ford, the owner, gave his testimony himself, in relating the story of some fifty persons who were incinerated in Sunday night's tragedy and many others injured. Ford said he did not even have buckets of water or sand for protection against fire.

Patrick Downing, operator of the machine, told Dr. Timothy Hannigan, the coroner, how two films on the table caught fire, and sobbed as he described the terrible stampede which followed. He declared he had not wanted to start the show at all as he did not like the place, but Ford was anxious to stage the first performance.

William T. Cosgrave, President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State, motored here today and attended Requiem Mass in memory of the victims. The village lost an appreciable percentage of its population and scarcely a family is untouched by the tragedy. It was only the second occasion on which a picture performance had been given here.

BELFAST, Ireland, Sept. 7.—(Canadian Press.)— For the first time in history, a message of sympathy has passed between the two Irish governments.

Finance Minister Hugh Pollock, acting in the absence of Premier Craig, to-day telegraphed President Cosgrave of the Free State Executive Council expressing Ulster's profound sympathy with those bereaved in the cinema tragedy at Drumcollogher.

PLAY BIG GAME HERE TOMORROW

Deloro and Port Hope Meet at Stevenson Park at Four O'clock.

CROWD COMING.

Several hundred fans will accompany Deloro and Port Hope here on Wednesday afternoon, when the teams meet in a sudden-death game to decide which club will carry Eastern Ontario honors and continue the O. B. A. A. intermediate race. Deloro, with the strongest line-up that has ever represented the Smelters, is out after the Ontario championship, and followers of the team are confident of going through.

Port Hope, with a mixture of veterans and youngsters, has a team that will give Deloro a hard battle. Local fans should see a great game to-morrow afternoon at James Stevenson Park, where the teams will start at four o'clock.

LAWN BOWLING.

TORONTO, ept. 7.— Mr. T. C. Elliot of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club competed in the singles competition in Toronto on Friday for the Ontario championship. His first game in Toronto was with S. Garside, of Allandale. The game was 11 to 10 after twelve ends were played, but from there on Mr. Elliot pulled away and won handily. He then met Frank Brown, of London Thistles, last year's champion. The game was close for half way, but Mr. Brown won by 21-9. Mr. Elliot played very well in both games, the score with Mr. Brown does not indicate the closeness of the game. Mr. Brown went on and again won the championship, the second in two years. It was expected that the Peterborough rink would compete, but they were defeated on Wednesday by Bowmanville.

Negro Population Of South In Religious Turmoil Due To Scripture Texts Miner Attaches To Geese

KINGSVILLE, Sept. 7—Messages from the Bible, found attached to the legs of wild geese killed, recently in the South, have thrown negro communities into religious turmoil, according to word received here by Jack Miner, the naturalist.

For a number of years Mr. Miner has been in the habit of attaching brief scriptural messages on metal tags to the legs of wild geese which visited his big pond here. These birds, travelling all over the South, have been shot down at many points along the Atlantic coast-line, and in several cases Mr. Miner has been notified of receipt of his "messages."

The information Mr. Miner has received comes from Georgia and indicates that the negroes, after discovering one or two of these "messages," have become convinced they were heaven-sent. The first of the geese was slain by a negro pastor of a little Baptist church in Mississippi. When the metal tag was found to contain a message the report spread that a bird had come down from Heaven with a message of Holy Writ tied to its leg and that it was probable that the world would soon come to an end.

Then when a second goose bearing another scriptural message was killed in another locality the theory gained new strength and revivals began to spring up such as even negro communities seldom know. Meantime word drifted down from the Far North that an Indian setlement in the Hudson Bay country was feeling much the same way about the matter, because there, too, a wild goose had been found with a verse from the Bible printed on a metal tag attached to its leg.

Beyond expressing the hope that his bird-sent messages will "do good to somebody," Mr. Miner seems little concerned because of the sensation his tags have caused.

STABLE GOVT. IS NEED OF CANADA

Frank Regan Addresses Big Conservative Rally in the Victoria Hall.

Frank Regan, a lawyer of Toronto, was the principal speaker at the big Conservative rally which was held in Victoria Hall on Saturday night. An audience of about 300 listened to the speaker tell of the shortcomings of the Mackenzie King Government and the great need for stable government which Mr. Meighen was prepared to give to this country.

Styling himself as one of the silent voters of the country and one who personally feels that one of the greatest issues in this campaign is the crying need of stable government and the breaking up of the group system. Mr. Regan criticized Mackenzie King for the manner in which he had aided group government and the way in which he had thrown away the great and glorious principles of the Liberal party, stating that it was impossible to get stable government under conditions as they existed in the last Parliament when a few Progressives ran the country. The customs scandal was given as one of the results of unstable government, and for this alone the King Ministry stands convicted today for failing to put a stop to smuggling when they knew it was going on.

"Mr. King will never be able to give the country the kind of government that it needs, for he can never get himself away from the criminals in Ottawa, and the only man who can is the Hon. Arthur Meighen. It is time for a change, and the only way it is to be brought about is to elect Mr. Peck on the 14th of September and to give Mr. Meighen a few more seats, for he is not tied up to those people at Ottawa who have made these affairs possible. He has a real national policy, the kind that this country needs, and if put in power the country will again move toward prosperity and towards developing the resources which it possesses," said the speaker.

The constiutional question was also discussed, for, according to Mr. Regan, it is a real issue in this campaign, but he takes a different attitude to it, for he thinks that Canada is more and more separating herself, through Mackenzie King's policy, from Great Britain and making towards the United States, for it was only found, on the event of the King Government that the North America Act was not sufficient to carry on the government of the country with. "Mr. King asked for dissolution, but was refused. In a few days Meighen asked for it and received it. So both men got what they wanted, but Mr. King is sore because he did not receive it, for he wanted the election machinery. If the machinery is honestly operated and controlled there should be no advantage to either party, but it is only when it is not honestly operated and controlled that their is an advantage, and I believe therein lies the real issue as to Mr. King wanting the dissolution," said Mr. Regan.

Other speakers of the evening were Alderman Ackerman and Mr. Peck. V. J. McElderry occupied the chair.

COOLIDGE DENIES ARMS RACE THREAT

U. S. Has No Intention Of Increasing Its Armaments.

PAUL SMITH'S, N.Y., Sept. 7.—(United Press).—President Coolidge has flatly denied that his spokesman had threatened Europe with a competitive armament race unless limitation treaties are entered into. Some despatches conveying such an alleged threat have caused consternation abroad.

The President caused to be reiterated the view that the United States not only favored arms limitations by treaty but intended to go further and voluntary limit itself to armaments required by national defence without regard for the program of other nations.

LAMPHAM'S RED HUSSAR BAND

With Clayton Lampham, Conductor, and Miss Elizabeth Roderick

Lampham's Band is one of the finest musical organizations in North America, and a truly pleasing programme is assured. In addition to Miss Roderick, "Flossette," a favorite in vaudeville, will introduce her original "Saxo-vola," an instrument played like a violin but with greater tonal qualities. Her costumes are very elaborate, her talent is incomparable and her natural charm and attractiveness makes her part in the programme one of the great musical features.

Lampham's Band will appear at all afternoon and evening performances, assisted by Miss Roderick.

HERRIOTT CENSURED BY LYONS COUNCIL

Former Premier May Lose Mayoralty of His Native City.

LYONS, France, Sept. 7.—(United Press.) — Edouard Herriott, twice ousted as Premier of France, may soon lose his job as Mayor of Lyons as well. The Socialist Municipal Council has paved the way for Herriott's resignation here by voting to censure him for abandoning his fight against the "bloc national" and joining the Poincare cabinet.

Herriott has replied indicating his intention to put up a fight in an effort to obtain a majority in the Municipal Council and remain Mayor of his home city.

PHOSPHORESCENT TIPS.

Latest French Fashion Is Coated Finger Nails.

When the lights go down in the Paris theatres, there is likely to be a pretty glow from the stalls and the boxes and other fashionable seats if the latest manicure novelty becomes general. A coating of phosphorus is applied to the finger nails. In a subdued light this gives a pretty glow, and as the hands move they provoke faint gleams of light.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

Watson—the needle! Also some thread. We want to se a medal on Richard Dix's manly bosom. He deserves one because of his latest Paramount comedy, "Say it Again," which opened at the Capitol Theatre yesterday to highly enthusiastic audiences. It's bully!

The very idea of the story, written by Luther Reed and Ray Harris, gives one a big laugh. Our American hero romantically looking for the nurse who took care of him at a war hospital, sets out for the Balkan kingdom in which she lives.

On the way over Chester Conklin, long lost Prince of Spezonia, bursts into his cabin. It is explained that he, a delicatessen shop keeper, had been found by the nobility of the kingdom and asked to take his rightful place. All of which he was perfectly willing to do until—he discovered the fates met by his predecessors in the "king business." They all came to a glorious death" at the hands of revolutionists.

Dix and "Gunboat" Smith offer to help. A triumphant entrance is made into the capital city with the two Americans seated on either side of Conklin All are dressed in the quaint costume of the country. Therefore when the real prince, on catching sight of an anarchist, jumps out of the carriage, nothing is thought of it. And—Richard is greeted as heir!

Then the fun begins. Dix can't speak anything but English. He tries to protest but all to no avail. This period ends when he is forced to marry the princess. He doesn't object on discovering her to be his lady of love.

The real prince, after a night at a grog house, feels a bit sore to think this young chap has been getting all the glory. Fellow drunks agree with him, and soon word spreads around as to what has happened. A mob marches on the castle.

Seeing that there is nothing to do but stand their ground Dix and "Gunboat" gleefully proceed to the fray. After the fight is over, Richard grabs "the gal" and hops on a boat bound for the State. She then recognizes him as her one time patient, and everyone is made happy.

Director Gregory La Cava deserves a lot of credit for his skillful handling of the scenario. It is not often that such a picture arrives in our midst. When it does—the only thing to say is—go early if you desire a seat at the Capitol.

AT THE REGENT

JOSEPH CONRAD NOVEL IS MADE INTO BEAUTIFUL PICTURE BY FOX

And now a Conrad story on the screen.

The brilliant works of Joseph Conrad are as widely read as those of the most popular modern fictionist and William Fox has selected the most romantic of this authors wonderful writings to transfer to the screen

In "The Silver Treasure" which played the Regent Theatre Saturday, all of the adventure, daring, reckless spirit and bravado of Conrad's "Nostromo" are vividly depicted. The typical Conrad swing and development have been incorporated in the screen version.

Director Rowland V. Lee, maker of "As No Man Has Loved" and "Havoc," two spectacular William Fox successes, believes "The Silver Treasure" ranks with the best productions made under his direction.

In the colorful role of "Nostromo," the central figure of the absorbing story is George O'Brien, who, since his phenomenal success in "The Iron Horse," "The Man Who Came Back," "The Dancers," "Thank You" and "Havoc" has risen to spectacular histrionic heights. The Fox star is peculiarly fitted for this role. His smiling, buoyant personality dovetails perfectly with the rich description Conrad gives the dauntless adventurer of the South American coast.

Inspection that maintains fine Quality & Workmanship

General Motors of Canada inspection . . . thorough, exacting and invariable . . . assures the buyers of its cars quality and precision through and through.

Every bit of raw material is carefully tested.

Every individual part is gauged for accuracy.

Every assembled unit is inspected for workmanship.

Every finished car is examined and road-tested before it is approved for shipment.

And finally, every car is thoroughly inspected by the dealer before it is delivered.

Step by step, part by part, unit by unit and in the whole, General Motors of Canada applies the most precise methods of test and inspection to every car it builds . . . spares no pains to insure the satisfaction of the owner.

Sharp eyes, trained hands, instruments that measure to a ten-thousandth of an inch . . . these and an unbending policy which tolerates no variation from precision . . . guard General Motors quality and workmanship.

They maintain that superiority of Cadillac which has become a byword.

They safeguard McLaughlin-Buick dependability.

They hold for Oakland the good will it has won.

They are part and parcel of the thorough worth conceded to Oldsmobile.

They have met and withstood the critical scrutiny leveled on the new Pontiac.

They explain the quality available at low cost in Chevrolet.

They typify the whole spirit and everlasting dependability of General Motors of Canada.

WEDDING BELLS.

The marriage of Rose Gladys, daughter of Mr. A. Mumford, of London, England, to Mr. George Melton, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Melton of this city, took place on Saturday, September 4th, at 12.30 p.m.

The bride who was given away by Mr. Albert Stanley, was attired in ivory georgette, with side drapes of Chantilly lace and long tulle veil held with lace bandeau and orange wreath and carried a sheaf of lilies

Little Joan Melton, niece of the bridegroom, made a dainty little flower girl, and was dressed in a frock of maize georgette, with little frilled cap to match, and carried a crook from which hung a tiny basket of sweet peas.

Mr. D. G. Melton brother of the groom, acted as best man, and Mr. J. Cridland as usher.

Folowing the ceremony, lunch was served at the home of Mrs. G. T. Melton, who assisted the bride in receiving the guests

Later, Mr and Mrs Melton left by motor for a trip to Montreal, the bride travelling in a green satin-faced canton, with black velvet hat and grey fox fur.

On their return the will reside at Fleming Place.

RIDDELL—LUTHER.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Murray street Baptist church, by the Rev. Dr. Rose, when Margaret May, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Riddell, became the bride of Percy Luther, son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Luther. The bride looked lovely in a gown of flat crepe and a cap shaped veil with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of pink and white flowers. Miss Dorothy Metcalfe acted as bridesmaid in a gown of mauve georgette with hat to match and carried a bouquet of mauve and white flowers.

Mr. Herb Trantor of New York, acted as best man in a capable manner. Mr. Sutton presided at the organ and played very sweetly during the ceremony. The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful presents, showing the high esteem in which they are held. The young couple left later for a motor trip to Toronto and Niagara and upon their return will reside at 75 Crescent street.

OBITUARY.

MRS. W. MOHER.

The death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital on September 6 of Mrs. Mary Moher, beloved wife of Mr. W. Moher.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing husband, four children: Mr. Michael Murphy of this city, Mrs. H. Curran, Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. A. Laroeque and Mrs. M. McGregor, both of Toronto.

The funeral will take place Wednesday morning at 8.45 from 81 London Street to St. Peter's Cathedral, and proceed to the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

MRS. M. C. SIMPSON.

There passed away in Detroit, Mich., at the home of her daughter, on August 21, Mrs. M. C. Simpson. Social, with a very charming personality, which endeared her to many friends, her frequent visits to Peterboro some few years ago were always looked forward to with pleasurable delight by a wide circle of acquaintances.

Owing to declining health and to escape the rigorous northern climate for some years she has spent the winters in Florida or California.

The deceased lady is survived by one daughter, Mrs. C. J. Holton, of Detroit. Mrs. Simpson was a cousin of Mr. J. T. Tucker, Reid Street, City.

ARCHIBALD LILLICO.

CHESLEY, Sept. 7. — Archibald Lillico, one of the Township of Elderslie's oldest and best known residents, died at his home on Aug. 31. The late Mr. Lillico was born at Peterborough 79 years ago, and was a descendant of the United Empire Loyalists. He was one of the pioneers of the district, having settled here in 1867, and had lived in the locality ever since. He was married in 1872 to Frances J. White, who survives him. Besides his widow he leaves to mourn his loss a family of six: P. J. Lillico of Toronto, Archibald M. of London, Arthur L., Kirkland Lake; Mrs. (Dr.) Crichton, Lindsay; Miss Lillico, Toronto, and David C. on the homestead. One daughter, Mrs. A. Reid, predeceased him 15 years ago.

MENTIONED FOR SYRIA.

News from Syria indicates that the war with the Druses is over for the time being—that is, until the harvests are completed. But the situation still is grave in the vicinity of Damascus. It is being whispered in Paris that General Weygand might resume the high commissionership. If so the country might find a little peace. Weygand is liked and respected by almost all factions in Syria. His political affiliations in Jaris probably prohibit him the job.

BOTHERED WITH HEADACHES?

A lot of people are. Some have headaches from one cause—some from another. A very common cause is eye strain. Probably it causes more headaches than any other one thing. Here is good news — where headache is caused by eye strain all that needs to be done is to get rid of the eye strain. Glasses do that in thousands of cases. We supply them.

NOMINATION LISTS COMPLETED FOR 245 ELECTORAL DISTRICTS ONLY ONE ACCLAMATION SEAT

Held For 218 of the 245 Seats in House of Commons.

CLOSED AT 2 P.M.

Two Party Leaders Nominated as Candidates in Manitoba.

OTTAWA, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press).—The official nominations yesterday marked the final line-up of the candidates who will contest the ridings in the Federal general elections a week from yesterday. Nominations were held from 12 to 2 p.m., standard time for 218 of the 245 seats in the House of Commons, the other 27 constituencies, which are of particularly large areas, having held their nominations a week ago, to facilitate preparations for the voting.

With the exception of Quebec, where the situation is not quite so definite as in the other provinces, and the riding of Provencher, in Manitoba, where there was an acclamation in the advance nominations, indications based on early returns were that there would be a contest in every constituency. The acclamation in Provencher was due to the failure of the Conservative candidate to file his papers before the nominations closed. In the general election a year ago there were no acclamations.

Quebec Line-up

MONTREAL, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press).—With the filing yesterday of nomination papers for 132 candidates in the Province of Quebec, the curtain ascended in the last act of the election play. Added to the three constituencies in which nominations had already been held—Pontiac, Gaspe and Charlevoix-Saguenay—the figure representing the total number of candidates in Quebec reaches 138.

In 58 ridings there are straight party contests, except in Portneuf, where Simeon Delisle, the former Liberal deputy, is opposed by Armand Marcotte, who runs as an Independent-Liberal.

Six divisions will see triangular fights. In four of these the Liberal former member is being opposed by an Independent-Liberal in addition to a Conservative; in one—Labelle—the former Independent member, Henri Bourassa, is fighting a "Protectionist" and a straight Conservative, while in Qebec South the triangle is made up of one Liberal and two Conservatives, one of the latter runnning as an Independent.

In one constituency—the Cartier Division of Montreal—the battle is quadrangular, S. W. Jacobs, the ex-member, facing an opposition comprising Louis Wolfe (Conservative), Paul Parent (Independent-Liberal), and Michel Bunay (Socialist).

The four Quebec ministers are contesting seats in which they have previously run, Hon. Sir George Perley soliciting the suffrages of Argenteuil; Hon. E. L. Patenaude, Jacques Cartier; Hon. Andre Fauteux, Bagon; and Hon. E. Paquet, Bonaventure.

Last October Sir George Perley was victorious in Argenteuil by a majority of 200; Hon. Mr. Patenaude was defeated in Jacques Cartier by 1,870; Hon. Mr. Fauteux was defeated in Bagot by 774; but in the Son Of H. G. Wells Would Direct Movies

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (Special).—Frank Wells, son of H. G. Well, British author and historian, has come to the United States for a short visit in order to study to become a motion picture director. He arrived on the Anchor liner Tuscania yesterday, attempting to hide his identity, and eager that whatever might be said about him would not emphasize the fact that he was "his father's son." Wells is a youngster just out of college, fired with the thrill of megaphoning orders to the temperamental stars of moving picture colonies.

DRESSED FOWL FAIR PLANNED

Dates Tentatively Set For December 8 and 9 Next.

MERCHANTS HELP..

At a meeting of the committee in charge of the proposed Dressed Fowl Fair to be held in Peterborough this winter, the date was last night tentatively set for December 8 and 9. The arrangements cannot be definitely completed until news is received of the dates of other fairs of a similar nature, with which it is desired not to conflict.

Reports from dealers show that the Fair is appreciated by them, and indicate that there will be good patronage.

There will be a meeting tonight of the Poultry Association and it is expected that an attempt will be made to change the date of the annual Poultry Show from the first week in January to fall on the same date as the Dressed Fowl Fair.

The merchants of the city are co-operating in the Fair, and they will give information to any who are interested, or this may be obtained from the Chamber of Commerce.

THE WEATHER.

That the fall season is slowly but surely advancing is seen and felt in the morning mists and the dropping temperature. This morning the thermometer was at 38 degrees, the lowest for many weeks. A heavy fog covered most of the city but on the higher points Old Sol shone with his accustomed brilliancy. There is the material here for a germinette or a little filosophy, but I forbear, as this is the election season. Heavy rains in some portions of Alberta yesterday were followed by several inches of snow, breaking all records for the early appearance of the beautiful.—W. P.

DUBLIN, September 8. — Captain Redmond, son of the former Irish leader, and Thomas O'Donnell, member of the former Irish party in Parliament, propose to form a new constitutional party in the Irish Free State. MAY RECOMMEND THAT CHILDREN BE VACCINATED

Board of Education Committee Empowered To Interview School Doctor.

SCHOOLS OPEN.

Fewer Pupils at Collegiate Institute—More at Public Schools.

At a meeting of the Board of Education last night the Supervision Committee was authorised to take up with the School Medical Officer the proposal to have all school children vaccinated as a protection against smallpox. It was explained that the cases of smallpox now in Peterborough are very mild, but there is danger of a spreading of the disease when the children congregate in school. The proposal is that children unable to have the vaccination done by the family physician should receive the treatment free from the School Medical Officer, but this is to be considered by the committee.

H. R. H. Kenner, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, reported 545 pupils admitted today. There were 584 admitted on the first day last year. Pupils in the main building today numbered 382 and in the commercial department 163, compared with last year's figures of 401 in the main building and 183 in the commercial department. The decrease in registration, in Mr. Kenner's opinion, indicates that times are good. In years of depression boys cannot get work, and come to school, but this year there are 32 fewer registrations in the main building, indicating better business.

James Abraham, Attendance Officer, was complimented by the Board on the success of the playgrounds this summer under his guidance. The fact that he had been instrumental in teaching many boys to swim was noted with appreciation, and a letter will be sent to Mr. Abraham congratulating him on this forward movement.

The request of the Exhibition Board for a half holiday on Tuesday so that the children may attend Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was granted before Mr. Kenner pointed out that the day is a half holiday in any event because of the General Election.

Mr. Mowat reported that the first day registration at the Public schools was slightly in advance of last year. The schools are in splendid condition, he said.

LEAGUE BY UNANIMOUS VOTE ADMITS GERMANY AS MEMBER AND CONFERS SEAT IN COUNCIL

Number of Non-Permanent Seats Increased From Six To Nine.

TREATY IN FORCE.

Locarno Pacts Made Effective By Action—Delegates Leave Berlin.

GENEVA, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press) — Europe buried the great war today when amid applause that shook the hall of the League of Nations assembly, Germany was unanimously elected a member of the League and unanimously also accorded a permanent seat on the League Council.

France Answers First

When roll call of states was taken, Foreign Minister Briand of France, pronounced a sonorous "yes" and turned his eyes toward the press galleries as if he wanted the word to go forth throughout the world that France was first and foremost to welcome her ancient enemy into the fold of conciliation and harmony.

Foreign Minister Vandervelde of Belgium with equal enthusiasm proclaimed approval of Germany's admission, while Sir Austen Chamberlain's contribution to unanimity on behalf of Great Britain was crisp, clear, and easily heard throughout the crowded auditorium.

President Ninchitich of Assembly was visibly moved when he announced Germany's unanimous admission. M. Ninchitch is foreign minister of Jugo-Slavia, the country which now embraces the town of Sarajevo, the scene of the assassination of the Austrian Archduke Ferdinand which was the initial incident in the outbreak of the world war.

"It shows, after all," he said, "that those men of faith were right when during the League troubles of last March (when Germany's election was blocked). They were not disheartened by difficulties which seemed almost overpowering. We have accomplished today by voting Germany in, one of the most necessary, most delicate and most important tasks in the development of the League of Nations."

Two minutes after adjournment of the Assembly until afternoon League Secretary, General Sir Eric Drummond had flashed a telegram to Foreign Minister Stresemann in Berlin, announcing Germany's election and elevation to the Council. The German delegation is expected to arrive in Geneva tomorrow night, to take part in Friday's session.

Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General of the League, telegraphed The Acht Uhr Abendblatt today:

"The entry of Germany is a matter for general rejoicing to all caring or working for the League and a guarantee for the success of any future efforts it may be called upon to make for the maintenance of world peace, to secure which is its chief aim."

The assembly also approved the designation of Germany to a permanent seat in the League council and an increase in the number of non-permanent council members from six to nine. Both these measures were adopted unanimously. Forty-eight states participated in the voting and applause shook the hall as the result was announced.

The election of Germany to League membership automatically brings into force the treaty of mutual guarantee initiated at Locarno last October by representatives of Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Germany.

The treaty binds the contracting parties to the territorial status quo as regards the frontiers between Germany and Belgium and between Germany and France as fixed by the Versailles treaty. It also stipulates that disputes between these countries which it may not be possible to settle by normal methods of diplomacy shall be submitted to judcial decision or to a conciliation commission. The failure of the latter to settle questions would bring their submission to the council of the League.

DELEGATES DEPART.

New Theory Is Advanced As To Cause Of Cancer

NEW YORK, September 8. — Dr. William S. Bainbridge, cancer and skin disease specialist, yesterday advanced the theory that cancer, contrary to the general belief, is a group of diseases which must be separated before a cure can be effected. Speaking before the annual convention of the American Academy of Physiotherapy, he expressed the belief that multiple ailments, each sustained by the other, were the basis of all cancer, and that attempts to eradicate one disease were useless.

Endorse Stand of Spokesman But Will Consider Churchill's Wish.

LONDON, Sept. 8.— (Canadian Press.)—After a meeting of the Cabinet Coal Committee yesterday to discuss how to deal with the owners' refusal to negotiate a national agreement, Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and his colleagues appear to have decided to proceed with the negotiations without the owners present.

Most of the miners' leaders are at present attending the Trade Union Congress at Bournemouth, but in response to a telephonic communication in behalf of the Government they left for London last night hurriedly, and it is supposed that they will meet the Cabinet committee to-day.

The central committee of the Mining Association (owners) announced yesterday that it endorsed everything expressed by Evan Williams to the Government yesterday. However, in deference to Right Hon. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, it will refer to its constituent districts to ascertain whether there is any desire to reconstitute the Mining Association as a national negotiating body.

There is no possibility of the owners' district associations meeting before Friday or Saturday, but the central committee hopes to have the views of the local bodies before it at a meeting Monday.

Frog Acts As Mother; Brings Up Young Birds

LLANDRINIO, Wales, Sept. 8 (United News).—An evoluting frog has confounded Science by developing a mother instinct usually thought to be reserved for the higher animals. In a hedge bank near here, the frog, a female, is bringing up a family of robins, whose mother apparently had been killed.

She is busy all day collecting worms and flies for her family, pausing only to croak angrily when curious visitors get too near the nest.

TELL OF INFERNO AT INQUEST OF THEATRE PANIC

Twenty-six of the Victims Were Charred Beyond Identification.

ORDERS INQUIRY.

Owner of Building Placed Under Detention by the Authorities.

DRUMCOLLAGHER, County Limerick, Ireland, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—Forty-eight of those who perished Sunday night in the fire which swept a flimsy wooden structure where a moving picture was being shown were buried in the local churchyard in a common grave yesterday. Twenty-six of them were charred beyond identification.

The story of the disaster which has put so many families in this district in mourning was told at a coroner's inquest yesterday. It was a story harrowing in its details of men, women and children packed into a building almost ready to collapse and without adequate entrance of exist, of a motion picture projector unprotected and a candle burning near inflammable film.

Then when a spark set the films alight in the crowded upper floor of the building, efforts to quench the flames only succeeded in spreading them in all directions.

A great panic ensued. The solitary exit was soon blocked; the rickety stairs broke through, and shortly the floor collapsed. Frightened people tried to escape by barred windows, others were caught in the struggling mass. Many did reach the outer air, but not less than 50 were burned or crushed to death.

The owner of the building, William Ford, who was one of those to escape, admitted there was no protection against fire in his building. The operator of the machine, Patrick Downing, who also escaped, told of the burning candle and the blazing films, and his endeavors to put out the flames and keep the people from becoming panic stricken.

Both these men are under detention, and President Cosgrave, of the Irish Free State, who came here to lend his sympathy to the stricken people, declared that he will order a thorough investigation. He attended the funeral services yesterday, which were conducted by the Bishop of Limerick.

SECTION MAN KILLED.

Jumps In Front of Train To Take Pick Off the Track.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 8.—Edward Hill, aged 65, a section man employed on the Canadian National Railways, jumped in front of a passenger train near Thorndale at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, in an attempt to pick up a pick which had been left on the tracks and might have casued a wreck, and was instantly killed.

He and a number of other men had just lifted a handcar from the rails to allow a train to pass, when he noticed the pick. He had just seized it when the locomotive hit him. The train was in charge of Engineer William Johnston and Conductor Richard Drake. An inquest was ordered and the body was viewed by a jury yesterday afternoon.

ALDERMEN ARE PEACE MAKERS; OLD DISPUTE IS CLEARED UP AT REGULAR COUNCIL MEETING

Fire Chief and M. Abramson Agree To Forget Quarrel of Last May.

HOLIDAY CHANGED.

Civic Holiday Will Be Observed on First Monday in August.

Last night's meeting of the City Council was something of a peace conference, as the long-standing dispute between Fire Chief George Gimblett and Morris Abramson was settled by their shaking hands after both parties to the argument had explained the matter to the Council.

It was the regular September meeting of the Council and most of the business was of a routine nature, passing through with little discussion. Two deputations were heard with regard to street improvements.

The dispute between the Fire Chief and Mr. Abramson arose from a fire near the latter's premises on May 18. It had already been aired in Police Court, where Mr. Abramson had paid a fine of one dollar for interfering with the Fire Brigade, and both parties to the dispute had appeared before the Fire, Water and Light Committee at different meetings.

Mr. Abramson told his story first. He said that the Assistant Chief had ordered him away and then, before he had had a chance to move, the Chief had jumped on him, calling him an improper name. He admitted the authority of the officers of the Fire Brigade, but claimed that it was unnecessary to use such language and wanted an apology.

Aldermen Denne and Greene here moved that it be taken up at a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, but Alderman Turner, chairman of that committee, pointed out that there had already been delays for various reasons and it was decided to continue the discussion in Council.

The Chief said that the plaintiff had been poking around and had been ordered away, as he had admitted, by the Assistant Chief. When he pushed him away Abramson had turned on him, and he had

Fake Infernal Machine Gives Edmonton Fright

EDMONTON, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press).—A loud explosion startled radio operators at the International Bible Students' Association broadcasting station here on Monday. Police found fixed to one of the cross members of the steel radio masts what appeared to be an infernal machine — time-clock, batteries and wires—but the cause of the explosion was found to be giant firecrackers. One unexploded giant cracker was found near the machine and two others were found near the plant.

PRINCE TO VISIT WAR CEMETERY

Will Dedicate British Graves at Mount Scopus, Palestine.

NEXT APRIL.

JERUSALEM, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press).—The Prince of Wales will visit Palestine during April of next year, it is learned, coming here to dedicate the war cemetery on Mount Scopus.

General Sir George McDonagh, Sir Frederick Kenyon, and Lord Arthur Brown have arrived to inspect the war grames on behalf of the British War Graves Commission.

FIRST ENTRIES GIVEN PASSES

Also Receive $5 To Enable Them To Visit Peterborough Exhibition.

BY FAIR BOARD.

The first boy and the first girl to enter the Toronto Exhibition received, in addition to the numerous prizes offered for that performance, a free pass to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition from the hands of Webber F. Turner, who was on the spot to receive them. In addition to the passes Mr. Turner, on behalf of the Exhibition Board, presented them each with $5, which should enable them to pay this city a visit.

Pioneer Lady Of West Dies As Result Of Fall

WINNIPEG, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press). — Mrs. Harriet Cowan, Winnipeg's oldest pioneer woman, died here yesterday, aged 94. She died from the effect of injuries sustained in a fall several days ago.

Mrs. Cowan was born a few miles from the present site of the City of Winnipeg. Many historic incidents are associated with her early days in the Red River settlement.

With her husband she was captured by Louis Riel and confined in Fort Garry, but later escaped. She witnessed the execution of Thomas Scott by the rebel followers of Louis Riel, and brought the first piano into the settlement. As a child Mrs. Cowan was in the thick of frontier warfare, her father being killed by Indians.

Married women and spinsters will soon be indistinguishable by name in Denmark, as both will be addressed by the single prefix "Frue" (Mrs.).

AT THE LIBERAL MASS MEETING TO BE HELD IN THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE ON FRIDAY EVENING, SEPT. 10TH, MISS PAULINE DETWEILLER, PROMINENT CONTRALTO, OF TORONTO, WILL ENTERTAIN THE AUDIENCE WITH A NUMBER OF STIRRING VOCAL SELECTIONS.

ALGY — In Case of Emergency — By BRUCE BAIRNSFATHER

ELECTORS HEAR TWO CANDIDATES EXPOUND VIEWS

Dr. Embury and J. S. Marshall Contesting Hastings-Peterborough Seat.

SPEAK AT MARMORA.

Voters From All Parts of Riding Attend Nomination Meeting.

MARMORA, Sept. 8.—Dr. A. T. Embury, Conservative, and John L. Marshall, Liberal choice, were duly nominated at Marmora on Tuesday by their parties to contest Hastings-Peterborough in the coming election. By the hour of two, when nominations closed, a representative assemblage of electors from all over the riding filled the Town Hall. On motion of Mr. Marshall, seconded by C. Bedell, George West of Madoc took the chair.

Dr. Embury was the first speaker. In the course of his opening remarks, he said that if Hastings-Peterborough had gone by acclamation, it would look bad for the opposite party on paper on the morrow. Thereby they would lose a great deal of prestige. The Liberals in their choice of candidates had not gone very far astray. Dr. Embury referred to the fact that it was many years ago that in old West Hastings there had been a contest between Liberal and Conservative. It being decided at last election that the Progressives had no chance, the Reformers repudiated any chances of their contesting now and took the matter into their own hands. The speaker mentioned that the original collapse of the Reformers took place at the fall of the Ross Government, and that as a party they had never recovered, especially in this riding. Another reason had been the notorious ballot box scandal.

The time had come when, if ever they should rejuvenate their party, it should be now. He congratulated his opponent for the stand he had taken for his party. He had been the only man to come forward, and whereas he respected Mr. Marshall before, he did so more now. The election was not to decide a personal matter between themselves. If this riding had seen fit to return a Conservative in the regimes of Sir Wilfred Laurier, Sir Robert Borden, and Hon. Arthur Meighen, when there was no breath of scandal, how much more should it do so at this election. Dr. Embury's speech concluded with a general reference to the Customs scandal and the constitutional issue, and the thought that if he could be returned eleven months ago by the largest majority any candidate ever received in Hastings County, he might hope to win at this coming election when the reputation of the Reform party stood not so high.

The Liberal candidate followed. He remarked that he was offered the nomination some time ago, but then did not feel physically fit to accept. One day last week his friends insisted and obtained his consent. He was glad to be a Liberal candidate. For the past five years the Government has been the best since Confederation.

Mr. Marshall went on to extol the Robb budget. Speaking on automobiles Mr. Meighen had said, speaking in New Brunswick, that nine out of ten were luxuries. The speaker believed that nine out of ten were necessities. Dealing with the constitutional issue, he remarked: "They say we are not loyal because we question the action of the Governor-General. He then cited instances in 1842, 1849 and 1860, when disrespect was shown to the Governor-Generals of those years by Conservatives.

Proceeding, he dealt with the Customs scandal, Mr. Meighen's proposed pulpwood embargo, and the old-age pensions bill. He closed by asking the electorate to vote for a tariff policy which was in their own interest.

The next speaker was Mr. MacGillicuddy of Toronto, supporting the Liberal nominee.

A more humorous political speaker would be hard to find. Rounds of laughter greeted his witty utterances, but when he launched into the serious with the old, fighting spirit of his party, he was occasionally challenged by a dissentient in the hall. The same experience befell Col. I. Keillon Mackay of Toronto, a doughty champion of Conservatism, who followed. Happily no disorder occurred, and the breezy interchanges were relished by both parties.

Dr. Embury was then accorded the privilege as first speaker for replying. He said that the matter of old age pensions was introduced but not voted against. As the bill was drafted it was not workable. It did not in the taxation it would involve make provision for some of the poorer sections of the country. There is the promise that a workable measure will be brought out by Arthur Meighen if his party is returned, which will win the support of Liberals and Progressives, as well as that of Conservatives.

In connection with the pulpwood embargo, he had interviewed his leader who assured him that the interest of the poorest settler in the riding in that matter would be protected. As a final remark he mentioned that in the probe into the customs scandal there was not one tittle of evidence produced against the governments of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Robert Borden or Hon. Arthur Meighen. The scandal was only traceable as far back as Mackenzie King's government went. He congratulated all the speakers on the moderation with which they expressed their views.

The chairman having been thanked for the order maintained the meeting dispersed with the National Anthem.

NOMINATION LISTS COMPLETED, ETC.

bye-election rendered necessary by the death of the member-elect, Joseph Marcil, Mr. Fauteux had reduced the majority in December to 479. Hon. Mr. Parent was defeated in Bonaventure by 529.

Last October nine constituencies returned their victors by less than 1,000 votes. Of these the Conservatives had three, and the Liberals six. Those which went to the Conservatives were St. Lawrence-St. George, Argenteuil, and St. Antoine; while those in which Liberals were elected by less than the millenial number were Montmagny, St. Ann, Wright, Yamaska, Bagot and Bonaventure.

In all other seats the elected candidates enjoyed majorities or pluralities runing into thousands, highest being that of Hochelaga which returned E. C. St. Pere by 10,009, and the next, Mount Royal which returned a Conservative, R. S. White, by 9,248.

Three Triangular Contests.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 8—Thirty-five candidates, including Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader and Prime Minister of Canada, and Robt. Forke, former leader of the Progressive party, have been nominated in Manitoba for the forthcoming Federal elections, and last night the closing Meetings of the campaign open in city and rural constituencies. Supporters of all parties and candidates have displayed an increased interest this year in things political, and when the electors go to the polls on Tuesday, September 14, a record vote is anticipated.

In the constituency of Provencher, A. L. Beaubien, Liberal-Progressive, has been elected by acclamation. His election followed the failure of Dr. R. H. McFadden, Conservative, to fyle papers in the advance nominations held last week. Provencher is the only constituency where a contest will not be held in Manitoba.

Nominations were held in four constituencies last week, and yesterday candidates in thirteen other ridings fyled their papers, completing the records for Manitoba's seventeen seats.

In the constituency of Portage La Prairie, Premier Meighen will be opposed by R. A. McPherson, K.C., Liberal nominee, and in Brandon, Robt. Forke, who is running as a Liberal-Progressive, will oppose D. W. Beaubien, Conservative, in the election of 1925, Mr. Meighen defeated Harry Leader, Progressive, in Portage La Prairie, and Mr. Forke won from Mr. Beaubien.

Triangular contests will be held in three constituencies — St. Boniface, Springfield, and Winnipeg north. In the latter riding A. A. Heaps, Labor candidate and member of the last house, is opposed by Dr. G. B. McTavish, Liberal, and R. R. Knox, Conservative.

Besides Mr. Heaps there will be three other Labor candidates in Manitoba. They are J. S. Woodsworth, Member of the last house, Winnipeg North Centre; Allan Meikle, St. Boniface, and T. H. Dunn in Springfield.

Of the 35 candidates seeking election, sixteen were members of the last house including Hon. Robert Rogers, Conservative, who has been nominated to contest Winnipeg South against J. S. McDiarmid, Liberal; W. W. Kennedy, Conservative, Winnipeg South-centre; Thomas Hay, Conservative, Springeld; Dr. J. P. Howden, Liberal, St. Boniface; Col. H. A. Mullins, Conservative, Marquette, and T. W. Bird, Progressive, Nelson.

A feature of the campaign is the nomination of "fusion" candidates—Liberal - Progressives — in several of the rural ridings, while in the constituency of Selkirk L. P. Bancroft has the joint endorsation of Liberals, Progressives and Labor.

The party line-up follows:

Liberals	4
Conservatives	16
Liberal-Progressives	11
Labor	4
Elected (Liberal-Progressive)	1

WEDDING BELLS.

McCOOEY—McNULTY.

NORWOOD, Sept. 8.—A pretty wedding took place in St. Paul's Roman Catholic church, Norwood, on Tuesday morning last, when Myrtle Margaret McNulty of Asphodel, became the bride of Vincent P. McCooey, of Walkerville, Ont. Rev. Neil McNulty of Owen Sound performed the ceremony.

During the signing of the register Mrs. N. C. Porter rendered a solo.

Miss Mary Cavanagh acted as bridesmaid and Mr. Neil McNulty supported the groom. The young couple will reside in Walkerville.

ALLORE—DOWNEY.

DOWNEYVILLE, Sept. 8.—St. Luke's church, Downeyville, was the scene of a pretty wedding Wednesday morning at eight o'clock, when Rose, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Downey was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Joseph Allore, second son of Mr. Edward and the late Mrs. Allore of Bogart Our.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Galvin, assisted by Rev. Father McGuire of Peterboro.

The wedding party entered the church to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played by Miss Loretto Harrington.

The bride was preceded down the aisle by her sister, Miss Nellie, who wore a gown of peach georgette with silver lace over pink satin, with blonde hat, hose and shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of mauve sweet peas and maiden hair fern.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked beautiful in a frock of white georgette and lace over white satin with hose and shoes to match, wearing a veil of embroidered net with wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas and maiden hair fern. The groom was assisted by his cousin, Charlie Goulat of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

The groom's gift to the bride was a rope of pearls, to the bridesmaid a bar pin set with amethysts and pearls, to the groomsman a set of gold cuff links and to the organist a gold bar pin. Following the nuptial ceremony the bridal party, with about thirty friends, returned to the home of the bride's parents, where dinner was served. After dinner the happy couple left on a trip to Kingston by motor, travelling by boat to the Thousand Islands and other points east. On their return they will reside at Bogart.

INGRAM—DOYLE.

At 8 a.m. on Thursday, September 2nd, 1926. St. Peter's Cathedral was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Louise Mary, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Doyle, of this city, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to William Ingram, son of Mr. John Ingram and the late Mrs. Ingram, of Campbellford.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. J. Maher.

The bride, who was given away be her father, was becomingly attired in white georgette, trimmed with Venetian lace, and white satin ribbon, caught with orange blossoms, over a shell pink slip. She wore an embroidered tulle veil, with coronet of pearls and orange blossoms, white silk hose and kid shoes, and carried an arm bouquet of Butterfly roses and Gypsophila tied with white satin ribbon.

The bridesmaid, Miss Catherine Doyle, sister of the bride, wore a quaint bouffant frock of orchid and silver shot taffeta, black velvet picture hat, orchid hose, black satin shoes, and carried a bouquet of Pernet (yellow) roses, tied with yellow silverene ribbon.

Little Marie Ingram, niece of the groom, was the attractive little flower girl, dressed in Honeydew crepe-de-chine dress, with lace frills, wreath of orange blossoms and pearls, and carried a basket of sweet peas and Gypsophila.

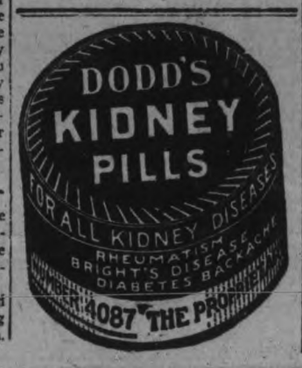
Mr. Robert Ingram, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

During the nuptial mass solos were rendered by Miss Gertrude Doyle, sister of the bride, and Miss Geraldine Collins. Miss Lillian Hurley presided at the organ.

A sumptuous dinner was served after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, when about forty guests repaired to the dining-room which was beautifully decorated with white bells, streamers, ferns and summer flowers.

The happy couple left by motor on a trip to Toronto, Windsor and U.S. cities. The bride travelled in a poudre blue silk and wool knitted sport suit, camel felt hat and hose to match.

Out-of-town guests for the occasion were: Mr. John Ingram and son Fred, of Campbellford, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Ingram, Warkworth, Ont.; Mr. Robert Ingram, Stirling, Ont.; Mr. James A. Doyle, Toronto, Ont.; Mr. Richard Doyle, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Hilton and daughter Miss Susie Milton, Toronto, Ont.; Mrs. Anna Webber, Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. James O'Flynn and sister, Miss Helen O'Flynn, Rochester, N.Y.; Miss Marie Scanlan, Rochester, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. David Lynch and family, Campbellford, Ont.



MAYBEE AND FRASER OFFICIAL NORTHUMBERLAND CANDIDATES

stored a decorous and tense calm.

"And any other man who makes the same statement belongs to the same category," Mr. Fraser added. "You've heard it whispered that I am an atheist. I assure you I am not an atheist, never was, and never will be. (Applause). I am not connecting Mr. Maybee with these stories, but he permits them on his platform. Last night at Colborne a certain gentleman said I was discredited in my town of Trenton. I tell him I have more friends in Trenton than he has in all Canada. And to prove I'm not discredited I'll run for Mayor again next January." (More cheers).

It transpired that the gentleman alluded to by Mr. Fraser was Rev. J. F. B. Belford, M.P.P.

"This man who said at Colborne that I was discredited in my own town, is the same man who wrote me this letter last June," Mr. Fraser continued, holding up a letter which he read in part. It was written on the paper of the Legislature of Ontario and signed by Mr. Belford, asking Mr. Fraser for his advice in respect to a Feldspar company.

Mr. Fraser quoted as follows: "They have asked me to go on their board of directors and to act as secretary-treasurer. I feel convinced that would be a mistake from the company's standpoint, as I am not a business man either by nature or training. But I would like some one in whose business acumen I have confidence to look into this thing, and if satisfied go on that board. A lot of stock could be sold, but I would like to have the opinion of a responsible local man in touch with things before I recommend it to my friends. I make no apologies about troubling you. I have an immense respect for your business ability even if your political ideas are punk, and so have many others. If you would look into this thing it would settle it one way or the other at once."

Mr. Fraser's comment was: "In June he is willing to write me that business letter, but in September he says I'm discredited."

"Mr. Maybee has stated on this platform that Liberals lean to disloyalty. I want to say I am just as loyal as Mr. Maybee or any other Canadian. I believe in Canada for Canadians, but not for politicians. I am proud to be a British subject, and any one who reflects on my loyalty oversteps the bounds of decency. Mr. McGarry, the ex-Provincial Treasurer, who was once president of the Whelan Pulp and Paper Company is to speak for Mr. Maybee. I hope you will all enjoy Mr. McGarry's remarks."

Hon. T. A. Garry

"I don't think that last remark was intended in the way of a compliment," said Hon. Mr. McGarry, who called upon the electors to send back to Ottawa M. E. Maybee, their choice in 1921 and 1925.

"There is a vast difference in going into a riding to run and in getting elected there. That man has not the same right as Mr. Maybee, who has served you in the County Council and as Warden." (Cheers and boos).

Mr. McGarry reminded the audience that they were present in order to try to reach a conclusion on September 14.

"So we should be able to discuss this in a friendly way." And with that persuasive hint, Mr. McGarry recalled Mackenzie King's speech in North York last year when he proclaimed his need of a working majority in the House, and of the result of the election with its Conservative gains and Liberal losses.

"By coaxing and bargaining and pussy-footing and by all the adaptations he could contrive, he succeeded in getting enough farmers, few as they were; Woodsworth, the Soviet representative from Winnipeg; Heaps, of Wininpeg; and others to support him. You know that from the hour the House met, there was nothing but bargaining and uncertainty. We had the spectacle of the Forkes and Heaps and Woodsworths commanding to King. 'Dance you beggar, you dance'!!"

Clamorous jeers and cheers drowned out Mr. McGarry's words, but his pantomime lost nothing in effectiveness.

"Legislature inimical to the farmers of Ontario was adopted upon the dictation of Woodsworth and Heaps directed by the Russian Soviets from Moscow and St. Petersburg." (More din).

Laughter and a chorus of "Ohs" greeted Mr. McGarry's statement that the Robb Budget had closed the motor factories, and derisive "No, No" shouts replied to his statement that The Toronto Globe was one of the best Liberal papers.

"You say 'No' because it tells the truth," Mr. McGary roared right back.

Although Hon. Mr. Robb announced that the budget would go unchanged, he allowed raw materials for the motor industry to come in free, and gave the automobile manufacturers a reduction in their sales tax. The result, said Mr. McGarry, was that the automobile manufacturers were better off than they were before.

"But the people have to pay the tax the automobile people escape from. I say further the Liberal party recognized in two weeks they had made a fatal mistake. (Boos from the hall). If the budget had gone through as Robb arranged it, if a strong Conservative party had not been there to force an amendment, we'd have had a terrible state of affairs in a riding adjacent to this."

The Canadian dollar is at par, Mr. McGarry asserted, because during the war Sir Thomas White had raised Canada's war loans at home. France and Belgium were never so busy as today, but their francs have declined 300 per cent because both France and Belgium had borrowed from other countries.

Mr. McGarry concluded with passing references to the Conservative tariff policy, and the events in the House of Commons culminating in dissolution.

Liberals Reply.

Sam. Clarke, M.P.P., and after him Mr. Fraser, replied. The interruptions, favorable and adverse, all through the meeting were frequent, and especially toward the close.

"How much will that save the working man?" yelled a youth at Mr. Fraser when he spoke of the penny postage reduction.

"If you can write you can save a cent on every letter you write," was the reply that tickled a large section of the crowd.

"Mr. McGarry referred to me as the light infantry," said Mr. Fraser. "Before they get through with me they'll think I'm the heavy artillery," he snapped.

"Ask Mr. Maybee why he voted against the Robb budget reducing the penny postage, the duty on automobiles and the income tax."

"The Hon. Harry Stevens served one and a half years with the United States army in the Philippines. They didn't say when Stevens came back that he was a rebel," Mr. Fraser emphasized, alluding to criticism against ex-Premier King.

"Mr. McGarry didn't say anything about the De Witt Fosters, the Garlands, Patenaude and Lavergue who talked treason during the war, and are now Conservative candidates."

"Why didn't you run in South Hastings?" some one loudly queried.

"First," Mr. Fraser replied, "because I wasn't offered the nomination there, and, second, because I was offered the nomination here of both Liberals and Progressives, and that worries you a whole lot."

Sam. Clarke's Humor.

"I agree with some of the things Mr. Maybee said," Mr. Clarke began. "He said he was sorry there was another election so soon. I agree with him. And as I look over and listen to this crowd I wouldn't like it a bit better than he does. In fact I wouldn't like to be in his boots, so to speak. Besides, it means about $20,000 to him, that is, $4,000 say for this election and $4,000 a year at Ottawa."

In that vein Mr. Clarke, with wit that barely concealed its hidden barbs, jollied Mr. McGarry, Mr. Maybee and concluded with a shaft at himself.

He admitted that he had been technically a smuggler himself, and said the great majority of people who had ever visited the United States would have to make a similar acknowledgment.

Of the so-called "loyalty cry," he said: "I'm sick and tired of such rubbish. Mr. Maybee almost said we Liberals would break connection with good old England. God bless you, ladies and gentlemen, you'd think these Tories owned the King, the Queen and the whole British Isles. The best Grit stock in Canada came from Scotland, Ireland, and England."

Mr. Clarke returned from a two months' trip to the West on Monday. Pointing at Mr. McGarry, he said: "Tom, you won't get eight seats in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba."

"Why?" he asked rhetorically. "Because half, perhaps two-thirds, of the prairie farmers left the old parties because they couldn't get a square deal from the Tories and couldn't get what they wanted from the Grits."

A voice from the fire escape at the rear of the stage and from the outside: "Why didn't you say a square deal from the Grits too?"

"Well, I did say that. Certainly I said it. You don't know what I did say," and the whole audience rocked with laughter.

But a voice from near the front disturbed Sam's aplomb with the question: "Where was Mackenzie King during the war?"

It threw him off his stride, but the uproar partly afforded him time to recover.

"I don't care what he says," Mr. Clarke remarked, dismissively, and held his glasses again to the notes he had taken.

It was a typical Clarke speech by the dean of Ontario's legislature, and not the least notable was his report that he had never seen such evidences of prosperity in the west as this harvest has produced.

Mr. McGarry Closes.

"The unkindest statement I ever heard on any platform," said Mr. McGarry, "was Mr. Fraser's statement that Harry Stevens was a rebel."

(That remark let loose pandemonium for the next three or four minutes. Cries of "He never," "Put him out," "Sit down").

Mr. Allen's gestures prevailed once more. "Unless there is order I'll close the meeting," he threatened.

"I ask Mr. McGarry to retract that statement," Mr. Fraser warmly demanded.

Mr. McGarry: "I'm a personal friend of Harry Stevens. He was born in London, England, and there's no more patriotic Canadian anywhere."

(Cries of "Take it back").

Mr. McGarry: I think I remember what Mr. Fraser said.

Mr. Fraser: I said Harry Stevens was with the American army in the Philippines and you might as well call Stevens a rebel as Mackenzie King.

Mr. McGarry: I never heard any one call Mackenzie King a rebel. Statements of that kind should never be uttered on public platforms, and I'm sure no Conservative ever said it. I hope I'll never hear it.

Several voices: I heard it.

Mr. McGarry was notified by Mr. Allan that but a minute remained. Many in the audience apparently thought his time had expired and shouted, "Sit down."

"If you don't want to be fair I'll quit. It's always a few noisy ones who try that sort of thing."

Mr. Fraser stood up with his watch out.

"Sit down Fraser," some Conservative yelled.

Mr. Allan explained that Mr. McGarry had one minute left.

"Any man who makes an issue against Harry Stevens," Mr. McGarry, a big, robust man, roared, "makes an issue against one of the greatest representatives Canada has ever had in public life." (Cries of "Sit down").

Above the tumult Mr. McGarry was heard: "Harry Stevens was in the American army where the bullets were thick, but Mackenzie King worked for the Rockefeller Institute where there wasn't any danger."

He turned to his seat with a broad grin as if he had relished the rough going, and Chairman Allan sang the keynote of God Save the King.

CHURCH PETITIONS MEXICAN CONGRESS

Bishops, However, Have Little Hope of Any Result.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—The Catholic Episcopate of Mexico has formally petitioned Congress to repeal or amend the religious clauses of the constitution, so as to eliminate the restrictions which, the Episcopate says, render the life of the Roman Catholic Church in Mexico impossible. There is little hope, even on the part of the Episcopate itself, that Congress will comply.

The petition was delivered by Juan Laine, a prominent Catholic leader, to the congressional representatives of Puebla State. It will be handed to the Secretary of the Chamber of Deputies, who will read it at some future session. Subsequent developments depend upon whether any Deputy demands action upon it.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

This space occupied by Mr. Burnham's letters is paid for by him.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In 1911 the Nationalists who came to Ottawa 27 strong made a determined effort to rule Borden, but he had made no promise to them and being a strong man, he held them in check. Repulsed at that time, and especially during the war, they retired from politics until resurrected by a Conservative leader despairing of his leadership. The English-speaking Conservatives of Quebec stand coldly to one side. The Nationalists have seen how the German-Dutch alliance against the Empire is slowly prevailing in South Africa, and amidst scenes of great enthusiasm for Meighen in Quebec, they are already shouting that Canada no longer belongs to the British Empire. The Reds are with them. At Winnipeg, Toronto and other centres they rejoice in the downfall of governments and of law and order in almost every country. The message of the Old Country to us in reply to Meighen's war-election speech was: "If Canada does not wish to participate in the defence of the Empire we shall have to get along without her." Let your reply to the Nationalists and Empire smashers be decisive. Let there be no selling of Canada for the sake of power. Let us remember country before party.

OBITUARY.

ROBERT BERTRAND.

NORWOOD, Sept. 8.—The death occurred at noon on Sunday at the family residence, King street, of Mr. Robert Bertrand, a highly respected resident of Norwood.

The deceased was twice married, his first wife having predeceased him just four years ago on Sunday. One son, Mr. Harry Bertrand, of Toronto, and one daughter, at home, and his wife, who was formerly Mrs. William McMillan, survive him.

The funeral was held from the family residence on Tuesday afternoon. Interment was made in the Campbellford Cemetery.

JOSEPH PAYNE.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 8.—The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon of the late Joseph Payne from the residence of his son, W. A. Payne, Queen street, Lakefield, and despite the pouring rain, an immense crowd of friends, relatives and neighbors attended to pay the last tribute of respect to one of the oldest residents of the village, one who leaves behind a memory both honorable and honored. The service was in charge of Rev. T. M. Wesley of the United (Presbyterian) Church as Rev. S. A. Kemp, pastor of the Regent Street Church, of which the deceased had been a member, was ill.

Mr. Wesley gave a thoughtful and comforting address. Christianity discovered or re-discovered the secret of courage. Our Lord often said to those whose sufferings he relieved, "Courage, child." His coming was the end of pessimism, for life before that great event was full of deep shadows and lacked hope, but He talked of joy and courage and peace, which were new things in the world He dwelt in. In this world of vanishing things there is one who does not vanish and in Him we find our rest and strength. Before our Lord's coming there was a tendency to take life as something which did not matter as death ended all things and life, after all, was but a grim joke, but the coming of the Messiah brought new life full of hope and courage. St. Paul was one of the first to realize the lack of value of temporal things, looking to the things which endure.

A few months ago the grain which is now being gathered in was sprouting and showing its green shoots, and now it is ripe and ready to be garnered. Just so a few years ago this man was young, and now he is of ripe old age and is gathered in to his reward. The things we love are passing, but the inner man is renewed day by day in all that concerns worship and the soul. We are souls and have bodies which are in reality just overcoats. As the physical strength declines the spiritual strength grows more and more strong, and that is the Christian's hope and strength. Through the sadness of parting there is the hope that the spirit is safely in God's keeping.

Two hymns, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Abide With Me," were sung during the service, after which the cortege left for Warsaw Cemetery, followed by a large number of motor cars containing friends.

WILLIAM H. EDWARDS.

The death occurred Saturday afternoon of William Henry Edwards at his home in Lang, after an illness of several months' duration.

The late Mr. Edwards was born in Otonabee fifty years ago, being a son of Mr. Charles Edawrds and the late Mrs. Edwards. In 1896 he was married to Bertha Wame, who survives, together with a family of ten, Harry, Stanley and Daisy (Mrs. Otter Scriver), of Hastings; Lottie (Mrs. McNevan, of Mather's Corners), Wallie, Isabel, Willie, Gordon, Charlie and Beryl, at home.

The funeral took place Monday afternoon to Keene cemetery. The floral tributes were many and beautiftu l

For the first time in history a message of sympathy has passed between the two Irish governments. From Belfast came an expression of Ulster's profound sympathy in the tragedy, from Hugh Pollick, finance minister, who acted in the absence of Premier Craig. His message was addressed to President Cosgrave.

So great is the anger against Ford that crowds of angry people gathered around his store last night, broke the windows and did further damage. Fortunately for the man, he was in the hands of the police at the time.

NOT A ONE-DAY FAIR.

The outlook for the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition is so uniformly auspicious that the prediction may be safely made that with favourable weather a new attendance record will be set up.

This can be effected, however, only through a realization of the fact that the Peterboro Industrial has left a long way behind those exhibitions that can be seen in one day.

There will be so many attractions offered this year, such a varied array of exhibits and special displays, so many out-of-the-ordinary attractions, that one visit to the grounds will not allow anybody to come close to seeing the whole Exhibition.

The Exhibition runs throughout the week, and the best advice that can be given is to plan to spend two or three days at Exhibition Park.

A gala week for everybody in Peterboro and district next week should be, even if a Federal election had to come along as a counter attraction.

THE LAST STAGES.

With the official nominations yesterday the Federal campaign has entered upon its last stage, with as yet no indication, at least locally, that the electorate is alive to the fact that in six days the compositions of Canada's next Parliament is to be determined.

So far the local campaign has been largely confined to the country sections of the riding.

In the townships the two rival candidates have held a series of meetings with, on the whole, good attendances and some evidence, at least, that the country voters are interesting themselves in the contest, although, even among them, there is no sign of great excitement.

The city electors have had little opportunity of hearing the issues discussed, but with the appearance of Hon. Hugh Guthrie here tonight in the Conservative interest and a Liberal mass meeting announced for Friday night, the interest is expected to show a quick revival, and the final days of the campaign may in some measure atone for the apathy in which the election has so far been regarded.

The party organizations may be expected to play their part, but after all it depends upon the individual elector whether or not Peterboro's total vote will be large enough to be an indication of real concern for Canada's welfare.

TUNNEY AND VALENTINO.

If this were a sermon, we should say that the text is found written in the first verse of the first chapter of the "Book of the Wisdom of the Race" and reads in this way: "Every one has a right to be interested in what interests him."

It is suggested by the arrival of "Gene" Tunney, the challenger of Dempsey, in this city on Tuesday. He was welcomed at the Broad Street Station by a crowd numbering thousands. Of course, there was the usual number of persons curious to know what the fuss was all about, but the heart of the crowd was made up of persons interested in Tunney, the man who has snapped his fingers in the face of the champion heavyweight boxer and dared him to defend his title.

Their desire to see the man was natural, and their interest is legitimate. It would be easy to sneer at them, but those who have other and different interests would be wise to practice a little tolerance; for when it comes to sneering, the patrons of boxing are so expert that only the hardy will run the risk of arousing them to show what they can do. The contempt which they would show for an admirer of a triolet or piece of embroidery or a painting of flowers would be too deep for words.

There are, of course, frequenters of boxing matches who have other interests. Roosevelt was one of them. But they all are intensely masculine men, who can give and take blows and who like to see a test of physical stamina and trained skill in the art of self-defense. The patrons of boxing consetitute one of the many sorts of people that it takes to make up the world.

* * * * *

The unthinking have been criticizing the newspapers severely for the amount of space they devoted to the illness, death and funeral of Valentino. They have insisted that people ought not to be interested in such things and that the newspapers ought not to encourage them.

Now, it is estimated that the average weekly attendance at moving picture theatres in America is 55,000,000. Valentino was one of the most popular moving picture actors. His films had probably been seen by substantially every one of the patrons of the movie theatres. His fate was for the moment one of the most interesting things in all the world to this large number of people. And the newspapers, which take the world as it is, did their best to satisfy that interest, fully aware that the fame of Charles William Eliot, who died at the same time, would outlast that of the young Italian screen sar.

While 55,000,000 Americans have seen the Valentino films, there are probably more than 55,000,000 Americans who never heard of Eliot and will never hear of him.

The movie patrons constitute another group of the many kinds of people that it takes to make up a world. And they are as indifferent as the boxing patrons to the protests of those who think they should be interested in something else.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

GOOD ROADS.

(By City Clerk S. R. Armstrong.)

There are some facts in connection with the subject of good roads that might well be given consideration by the cities of Ontario and by the Government. At present the cities contribute to the cost of construction and maintenance of Provincial highways and suburban roads outside the boundaries of the cities, and the Government pays part of the costs connected with these roads and with other county and township roads throughout the Province.

The cities, in motor license fees and gasoline taxes, contribute to the Government a large share of the moneys it expends on roads, so that the cities not only keep up their own roads within their boundaries, but also contribute to the expense of road construction and maintenance throughout the whole Province.

The city of Peterboro in 1925 raised in its taxes 5.51 mills on the dollar for its streets, not including frontage rates or suburban roads. There was also levied in the taxes $21,163.67 in frontage rates for pavements, and $10,514.44 for suburban roads and Provincial highway. These levies amounted to $134,633.00.

In addition to the sums levied by the municipality in taxes, there was paid by the citizens to the Government $43,200.00 in motor license fees. It is not possible, with the data at hand, to ascertain how much was paid by citizens in gasoline taxes. But the Province collected by means of this tax $1,976,000.00 in 1925. There were 344,112 motor licenses issued, which gives an average of $5.74 per car. In Peterboro 2,222 licenses were issued, and multiplying that number by $5.74, gives $12,754.28. This no doubt is too low a figure, for there are cars, such as delivery trucks, which are used continuously in the cities, and the average taxes paid in the cities no doubt is higher than the average for the Province. But taking the average as given, Peterboro contributed to the Government $55,974.00 in taxes towards the upkeep of roads besides maintaining its own streets and paying a part of the cost of suburban county roads and suburban Provincial highway outside the city.

The total for the year levied was for its own streets, $102,865.00; frontage rates for pavements, $21,163.00; suburban roads, $10,514.55; motor license fees, $43,200.00, and gasoline taxes, $12,754.00, making a total of $190,608.00.

Some, and in positions of authority, do not think that the cities pay enough towards the cost of roads outside of their boundaries. It has been calculated that in the twelve years ending with 1924 $169,518,073 has been expended on roads, and that of this amount the cities contributed 2.9 per cent. and the rural municipalities 41.4 per cent., and this, it is argued, is unfair to the rural municipalities. But notice that the people in the counties had their roads built for 41.4 per cent. of their cost, others paying the balance, while the cities paid the whole cost of their roads and contributed to the cost of the county roads.

It is said that the county roads are of more benefit to the cities than to the country, because the city merchants sell to those who come in from the country to purchase. But the country people do not come in to the cities and buy unless they think it is to their benefit to do so. The merchant procures the goods and keeps it for them to come and procure, and the purchasers get value and obtain what they want.

Besides, it is all the ratepayers of the city who are taxed, and it may be taxed still more, for the county roads, and if the object is to bring customers to the merchants, then the taxpayers bonus the county people in order to bring business to the merchants.

There are many city taxpayers who do not use the roads at all, yet they are required to pay towards the cost of the roads in the counties as well as towards the expenses of the roads in their cities.

There are more motor cars owned by farmers in Ontario than by any other class. And while the city owners of motor cars use the county roads, the county motor car owners use the city roads. They come in to do business, in their own interests, and they bring produce that they sell. They must sell as much in value as they buy, else they could not buy as they do. And if the city should pay towards county roads so that the merchants will sell, should not the farmers pay towards the city roads so that they can sell? No one would suggest that the farmers should contribute towards the city streets, but it would appear to be as sensible as the argument the other way.

Much is said, and rightly, in regard to the tourist traffic and its benefit. That traffic is of great benefit to the counties, for it is in the counties that the principal summer resorts are situated. The tourists, foreign and others, use the city streets, yet while this traffic is a national benefit, the Province does not help to build or maintain the city roads, as it does other roads, not even the city roads that are connecting links of the highways. Heavy motor trucks and buses from outside Peterboro, for instance, use the city streets, and the taxes they pay on their business, the motor license fees and gasoline taxes, go to the Government and are used on roads outside the city, and none in the city.

A number of motor vehicles in the cities, such as delivery cars and trucks and municipal motor vehicles, do not go out of the cities, yet their owners have to pay taxes that are used altogether to build up roads in the country and from which they receive no benefit.

The proposal that the cities should pay more than they now do towards roads outside their boundaries should be most carefully examined. In fact, the whole matter should be examined. The roads should be maintained and the tourist traffic encouraged, but if there is anything unfair or unjust in the present methods of paying for the roads it should be corrected.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition promises more things than the politicians—and its record shows that it has always kept its promises.

No dark horses appeared in the West Peterboro nominations yesterday as the rival parties straightened out for the dash down the stretch.

If people vote as they talk the total vote polled next Tuesday is likely to be small.

The Alberta Farmer tells how Western political speakers were discomfited by farmers who brought copies of Hansard to the meetings with them. Unfortunately, Hansard has only a limited circulation.

The attendance at the Toronto Exhibition Monday shows how firmly the great Exhibition is installed in the hearts of the people of Ontario.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 1-8.
Sterling cables $4.84 5-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was fair. Sales included odd loads of wheat, oats and barley. In sympathy with the strength that developed in other markets a very firm feeling prevailed in the domestic situation and prices in some cases were a shade higher. A moderate trade was done in Canadian Western oats.

The undertone to the market for Spring wheat grades of flour was strong. The foreign and local demand was good and a fair amount of business was worked. The inquiry for Winter wheat grades was moderate and prices were unchanged.

The millfeed market was moderately active and values were firmly maintained. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but steady.

Prices for all grades of eggs were well maintained under a good demand from all sources. The receipts were 691 cases.

Owing to the absence of any important demand for butter, a weak feeling prevailed in the market and prices were fractionally lower. The receipts were 2,648 packages.

The feature of the cheese trade was the weaker feeling that developed and prices were reduced 5-8c to 7-8c per pound. A moderate amount of business was done. The receipts were 8,382 boxes.

The market for beans was steady under a moderate demand and sales of car lots of choice white handpicked were made at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO BUTTER

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 (Canadian Press). — The situation gained strength yesterday in the butter market and all grades from 89 score to 92 score sold from 1-4 to 1-2 cent higher than Saturday's close.

Fresh: 92 score 41 1-2c; 91 score 40 1-2c; 90 score 40c; 89 score 39c.

Centralized: 90 score 40 1-4c; 89 score 38 1-2 to 38 3-4c; 88 score 36c.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press)—Wheat values displayed considerable firmness on the Board of Trade yesterday, chiefly because of unfavorable weather conditions in the Northwest which was hampering the movement of grain to market and a reported Liberal export business over the holidays. Wheat finished 1 1-8 to 1 3-8 higher; corn rose 1 1-8 to 1 3-8c; oats were 1-8 down to 1-4 up, and provisions varied from 15c loss to 5 cents gain.

Strength in the Winnipeg market also helped to lift values here, as did a report that between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 bushels of wheat, domestic and Canadian, had been taken for export.

Foreign demand was said to have improved following cable advices that crop conditions were less favorable because of excessive rains. Snow was reported at Calgary.

Corn was firm with wheat and on scattered buying. Weather conditions over the belt were watched closely, especially when showers were forecast in sections where a period of dry and hot weather was regarded by the trade as needed to mature the crop before frost.

Oats showed a heavy undertone, under heavy selling.

Provisions were lower in line with a drop in hog values.

ENDING CAMPAIGN.

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, the Conservative leader, and Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, the Liberal leader, were both visitors in Toronto yesterday. The Prime Minister addressed a meeting in Port Credit, near here, yesterday afternoon, and the former Premier spoke at Newmarket in his old riding of North York.

Both party leaders are spending the final week of the campaign in the Province of Ontario, and their itineraries have overlapped to some extent. Both are in Owen Sound today and will be in Stratford on Thursday.

"Do you think you'll get your raise?"

"Sure! I'm in good with the boss."

"Well, see that you don't get in bad with him."

The office boys who used the expressions, "in good" and "in bad" afforded the present writer two good examples of English—or perhaps American—in the making. Most of us know what the phrases mean; perhaps only a "high brow" would not recognize them or would pretend not to recognize them.

But it must be recorded, in the interests of the best English, that "in bad," "in good," "in Dutch," and similar phrases, are slang, and therefore to be avoided. They have not reached the latest dictionary.

Probably we should not expect the office boy to say, "The boss approves of me," but he might say, "I stand well with the boss." ("Boss," by the way is still considered "slang" or "colloquial English.")

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A GAME

We do not always win at cards,
For fortune is not always kind,
But man plays on, and disregards
That one's ahead and he's behind.
With smiling face, with tranquil mind,
He bears his losses now and then;
He has not whimpered, has not whined,
But laughs, and deals the cards again.

For, after all, it's all in play,
A little contest for a while,
And they who find it fun are they
Who still can lose and still can smile.
For only fools their luck revile,
With ugly words, and anger hot;
The game's enough to reconcile
A man, a man who wins or not.

And when the cards are laid aside,
And men return to mill or mart,
With some new project to be tried,
Some dream of wealth or dream of art,
I wish the contest we would start,
The daily task, the larger strife,
With smiling face, with sturdy heart—
I wish we made a game of life.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE LURE OF THE MAP

By Dr. Frank Crane.

A little boy in Poland once put his finger on a spot in unexplored Africa and said:

"I want to go there."

As the captain of a ship years later he did go there and told the story in "The Heart of Darkness" under the name Joseph Conrad.

There is a bewitching allurement about a strange map. As children we are attracted to it and when we are grown the map still holds much of its old lure.

The many colored, strangely named countries, the vein-like traceries of mysterious rivers, the crinkled shadings that rise to towering mountains in the mind, ancient names that have come down the centuries trailing rainbow-hued legends, are all seen on the face of a map.

In the lure of the map is the spell of the unknown, the charm of the inapalpable, the seduction of the far away.

The gypsy blood of nomad forbears is stirred. Inherited in our natures is the spark of wanderlust.

Over the broken shore line and empty blanks our imagination fills in the foam-tipped waves riding in on a deep blue sea, or wide pampas of endless green.

From tales by the fireside of the old Norsemen returned from strange lands, down through the colorful record of Ulysses' wanderings and the weird fantasies of Marco Polo and of Sir John Mandeville to the present newspaper accounts of Amundsen's and MacMillan's faring into the far north, of the Rice expedition into the jungle of South America, of the Beebe expedition in search of the mysterious Sargosso Sea, travelers to unfamiliar shores have interested everyone.

Part of the hold Theodore Roosevelt had on the American people consisted in the glamor of the globetrotter, the visitant to the mysterious depths of Africa and the unexplored silence of the upper Amazon.

Burton Holmes has capitalized this innate interest in the far away with the travelogues of other lands. The movies are bringing the sights of other countries before our eyes.

But still in the vague outlines and names of the map our imagination is stirred in the same old way.

The lure of the map remains unchanged.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

STNLEY BALDWIN.

Stanley Baldwin, widely know as the Prime Minister of England, nurses the ambition to find out what, if anything, can be done with pigs.

In his beauiful country home near Stourport, in the Severn valley, he raises pigs for the local market. He likes pigs with a deep strain of the Chinese in them, pigs that can lay on flesh without materially increasing the offal or bone. In circles politically and personally friendly to him, he has been accused of having a secret ambition to raise trained pigs.

40,000 Germs In Kiss French Society Declares

PARIS, Sept. 8.—A kiss may serve as the bridge for at least 40,000 germs, says the annual report of the French Anti-Kissing League, wherein sanitation is set up against "demoniac" osculation. Mony a kiss has resulted mortally the society points out, quite as if this was unknown before. It adds that such hordes of germs are passed about by one kiss that the "dangerous custom" should be abandoned. The league sternly declares that health is better than momentary romance.

Tax Payments Behind; 1925-1926 Comparison

The taxes have not come in quite as well this year as last. This was revealed in the City Treasurer's report to the Council last night, which showed 62.59 per cent. unpaid on August 31, 1926, as against 61.51 per cent. on August 31, 1925. There still remains on this year's roll $484,766.61, while on the same date last year there was $472,739.88. Last year the total was $768,539.99, while this year it is $774,497.70. Since these comparisons have been made the second instalment has become due and further large sums paid.

EXHIBITION ENTRIES CLOSE SATURDAY

MAYBEE AND FRASER OFFICIAL NORTHUMBERLAND CANDIDATES NOISY MEETING IN WARKWORTH

Representatives For Both Sides Present at the Official Nomination of the Conservative and Liberal Candidates For Northumberland County.

HUNDREDS UNABLE TO GAIN ADMISSION.

Speakers Interrupted By the Loud Applause, as Partizanship Swayed the Crowd During the Post-Nomination Speeches—List Is Passed.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, September 8. — Northumberland ballots will be imprinted with the names of William A. Fraser, Liberal, Mayor of Trenton, and Milton E. Maybee, Conservative, of Brighton Township.

Excepting the clamor that punctuated the post-nomination speeches as partizanship swayed the crowd that packed the town hall here yesterday to its last foot of standing room, the official posting of the candidates' names proceeded smoothly and without any unexpected incident.

Mr. John R. Allan, of Campbellford, returning officer of the riding, received the signed documents, and at 2 p.m. announced the results to the throng.

Hundreds were unable even to get near the doors. From all parts of the county they had come, farmers apparently in the majority, women noticeably numerous, and the political flame glowing in every eye. Both camps were largely represented, but the Fraser following seemed the noiseier.

Both candidates were greeted with prolonged cheering, and the afternoon's general impression was that few constituencies in the whole Dominion have generated a hotter fight than Northumberland.

The last week promises the keenest of campaigning and organizing with personal solicitude apparently a big factor.

M. E. Maybee.

Mr. Maybee; speaking first, launched upon review of the customs probe and the consequent report of the investigating commission.

He said that the Canadian Protective Association had laid their information before the Prime Minister and members of the King Cabinet without results. For political reasons no action was taken and R. P. Sparks then gave the information to Hon. H. H. Stevens, who made the charges on the floor of the House.

"The exposure of the Customs Department was the most convicting ever brought forward in the Dominion of Canada, and the King Government stands convicted of the worst charges. (voices, "No, No; Yes, Yes!") ever made before any government in Canada. I don't wonder that you don't want to hear of this but the evidence shows beyond a doubt and I say that on September 14th you will be the judge of that government. It stands convicted with smugglers, dopesters, looters——"

The crowd's uproar silenced Mr. Maybee and Mr. Allan intervened with a warning that order must be maintained so that each side could present its case.

"I don't wonder at all that many of you don't want to hear these things against the King government," Mr. Maybee resumed. "However the question is whether you intend to condone or condemn these things. If you condone them you give a license to future governments to do likewise."

Mr. Maybee quoted from the Toronto Globe as follows: "It is doubtful if the Hon. Mr. Cardin is advocating a wise policy when he tells the Federation of Liberal Clubs of Montreal that the Customs investigation and its disclosures constitute a question of secondary importance so far as the election campaign is concerned. It must not be forgotten that the conditions revealed by this enquiry have stirred the voters from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The people are interested very much in what they haev already learned, and will not tolerate any attempt to suppress or make light of the facts."

Continuing his recital to the last chapter of the dissolution of Parliament, Mr. Maybee said Mr. King then raised the cry of the constitution against Governor-General Byng "who had stood shoulder to shoulder with the Canadian soldiers in the war." (Cheers.)

"The questions before the people of Northumberland are whether or not they intend to condone the customs scandal, whether or not they stand for British connectoin, whether or not they want clean, responsible government."

In an article in the Wall Street Journal the Liberal party was referred to as leaning toward complete political independence, Mr. Maybee said, and it was only through Mr. Meighen that the future of Canada in connection with Great Britain was seen.

Appealing for the electors support of the Conservative party's policy of protection for the manufacturies, for agriculture, for labor, Mr. Maybee said that voting Conservative would avoid an election next year.

"I may not have another opportunity of appealing to you (voice — 'You never will; that's right!' I firmly believe that scores of good Liberals who stand for those principles of the Liberalism of bygone days, will give their first Conservative vote in this election."

W. A. Fraser

"Give it to him, Billy," some one shouted as Mr. Fraser, the Liberal candidate, strided to the front of the platform. He declared that he had no apology to make for standing as an Independent Liberal with Progressive indorsation, and then charged that at Mr. Maybee's meeting at Wooler a few nights ago a Conservative speaker, whom he indicated on the platform and whose name is said to be Gordon Sheppard, had asserted that Fraser had participated in the liquor business as a bootlegger.

"Ladies and gentlemen. I wish to say before you and to this imported prodigy to his face that the statement he made at Wooler is not true, that he can't back it up and that he's a liar."

Again the house was in uproar. At length Mr. Allan's gestures re-

"In His Quiet Moments"

A True Story

Always 'the life of the party' everybody admires Ted Carruthers for his breezy good nature and winning personality. He is a real man through and through.

But in his quiet moments—

Poor Ted has his personal problem from which he cannot shake himself free when alone. A recent illness, the price of overwork, left his health impaired. The doctor says it is only a matter of time.

He now has only a few short years in which to provide for Mary and the children. What is he to do? He is not able to get life insurance and cannot save much more than $300.00 a year. In five years this will be but $1,500.00—not nearly enough!

'Tis now he realizes just what it would have meant if he had insured when able, to provide for his wife an income of at least $100.00 a month ($1,200.00 a year) as long as she lived. At his age (35) $6.40 a week with the London Life would have guaranteed it, and worry would not now be further sapping his strength, killing any chance he may have had of recovery.

The future may easily be made safe for loved ones by insurance, and worry removed from those who have dependents.

STAPLES OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN FOR ELECTION

Independent Candidate in Durham Holds Meeting in Port Hope.

WALDRON SPEAKS.

Chief Speaker Takes Up Matters of Recent Session of House.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 8.—The initial public meeting in the present campaign in the interests of M. H. Staples, Independent candidate for Durham, was held in the Town Hall, Port Hope, on Monday, Sept. 6, at 8 p.m., W. A. Meadows, chairman of the local committee, presiding.

The attendance was good considering the fact that many were out of town or entertaining guests, on account of the holiday, and there were other intervening events.

The chairman, in his opening remarks, referred to the number of ladies present and the decisive influence which they now exercise in political events, and after mentioning the benefits of the Robb budget and the progress and prosperity evident in agriculture, manufactures and trade in Canada, introduced Mr. Gordon Walron, K.C., of Toronto, as the chief speaker of the evening.

"Since the ladies came into politics we have been obliged to modify our arguments and present them in a better way," Mr. Waldron said, and went on to state that Mr. King is now presenting an account of his stewardship, since 1921 until his defeat in June of last year, to the electorate of the Dominion. There had been a material reduction of at least some of the taxes which were bearing heavily upon the people, and a responsible discharge, the speaker believed, of public affairs.

"Mr. Meighen's stewardship is not in question in this election because we know practically nothing about it, but our monies are being disbursed from day to day without the approval of Parliament—a thing unheard of in British parliamentary procedure.

"Assailing the King Government on the customs scandal is about the only definite thing the Conservative party has done in this campaign, but there has been no assault on the tariff question because the country, as a result of war and post-war expenditures, is enormously in debt. We are voting more money each year for administration than the country owed when Sir Wilfrid Laurier went out of power, and this money is being extracted from the pockets of the people, its collection being a matter of extreme difficulty. The income tax, now somewhat reduced, which has been a heavy burden, and the tariff, are two means of supply, and any question of material reduction in general or abolition is today not practical politics. So no tariff question is possible in Canada and none has been raised by our opponents."

Mr. Waldron referred to the speeches of Mr. Meighen in the West where he says the Conservative party does not stand for high protection, but only for a bare, protective principle; and his proposal, when in Quebec, to do away with the preferential tariff, adding the question, "Do you know that the industries of this Province, both native and foreign owned, are here and flourishing very largely because of the preferential tariff? I have no hesitation in saying that hundreds of American concerns locate in this country to obtain its advantages."

"There is no objection made anywhere by the Conservative party to the Robb budget; why then does Mr. Meighen make these differing statements in the Prairies and in the East? Because he must; we are at this moment in the midst of a political revolution accomplished by the farmers of Canada who consolidated the middle west and broke the traditional balance of party power between the East and the West, and as a result the great Conservative party is in distress. Mr. King yielded to the middle west and has been held up as an object of contempt, the taunt being made that he is under the thumb of the prevailing party in that section of the Dominion. Mr. Meighen also yielded by singing a new tune, 'We do not stand for high protection, but only for a bare protective principle'."

The constitutional question was given attention in detail by the speaker, and reference made to the obstructive tactics of Mr. Meighen and his party, resulting finally in Mackenzie King's appeal for dissolution.

"Shall Parliament, and behind Parliament the people, be supreme, or may the Governor-General, for his own political purposes or those of his friends, baffle and defeat the will of the Canadian people? No one that I have heard save some foolish persons has alleged that the royal prerogative obtains any longer."

Mr. Waldron devoted some time to the customs scandal, stating that this and the constitutional question are the only two issues in this campaign outside of abuse and vituperation. "There is no racial, nor religious, question; all that old stuff is for this election tied up." He referred to Honorable H. H. Stevens as "the hero of the customs scandal," and said it was absurd to say Honorable Mackenzie King was in complicity with the smugglers. He accepted Mr. Raney's explanation of the situation as correct and thought that in all probability the amount said to have been lost annually through this channel has been greatly exaggerated.

In conclusion the speaker appealed to his hearers to vote for M. H. Staples on the ground that he believed him to be a worthy candidate, and that "it is important to bring politics upon a basis where we can accomplish something in the government of this country. We want a Liberal victory that will keep the revolution going; it will take five years, perhaps longer, for the Conservative party, which now finds itself discredited on the lake front, to change its tactics and present itself as an unselfish party serving well its country." (Applause).

The chairman then introduced Mr. Melville Staples as making his first bow to a Port Hope audience in the present campaign, with a record above reproach in public and private life and with at least some working knowledge of the country and its needs through his connection at one time as Secretary of the United Farmers of the Province.

Mr. Staples explained his reasons for entering the lists in this election at the repeated invitation of a body of men who had waited upon him with the request that he become a candidate, his final acceptance being made upon the condition that he was not to be a straight party man. "Mr. Waldron has referred to the political revolution in this country in recent years, and no man who has been really gripped by that spirit can ever go back and become a party man.

"A common policy and working toward one end holds men together. There are certain policies which I believe are in the best interests of this country, and as an Independent I must support these. One policy advocated by the United Farmers and by the Liberal party is that of a moderate tariff, a question which is much discussed today and which every candidate must be prepared to meet."

The declared policy of the Liberal party for continued Government ownership of the Canadian National Railways, the speaker said, he stood behind, and made reference to three members in the Meighen Cabinet, Messrs. Bennet, Patenaude and Black, who are out of sympathy with national ownership.

Referring to the reductions in the tariff, Mr. Staples mentioned two specific instances in the purchase of agricultural implements in connection with which he had personally experienced a difference of about $300.00.

"Industries in Canada were never more flourishing than just now, giving the lie to the blue ruin talk of Conservative leaders. Personally I have never had sufficient income since I have been farming to be obliged to pay an income tax, but the problem of our Government is to keep expenditures that weigh upon the citizens on a sufficient level to retain population in Canada with equal opportunities for getting on with the citizens of the country just across the border."

Reference was made to the return of thousands who had gone from Canada to the States and are now coming back, "and if anything would drive people from this country it seems to me it was this miserable 'blue ruin' cry." (Applause).

Some of the difficulties experienced by the United Farmers in establishing their own co-operative companies were the result of legislation by a Conservative Government in Queen's Park, and Mr. Staples referred at some length to statements in the press printed over his opponent's signature, "obviously to do me and those who think with me harm. I can only feel sorry for the man who would print such things, and I think it a pity that this constituency should be represented by a man like that."

The fallacy, according to Mr. Staples' opinion, of many of these statements was pointed out, and in concluding his address he referred to his candidature as an Independent as "no uncertain position," though conflicting opinions had been met with in conversing with the electors of the riding because of his adopting that platform.

"My personal inclination would have been to remain on the farm doing the work which requires brains and demands hard labor, and which I thoroughly enjoy. The thought in my mind is not merely being elected, but the thing I am most concerned about is seeing that policy in which I, as a farmer, believe given a firm voice in Parliament, backed up with conviction. If you will work with me and help me, we may accomplish the work you and I wish to see accomplished, and if the spirit of principle before party gets hold of this country, you and I may be doing the cheering on the evening of Sept. 14." (Applause).

The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

"I am looking forward to my second visit with great pleasure," the Prince is quoted as having told Alexander P. Moore, former United States Ambassador to Spain,

HI-JACKERS ROB DOCK AT WINDSOR

Steal $5,051 From Office of Export Company.

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Five Italian hijackers from Detroit held up and robbed Kaplan's dock, No. 3, Ford City, of $5,051 yesterday morning. The five men came over from Detroit in a speed boat. Tying up to the dock at the Walkerville Boat Club, three of the men came through the yard at the rear of the export dock. They went upstairs to the office. Ordering the cashier to hold up his hands, they reached for the money. The cashier grabbed the telephone to call the police. As he did so, a bullet whistled past his head. The men then grabbed the money and made for their boat. They covered their retreat with a fusilade of revolver shots and made good their escape.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's disillusioned father warns him: Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time. Infamous Lucretia Borgia, greatest power in Rome, invites him to her reception. Also present is exquisite Adriana Varnese, coveted by Borgia's cousin, Donati. The Borgias prepare to poison Adriana's father, so that the girl will be left alone at their mercy. Juan's interest is caught by Adriana. Lucretia warns him Donati is a deadly swordsman. Juan and Donati meet tensely.

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

You Spaniards make pretty speeches, but they have no point," Donati said finally, and his eyes swept Juan from heel to head, contemptuously noting Juan's slenderness.

Juan stood smiling mockingly, and at last Donati moved away, with a little laugh and a shrug of his shoulders so insulting that he half expected Juan to challenge him to a duel as a result. Juan, however, had no mind for anything of the sort at that particular moment. To fight with Donati would have taken time which he wished to devote to furthering his acquaintance with Adriana.

He made his way to the great ballroom, where Adriana was standing with her father. She could not help feeling worried about him, fearful that here in the house of their enemies something horrible might happen to him. Having found him, her thoughts strayed back to Juan.

And Juan, making his way through the throng of guests, tried his hardest to reach her. Women blocked his way. He could have pushed past the men, but their wives and sisters and sweethearts—yes, even mothers, had heard of Don Juan, and those who had not already met him were determined not to lose this opportunity.

Lucretia noted the way in which they detained him and smiled. He came well recommended, this prospective lover of hers. The women of Rome, of all Italy, had had to bow to her in other things; now they would bow in this little matter also. Lucretia Borgia and the famous Don Juan—they would be well suited to each other.

She turned to the servant who paused before her with a tray on which were three glasses of wine, delicately wrought goblets of Venetian glass, exquisite as rainbows. Other servants were making their way through the crowd similarly laden. Lucretia stretched out one slim, white arm with its burden of jewels and took the nearest glass. Her brother, standing beside her, took the farthest one.

And in his hand as it passed over the glass between him and it was the tiny phial given him a few moments before by Neri, the sorcerer.

There was the slightest break in his movement, the slightest hesitation, as his hand paused over that third goblet. When his hand moved again the contents of the glass had been increased by three tiny drops of colorless liquid.

For an instant the serving man's gaze met his. Then Cesare passed around a group of people to the side of the Duke Della Varanese. And Lucretia, talking idly with the courtiers who pressed about her, watched him and Varanese with the eyes of a cat about to pounce on her prey.

There was another who watched, keen eyed. Juan, though apparently devoting himself to a fat, bejeweled dowager, had taken in the little scene. Trained as he had been, he had missed no detail. He had not actually seen the poison trickle into the goblet of wine, but he knew what it meant when Cesare Borgia's hand hesitated over wine meant for another. And when Cesare, apparently distressed that Varanese had not been served, made to offer the guest his own glass, and then, apologizing because he himself had sipped it, beckoned to the serving man who hovered near, Juan, apparently still interested only in the dowager, reached out one hand and took the third glass of wine from the servant's tray.

Schooled though he was to show no feeling, Cesare frowned, and Adriana, seeing that he did, looked up at her father, bewildered. Surely all was not well here. Her fears swarmed about her again.

Juan, pausing in his talk, seemed about to sip the poisoned wine. Then, with the glass half way to his lips, he lowered it again. From the corner of his eye he saw Lucretia's expression. She, too, had dropped her mask for an instant, as had her brother. Consternation swept over her face, but almost instantly was gone as she saw that Juan had noted it. She turned away, but not so far that she could not still observe him.

Again Juan seemed about to drink the wine, and again, apparently reminded of an amusing story, he lowered the glass and bent forward to whisper in the ear of the lewd old woman with whom he talked. With every appearance of being elaborately casual, Lucretia made her way to his side. And as for a third time he raised the glass she laid her hand on his arm.

Exquisitely polite, he turned to her. Meaningly she met his eyes and moved away to the balcony on which the ballroom's long windows opened. Juan made a bow of deep apology to the dowager, who sighed mournfully as he left her to follow Lucretia. Those nearby smiled and shrugged their shoulders. One or two commented on Lucretia's new choice of a lover.

And Adriana, hearing them and seeing what had happened, wondered at the little pain that stabbed at her heart. This man had interested her—and, after all, he was only another of Lucretia Borgia's favorites!

Cesare, watching also, wondered a little. Certain that Juan had known perfectly what he was doing in taking the goblet of poisoned wine, he could not be quite so certain of the young Spaniard's motive in so doing. And for Cesare Borgia not to be quite sure of the motive behind another's actions was a new experience, and not a welcome one. Mentally he chalked up a score against this young upstart.

Juan, joining Lucretia on the moonlit balcony, looked down at her for an instant, and to her it seemed that the music that floated to them from the ballroom, and the white moonlight and the scent of flowers from the garden below, all were blended into the delight that she knew when she gazed up into his heavy lidded eyes. Then she knew stark horror as he lifted the glass of wine in a toast.

To your devastating charm!" he murmured, and was about to drink, she thought, when suddenly he held out the glass to her.

"Let your lips perfume the wine," he begged.

She knew then that he understood what had happened, and both hated and admired him for it. Her thoughts moved as swiftly as a coiled snake that suddenly strikes, but her movement was languid as she lifted one hand and pushed the glass away.

"We Borgias do not share with another," she told him, and his sardonic smile acknowledged her skill.

"My pride gains strength from yours, sweet teacher," he replied, and, turning, emptied the wine over a rose bush that climbed the trellis work of the balcony.

The rose bush was covered with white blossoms. One, on which the wine fell, shriveled and crumpled before their eyes. And Juan, leaning forward, plucked it and, still smiling, held it out to her.

"The rose is richer by a great experience," he said, and mockery of her and laughter at her failure ran through his voice.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MEET AT ROSENEATH

Grandmothers' Day Was Observed—Garden Party Held.

ROSENEATH, Sept. 8.—The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Lily Turner on Thursday afternoon. The meeting was well attended, most of the members being present. The business part was short. The institute decided to donate a special prize of $5 for the grandmother who has with her the most grandchildren at the Fall Fair held in Roseneath on October 13 and 14. The judging will take place at 3 p.m. on Friday, October 14, near the women's rest tent.

It being grandmothers' day, the programme was given by the grandmothers of the institute. Mrs. Mary Brown, who has passed her 80th birthday, was the oldest member present and gave a reading that was most humorous and amusing. Mrs. Albert Nill, of Fenella, was also present, she being the youngest grandmother in the gathering, and respontied when called upon and gave a recitation that was much appreciated. Other grandmothers who favored the audience with interesting papers were Mrs. Joseph Robins and Mrs. Lottie Nichol, while Mrs. Lily Turner and Mrs. M. Davey did their share in making an excellent programme by rendering a duet, also a song, with the grandmothers joining in the chorus. Luncheon was served.

Garden Party.

St. James' Anglican Church held a garden party on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Timlin, who had generously extended the hospitality of their house and grounds for the occasion. In spite of the coolness of the weather, there was a fairly good gathering. The ladies served lunch which was in abundance and very appetizing. Rev. W. A. Pippen was chairman. The programme consisted of duets by Misses Beatrice and Jessie Smith, of Centenery, and a male quartette by Messrs. Eric Kelly, Alvin Kelly, Louis Roberts and Louis Dowler, who responded cheerfully to their encores. The chief artist in the programme was Mr. Jack Smith, of Peterboro, who liberally gave many selections of Scotch, Irish and British songs, which were thoroughly enjoyed. Rev. J. N. Lovelace gave a short address to the audience, but owing to him having indulged in ice cream and the cool evening, said he didn't want to speak too long and freeze the listeners. Mr. Jack Drope spoke a few remarks on behalf of the congregation in appreciation of the good attendance.

Proceeds of the evening amounted to nearly $60.

FAMOUS FEET
..how they're kept free from corns..

ADELAIDE HUGHES' Famous Dancing Feet

"I think a lot of my feet," writes Adelaide Hughes, the charming danseuse of Broadway musical hits.

"So much rests on them—including my pay check' . . . that's why I am so strong for Blue-jay. . . . A dancer's feet lead a hard life. . . . but I never fear corns.

"As soon as I sight a sign of one, I put on a Blue-jay. . . . and it goes before it comes, if you know what I mean."

Thousands of noted folks who reap fame and fortune from their feet, including actors, screen stars and athletes, keep a supply of Blue-jay always at hand—both to keep corns from coming and to banish, quickly and easily, those that insist on arriving . . . At all drug stores.

"Boiling Over" means nothing to SPEEDIRON

PAT'D and REG'D. 1923

Coils Easily Renewed and Repaired

If a coil burns out you simply lift out McClary's Speediron Element. With little effort and expense you can have the coil replaced by your dealer—while you wait. It is just as easy and simple to replace the unit as it is to plug in your iron or toaster.

IN the days of old-fashioned "open" elements, boiling over was a serious matter. Liquids dripping over the sides of the cooking pot and into the exposed wires and grooves frequently caused coils to burn out—a source of much inconvenience and expense.

NOW all that is changed. McClary's wonderful, new Speediron element enables you to cook with your mind at complete ease because you know nothing can injure the element. Your preserves, your soups, your kettle—they may boil over a dozen or a hundred times without doing the slightest damage. The coils in McClary's Speediron are protected by a smooth, cast-iron surface—a surface so durable that hard knocks, falling pots, leaks and drips cannot possibly harm it.

Lasts as Long as the Range Itself

That's the amazing thing about McClary's Speediron. It lasts for years and years. And you have a range that cooks at great speed and saves current. The contact heat principle on which the Speediron operates eliminates waste by radiation—the heat goes into the pot, not into the kitchen. This means increased speed and exceptional economy.

CHINESE SHOOT SAILORS ABOARD BRITISH VESSEL

Considered as Evidence of Soviet Influence and Supplies.

LINK IN CHAIN.

Soviet Activities Against Britain Extend Around Russian Frontier.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press).—With the announcement of Admiralty that casualties had been suffered aboard the Britsh gunboat Cockschafer, and aboard its armed auxiliary, the Kiawo, as result of sniping by Chinese Reds along the banks of Yangse Kiang, the gravity of Bolshevist activity in the Far East was brought home vividly here yesterday. Details of he casualties suffered by the British crews are not available as yet, according to the Admiralty statement.

The aggression of the Canton Reds against the British warships is regarded by observers here as proof of the definite success of Soviet agents in China and as more or less directly due to the enormous supplies of arms and munitins which have been poured into that country under the directions of Karakhan.

The Canton movement appears to be another link in the chain of Soviet activities against Great Britain, extending from China through Tibet, Afghanistan, Turkey, thence through the Balkans and up to the Baltic States, which formerly were part of the Czarist Empire.

LIBERALS MEET AT LANG AND VILLIERS

Makes Plea For Voters To View Issues From National Standpoint.

About seventy-five residents of the Township of Otonabee in the vicinity of Lang gathered at the hall there last night to hear the Liberal candidate, J. J. Duffus; John R. Marshall, and John Dewart, M.C. Michael O'Toole acted as chairman, and Mr. Duffus also addressed a meeting at Villers.

John R. Marshall

A strong plea was made to the electors to view the issues of the present campaign from a national standpoint and not put their own personal interests first, for Canada is large and made up of many classes. Its great need today is men who are broadminded and liberal in their thinking. In presenting the policy of the Liberal party, Mr. Marshall believed that it took in these requirements, for it was a policy that would do the greatest good to the greatest number. The farmer had benefitted by the tariff reduction in implements and with this reduction the manufacturer had also benfited for he was making more implements. The steel industry was pointed to as one which the Conservatives had said was ruined by the Liberal policy, but today there was less steel being imported than in 1914, and the output to the States showed a 40 per cent increast over one year ago.

The Robb budget was reviewed and the Conservatives severely criticised for their part in opposing the budget. Other measures such as the rural credit bill, amendment to grain act and the amendment to the civil service were given as illustration of the Liberal policy, all which went overboard in the hasty dissolution: and the legislation which Mr. King introduced to stop smuggling was practically destroyed by the Conservative majority in the Senate.

John Dewart.

Mr. Dewart dwelt at some length on the tariff and showed the need of trade as the only way in which Canada could be prosperous. She had plenty to sell, but it was expected of her by other nations that she would buy something from them in return for their buying in Canada, for ships have to be loaded both going and coming from a country. In 1921 wheat was worth 90 cents a bushel, cattle and hogs were cheap and every line of business was at a low ebb, but things are quite different to-day after five years of Liberal rule. Mr. Meighen goes through the country pointing out things and he has a remedy, it is high protection, but why did he not apply this remedy in 1921 when things were in a very bad condition. Why? Because he knows it is useless and it is just a way to catch votes, especially in the cities. The Conservative campaign is being run on a single plank that of the customs scandal, for they have nothing of a constructive nature to offer the people of Canada. The man who was chiefly responsible for this customs scandal was a man by the name of Bassilion, who was appointed by the Conservatives in 1916 and discharged by the Liberals.

J. J. Duffus.

It was in the same little hall a good many years ago that Mr. Duffus, then but a mere boy, listened to his first political speech. He did not think then that he would be a candidate for a great party in an election some day. Mr. Regan came in for considerable criticism when he represented him as the scapegoat in this election. The exodus to the United States was discussed and it was stated that a year ago this was the whole cry and now the people are coming mack to Canada and the Conservatives find that this, along with their blue ruin talk has proved false. The scandal campaign of to-day was said to be worse than the campaign practised a year ago. When you read on the bills boards in Carleton, "Vote for Garland and rebuke corruption, a man who was read out of the Conservative party by Sir Robert Borden because he had made $9,000 profiting in drugs during the war, it is just another herring drawn across the track because we are the simon pure fellows and the Liberals are not fit to govern the country, concluded the speaker.

LEAGUE BY UNANIMOUS

eva announcing that Germany had been admitted to the League.

DISTINCTION DESTROYED.

LONDON, Sept. 8. — (United Press.)—Captain Wedgewood Benn, member of Parliament and a leader of the Liberal party, told the United Press to-day that Germany's admission to the League was the most important event since the war.

"It finally destroys the distinction between the so-called allied and enemy powers," he said. "While its effects in Germany will be considerable, its main significance is that it marks another step toward making the League what, if it is to fulfill its function it must be, a true parliament of man."

CANADA PROPOSED.

PARIS, Sept. 8. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—The Geneva correspondent of the Excelsior, a daily paper of Paris, states that some of the British Dominions are urging Canada to ask for a seat on the League of Nations Council, but he adds that Sir Austen Chamberlain, the British Foreign Secretary, is not in favor of this. Other Powers, the correspondent for the Excelsiord says, are not in favor of the proposal.

STEVENS SAYS OFFICE ROBBED; DENIES CHARGES

Reads Letter to Gott Said To Promise Protection To Smugglers.

ENFORCING LAWS.

Instructions Issued That Customs Laws Must Be Strictly Applied.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 8.—(Canadian Press.) — That his mail had been interfered with, his office broken into, and his private correspondence files rifled, and that "bootleggers and blacklegs of the liquor ring" had sworn to so besmirch him that his character would be destroyed— and the attack had started wth publication of a statement respecting his oil investments, was the declaration of Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Customs, last night addressing one of the largest meetings held in Vancouver since the campaign opened.

The Minister, towards the close of his address, was handed a note stating that he had been attacked during the evening by another speaker in another hall, saying that he had written a letter to Eccles Gott, of Amherstburg, Ontario, virtually promising protection of liquor smugglers to the United States.

Mr. Stevens read the letter in full and challenged any fair minded Liberal to take exception to it.

It is as follows, and is dated July 9:

"My Dear Gott: I have your wire re endorsement of liquor laws. All I can say in reply is that instructions have been issued that there must be strict enforcement of customs and excise laws. No one whose operations are in accordance with the law will have anything to fear from me or this department.

"I would like to make it abundantly clear that as long as I am Minister of this Department I will not permit such flagrant violations of the law as have been shown to exist in the past, and if some are discomforted because of this, I am afraid it cannot be helped, and I am sure you will appreciate the necessity of impartial and vigorous enforcement.

REBELS BEATEN IN NICARAGUA

Government Forces Inflict Severe Losses in Two Battles.

WOMAN IN RANKS.

MANAGUO, Nicaragua, September 8. Canadian Press. The government forces have defeated the revolutionists at El Sauce, Department of Leon, and Somotillo, Department of Chinandega, and severe fighting is now in progress near Chinandega.

Among the 30 wounded persons arriving in Managua is Mercedes Salazar, a native of Salvador, dressed in men's clothing. She fought desperately with the revolutionists in the recent battle and was wounded four times. Bullets shattered her jaws, an arm and leg were badly mangled and a bullet penetrated her chest.

The hospital here is filled with wounded. The Red Cross and the Green Cross are attending them.

TURNERS SUPPLY FLAGS AT TORONTO

Local people will be interested to learn that the majority of the flags in evidence at the Toronto Exibition were supplied by a local firm. J. J. Turner and Sons, who have an exhibit there, obtained the contract for the flags for the Midway and the new Government Building and in addition furnished the canopies that adorn the many seats throughout the grounds.

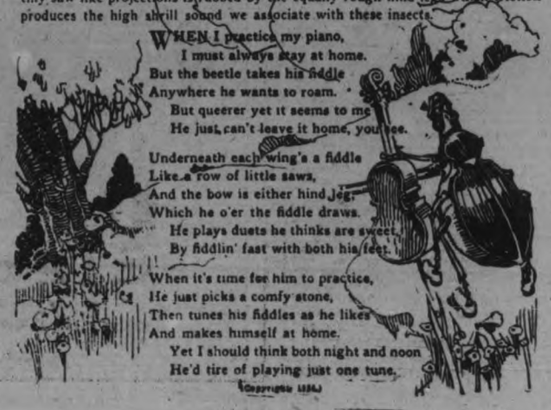
Beetle Music

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE fact in nature lore that the katydid, the grasshoppers, the beetles and many other insects make their shrill music with their legs and wings is always fascinating to children. One naturally thinks that because humans and the well known animals make sounds through their mouth and nose insects do too. The technique of insect sound is that the underside of the wing which bears rows of tiny saw like projections is rubbed by the equally rough hind legs which friction produces the high shrill sound we associate with these insects.



WHEN I practice my piano,
I must always stay at home.
But the beetle takes his fiddle
Anywhere he wants to roam.
But queerer yet it seems to me
He just can't leave it home, you see.

Underneath each wing's a fiddle
Like a row of little saws,
And the bow is either hind leg
Which he o'er the fiddle draws.
He plays duets he thinks are sweet
By fiddlin' fast with both his feet.

When it's time for him to practice,
He just picks a comfy stone,
Then tunes his fiddles as he likes
And makes himself at home.
Yet I should think both night and noon
He'd tire of playing just one tune.

Brazilian and Massey Harris Leaders In Active Session

TORONTO, September 8. Canadian Press. -- Brazilian Traction and Masey-Harris were active leaders in a strong and active session of the exchange to-day. Brazilian closed at 119 1-2 for a net gain of 7-8. Massey Harris common advanced 1-2 to 69 3-4 while the preferred also gained 1-2 to 100.

International Nickle exhibited a slightly weaker tendency with a decline of 7-8 to 37 7-8. Consolidated Smelter also closed 3-4 off at 253 1-2. Winnipeg Railway firmed 1 1-2 points to 59 3-4. Industrial Alcohol closed 1-4 higher at 21 1-8 and Can-Preferred the same at 68 1-4. Atlantic Sugar advanced 1-2 to 25 1-2, Abitibi 1-4 to 90 3-4, Canadian Pacific 5-8 to 168 1-4; Imperial Oil 1-4 to 37 1-4, and City Dairy 1-4 to 80 1-4. Beacon Oil was off 1-2 to 19.

Movement Irregular On Toronto Mine Market

TORONTO, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press).—After exhibiting considerable strength yesterday, Gold Hill dropped back 4½ cents to 56 in the trading on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Macassa, a new issue, eased one-half to 42. Prices were irregular and the market only moderately active.

Hollinger gained five cents to 19.45, while Lake Shore dropped 5 to 14.70, Kirkland Lake one to 1.12, Teck-Hughes one to 4.76 and Vipond three to 1.77. Noranda eased five cents to 19.15, and International Nickle declined 88 cents to 37.62 on the Mining Market. Beaver and Capitol were up one-half to 83 and 38½ respectively, while Castle Trethewey was off one to 1.43.

Speculators For Advance In Control In Wall Street

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press).—Speculators for an advance regained control of the price movement in today's stock market, but the advance was by no means uniform. Bear traders attempted to unsettle the list in the early trading by taking advantage of the large increase in brokers' loans last month and the higher renewal rate for call money, but they failed to make much headway and soon abandoned their efforts. Bullish enthusiasm was created by the optimistic tenor of the weekly steel trade reviews and higher dividends on Commercial Solvents B and Air Reduction. The buy-number of steel, motor, food, equip-number of steel, motor, fod, equipment, tobacco, copper and public utility shares, but rails were neglected and sluggish with the exception of Kansas City Southern, which established a new 1926 high.

Motors swung upward under the leadership of General Motors, which had touched 121, the highest price in a month, before the end of the third hour. Jordan broke to a new low at 20 on the passing of the quarterly dividend, but other motors were not affected. Nash also was in brisk demand, while Yellow Cab touched a new high.

Loose Wiles Biscuit Common and Second Preferred each soared 12 points to new high records for all time around 167. Case Threshing Machine, Warner Pictures A, and Brooklyn Edison also recorded substantial gains.

The usual rumors were in circulation about an early increase in the re-discount rate of several Federal Reserve Banks, but they had little effect in the early trading.

After 30 centuries, the method of producing gold leaf by beating small crumbs of gold with mallets for weeks at a time has given way to an efficient electro-chemical process, reducing time and labor.

The Buccaneers of the Spanish Main Were Intriguing Rascals, Captain Kidd Was a Romantic Figure, and Long John Silver with His Wooden Leg and the Parrot on His Shoulder—But Listen to the Story of

"THE BARGE TREMBLAY"

Mr. Duffus will not tell you the story of the barge Tremblay.

Yet it is most interesting.

Late in the autumn of 1924, a schooner from Belgium reaches the Gaspe coast. In her hold are 24,000 gallons of alcohol. At dead of night the barge "Tremblay" meets the schooner, takes her cargo of alcohol and starts for Montreal.

Bisaillon, customs official by day, and Captain Kidd by night, who, in the interests of the party, advises Liberal Ministers to leave the frontier unguarded, learns by secret messenger of the "Tremblay's" adventure. He is anxious to let the barge through with her cargo. He calls together his trusty band and they set out for Rock Island on the pretence that work is to be done there.

The plan miscarries. By chance the Quebec Provincial Liquor Commission learns of the "Tremblay." They send officers to watch for her. While the "Tremblay" is at St. Sulpice unloading her alcohol, the Quebec Liquor Commission's officers swoop down upon her, seize her, put her unloaded alcohol back on board and bring her to Montreal.

Bisaillon learns of the miscarriage of his plans. But he has hopes that with his help the "Tremblay" may yet outwit the Liquor Commission. He knows the "Tremblay" is to go to St. Sulpice. So he sends Duval, a trusty rogue and a corrupt officer, (since dismissed) and one Brien, his former liquor partner, to help the smugglers. Ostensibly they are to make a seizure; actually they are to prevent one.

Duval and Brien arrive too late. When they reach St. Sulpice they find the "Tremblay" in charge of the Liquor Commission. So they telephone Bisaillon. They tell him the "Tremblay" is being taken to Montreal.

Nothing daunted, Bisaillon leaves his bed at dead of night. At one o'clock in the morning he arrives at the "Tremblay's" dock, Montreal. He finds the Quebec Liquor Commission unloading the alcohol. They have facilities for safe storage.

That doesn't suit Bisaillon. So he asserts the authority of the Mackenzie King Government. He takes the "Tremblay" away from the Liquor Commission officers. He dismisses their trucks. His indignation is beautiful to behold. He, himself, will dispose of the cargo.

Bisaillon hires a private carter to take the alcohol to the King's warehouse. The carter is one Arbour, a convicted bootlegger, just the man to handle a cargo of liquor. The work of carting proceeds through the night. There is much of theft and drunkenness. Bisaillon cannot attend to everything. Two notorious rum-runners—Stewart and "Gorilla" Campbell—escape from the barge. They have not been heard of since.

The scene changes. A year goes by. The "Tremblay" alcohol, dwindled to 16,000 gallons, is in the King's warehouse.

There comes to Ottawa, one day, Mr. W. J. Hushion. Mr. Hushion is a man of parts. Ostensibly, he is a dealer in hay. Actually, he is a dealer in liquor. Mr. Hushion is the second largest shareholder in the Dominion Distilleries. Also he is Liberal "boss" in Montreal. Also ex-Liberal M.P. for St. Antoine.

Mr. Hushion is powerful in Ottawa. He meets the Minister of Customs behind closed doors. They make a secret bargain. It is a good bargain for Hushion. He gets the "Tremblay" alcohol for 36 cents a gallon for Dominion Distilleries. Dominion Distilleries sell it for moonshine whiskey at $10.00 a gallon. No excise duty is paid to the Government. The Treasury loses tens of thousands of dollars.

The full story is not told.

The captain of the "Tremblay" received $5,000.00 from the smugglers for his share in the exploit. Under the law, the captain's barge should have been forfeited, he should have been fined. But the captain knew the Liberal Government as well as smugglers and the sea. So he employed a lawyer. The lawyer was Mr. Pierre Casgrain, K.C., M.P., and Chief Liberal Whip. Mr. Casgrain, like Mr. Hushion, was powerful at Ottawa. The captain was given back his barge. He paid a fine of $1,700.00. It netted him $3,300.000 to break the law. He sailed on his way rejoicing. He was thankful for the King Government.

MILTON E. MAYBEE ADDRESSES MEETING

Urges Conservatives at Roseneath To Vote For British Connection.

ROSENEATH, Sept. 8. — The first political meeting of the campaign here was held by the Conservatives in the town hall on Saturday evening. Owing to the heavy downpour of rain the hall was not full, yet surprising to see so many present. Mr. Charles Grigg was chairman for the meeting. The speakers of the evening were: Mrs. Fallis, of Peterborough, Major Cummings of Toronto, Major F. D. Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg, and Major Belford of Codrington. Each of these speakers addressed the meeting on behalf of Milton E. Maybee, Conservative candidate, and strongly urged electors to vote for Mr. Meighen and the British connections, Canada for the Canadians. Canada needed stable government and the only way in which stable government could be achieved was by returning Arthur Meighen.

Mr. Stone, Liberal, also spoke a few marks at this meeting.

Plaits Assume Importance

The latest reflections concerning the approved silhouette, admit plaits to a place of importance in bringing about the desired full skirt. In this graceful one-piece frock, narrow box-plaits are placed either side of the front, extending from the belt to lower edge, and provide the desired flare. The plain back is in one-piece, extending over the shoulders in yoke effect. There are a group of small tucks at each shoulder, and the long plain sleeves are finished with narrow cuffs. The diagram pictures the simple design of No. 1285, which is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years (or 34, 36 and 38 inches bust only). Size 18 years (36 bust) requires 3¾ yards 39-inch, or 2⅞ yards 54-inch material. Price 20 cents.

The secret of distinctive dress lies in good taste rather than a lavish expenditure of money. Every woman should want to make her own clothes, and the home dressmaker will find the designs illustrated in our new Fashion Book to be practical and simple, yet maintaining the spirit of the mode of the moment. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FOR THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 9 1926.

(Copyright, 1926, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Fair success should attend most human efforts to-day, for astrologers read it as subject to a fortunate planetary direction.

The Moon is in a sign making for success in whatever depends on balanced judgment and legal action.

Under this rule the mind should take on a sanguine point of view, which invites prosperity and success.

The day is favorable to the plans of leaders in government or business affairs. Governors of states should benefit, especially those engaged in political campaigns.

This is an auspicious sway, under which to seek promotion or increase in salary. Employers are supposed to appreciate the service of those who are on their payrolls, when the Sun is in benefic aspect.

All the signs appear to presage gain for capitalists and those who work with the hands, but for men and women in the professions there will continue to be a struggle for wealth.

To-day should be favorable to certain aspirations of the President of the United States who comes under a direction of the stars making for the success of plans long made and quickly put into action.

Industry should profit greatly in the coming winter when brawn and brains will be requisitioned for large tasks of international moment.

Europe is to continue in a state of fermentation, which will be acute on the continent, the seers prophesy. Uncle Sam is to have many opportunities to exercise Yankee wisdom.

Secret military alliances and hidden pacts will cause difficulties in foreign lands, astrologers forecast.

Women and children should be safeguarded with special care in the coming months which appear to threaten for them illness as well as severe nervous strain, owing to sensitiveness to world conditions.

Financial negotiations of an international character will continue through coming months. Many capitalists will turn attention toward India, it is prognosticated.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year in which the stars have little influence, but the months should bring large returns for honest effort.

Children born on this day probably will have a strong leaning toward art, music and literature. These subjects of Virgo usually have much emotional power which they can put into their special lines of work.

CONDITION — Tired looking eyes that have lost their sparkle and luster.

DIAGNOSIS—Fatigue and a general lowering of vitality.

TREATMENT—You need rest, more outdoor life, and very likely your diet is at fault. To relieve the condition permanently, you need to build up your general health. For temporary relief, so that you present a more animated picture, try this: Dip pads of cotton in very warm water, and hold them over your closed eyes, changing as soon as they lose their warmth. After about five minutes of this, during which time you lie down and relax, use pads wrung out of ice water and change as soon as they become warm. This impetus to your circulation will rest your eyes, tend to remove any dark circles, and beautify the eyes.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

JOHN'S CONFESSION

I spoke your name, Mr. Meredith," called to him, as he came toward us. 'I was just telling Joan that you certainly didn't strike me as an object of pity."

As I said this I felt Joan catch her breath. It is probable that no one in all his life had mentioned pity to John Meredith, and yet it was just as probable that that word had written itself larger in his conciousness than any word in any language.

"I'm not an object of pity," he answered laughingly. "There was a time, perhaps, when I had a mistaken idea that I was, but I certainly am not now."

At this moment Mr. Symington, his friend, came up behind him and as he passed I saw him say something in an undertone to John, who abruptly turned on his heel and walked into the house.

"What did you say to Mr. Meredith?" I demanded, as he came nearer to me.

"I said to him something that any friend would under the circumstances. I told him to be careful and not go too fast. I don't believe, Miss Dean, that you realize what you're doing and I hardly think it's fair, for you can of course see that John is falling in love with you. He isn't like other men are and I must warn you to be careful. You must not encourage him."

"I haven't encouraged him," I interrupted impatiently. "I've only treated him like a human being. All you people have either acted as though he were a monster or something to be done up in cotton wool and kept from every hardship in the world."

Perhaps we have been wrong," said Mr. Symington, rather sadly. But I hope you do not blame me, Miss Dean, for I am very fond of John and wouldn't hurt him for the world.

I found him in a much worse state of mind than you have ever seen him and I suggested and planned this expedition to further take him out of himself. Some way, however, I have never thought of his meeting any women. In that respect he seemed like a man apart.

You must remember, my dear Miss Dean, that he is like Adam when he awakened in the Garden of Eden and found Eve at his side. You are the first woman, as virginal and wonderful as was our first mother, before either of our parents had eaten of the tree."

I cannot contemplate what effect it would have on my poor friend if you gave him any encouragement and had him misunderstand it."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

PROSPER MERIMEE AND THE BEAUTIFUL "INCOGNITA"

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

Paris was startled one day when the bookshops put on sale a volume containing a collection of Merimee's love letters to a beautiful unknown. The book caused a sensation. No one knew whom the creator of Carmen" had loved. She was a mystery, as was the publication of the book. An artist, M. Blanchard, had given the manuscript to the publishers and died immediately afterwards. Thus was sealed the lips of the only man who could tell who the woman was.

The correspondence extended over a period of twenty-eight years and from the scant evidence critics could gather, it was surmised that the Incognita" was a companion to a lady whose name was known only as Mme. M—de B—, but who in the letters is referred to as Lady M."

The following is a part of one of the early letters:

. . . The remembrance of your splendid black eyes is no inconsiderable element of my admiration for you. I am old (?) and nearly insensible to beauty, yet, on hearing a fastidious man say that you are very handsome I could not suppress a feeling of sadness and for this reason: that I am horribly jealous . . . and the thought that your beauty exposes you to the attentions of men who only appreciate in you that which attracts me the least.

The truth is, I am in a frightful humor; nothing makes me so melancholy as marriage. The Turks, who buy a wife after examining her like a fat sheep, are more honest than we, who cover our shameful bargain with the transparent varnish of hypocrisy. I have often asked myself what I could say to my wife on my wedding night and have found nothing possible unless it be a compliment to her nightcap.

Lady M. announced to me yesterday that you are going to be married. This being so, burn my letters; I burn yours, and adieu. You know my principle that does not permit me to maintain an intimacy with a married woman whom I have known as a demoiselle, with a widow I have known as a wife. The change in a woman's legal status affects also her various social relations, and always for the worse. In a word, I cannot bear my female friends to marry, therefore should you marry, let us forget each other. I still love you and commend myself to your prayers."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its signaficance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

LOIS

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

Lois is really a masculine name. It means famous war," and comes from the Teutonic nomenclature through the Karling romances. Lois, or Loiz, as it is sometimes spelled, is really Lois.

The French king whom the French knew as Louis le Debonnaire, was originally called Lluduicus. The Provencals promptly softened the name to Aloys, but so popular did Louis become that no member of the French royal family was christened with out. Finally the soft Aloys gained favor throughout France and the a" was dropped, producing the musical Loys. The Bretons were already using the name of Loiz, so the y" in Loys disappeared and Lois appeared and remained permanent. Loys was the only form of the innumerable versions of Louis that became applied as a feminine name. Spain's Luis has never wavered from its masculine interpretation, nor has the Luiz of Portugal. France formed an Heloise from Lois, and Louise might possibly be called an equivalent for Lois, if it were not for that strain of Provencal.

Lois has been given in baptism generally as a name of sentiment. It is a trifle difficult to pronounce but is undoubtedly beautiful and extraordinarily popular in this country.

The talismanic gem assigned to Lois is the onyx. It should be worn with care, as it is inclined to cool affection, provoke discord, and separate lovers; but worn by Lois it prevents these very misfortunes. Monday is her lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

According to ancient legend, all misgivings vanish before the chrysolite, today's talismanic stone. The superstition arises from the association of the stone with the sun, before whose rays the powers of darkness and the vague terrors of night are put to rout.

Today's natal stone the carnelian is a health stone, since its reddish hue suggests bodily vigor. It also promises domestic felicity, and worn by a woman will bring her love and a home that is a paradise.

Black should be worn today. It is symbolic of constancy and especially for married women it is potent, assuring them of the devotion of their husbands.

The marigold is today's lucky flower, and is dedicated to youth.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(United Press).—Stylists are wondering whether the Italian women will accept the nunlike dresses which Premier Mussolini suggests in his newly-formed League of Nationalization of Women's Clothes. The League, which is headed by the Italian Queen, sponsors dresses which will protect Italian women from the "immodesty" of modern times.

The gowns accepted by the League cover the figure from neck to hem and they have sufficient width to conceal the outlines of the body. This movement for Italian-made clothes for Italian women has created quite a furor in the fashion centers of Paris, London and New York. The better class of Italian women have heretofore found French styles much to their liking and it is very doubtful whether they will accept a National uniformity of dress. Poorer may find the new mode economical and practical and may accept Mussolini's command.

Some of the French countries are already turning out French gowns of Italian inspiration to meet the situation in Italy. This may mean that before long we shall have Italian designs and colors in America. When Russian women gave up all thought of style after the Revolution we immediately turned to styles of pre-Revolution days in Russia. For instance, wide sleeves embroidered, tunics, high collars and smocks were examples of Russian influence.

It is very doubtful whether any country where the smart women are cosmopolitan will accept a National mode of dressing. We have recently witnessed the discarding of veils by Turkish women. Many of them now wear modern dress. Flappers of China are growing up with unbound feet and many of them wear bobbed hair and modern frocks. In many instances women are at their best when dressed in their native costumes but one must travel far these days to find a place where a modern trend in dressing is not found.

SHE DESCRIBES A CHARMING CREPE AFTERNOON FROCK

Yesterday I had lunch with a friend, Mabel. She's as interested in clothes as anybody I've ever seen, and is always going about with samples in her pocketbook and planning new frocks.

I knew she'd have some dress idea to expound to me, and sure enough we were just seated and had ordered lunch when Mabel opened her pcoketbook.

She brought out a piece of blue lace and asked:

"What do you think of that?"

I examined the small sample, which was a perfectly heavenly shade of light blue, and saw that it was evenly dyed and really lovely.

"One of the prettiest pieces of lace I've ever seen," I pronounced it. "Where did you get it?"

"Well," began Mabel, "I've discovered a cunning little shop down on the outskirts of the Village that specializes in hand-made frocks trimmed with colored lace. They dye the lace themselves."

"You're thinking of investing?" I asked, knowing that Mabel spends all of her spare cash on clothes.

"What I'm leading up to," said Mabel slyly, "is that if you have time to ride down there on a bus with me after lunch I'd like you to look at the dress I have in mind before I decide on it."

I consulted my wrist-watch and decided that I could make it.

"You know I usually go in for simple things, and I have a dread of anything too fancy. Now this frock is a navy blue crepe, not fancy at all but just the same I want to know if you like it."

We journeyed down on a bus and entered the little shop Mabel told me about, on a side street off lower Fifth Avenue. The frock was brought forth, and I really liked it enough to advise Mabel to buy it.

Pale Blue Dyed Lace and a Silver Chain Girdle Adorn this Navy Crepe.

"Of course you can't wear it in the mornings, but what you really want is an afternoon frock, isn't it?" I asked.

"Exactly,' answered Mabel.

"Then you couldn't have anything more effective than that dark blue crepe with its pale blue silver lace trimming and silver chain girdle," I assured her.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SCHOOL BUG

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"The Lady Mouse Teacher from the Hollow Stump School is here to see you, Uncle Wiggily," said Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy to the rabbit gentleman one afternoon, as he was thinking about going adventuring.

"To see me!" exclaimed Mr. Longears, who was hardly awake from his after dinner nap. "I guess she wants to see my forty'leven little bunny children to make sure they will be back at school after Labor Day."

"No, she asked for you," said the muskrat lady, "and it's you she wants to see."

"Then she shall!" declared Mr. Longears like a gentleman he was, and he hopped out on the front porch of his bungalow where Miss Mouse was sitting to keep cool.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily!" squeaked the teacher, who was all tanned and brown from her summer vacation at the seashore, "will you please come to school with me?"

"Come to school with you!" exclaimed the bunny in surprise. "Why, my school days are over, long ago. Besides, this is Saturday. And, besides again, school doesn't open until after Labor Day Monday."

"True enough!" squeaked Lady Mouse. "But I want to be sure everything in my school is ready for the opening on Tuesday. I don't like to go in all alone, after it has been closed so long over vacation. So I thought perhaps you would go in with me."

"I shall be most happy!" promised the polite rabbit and a little later he was on his way to the hollow stump school with the Lady Mouse Teacher.

The place had not been opened since it was closed late in June. There was dust on the windows, dust on the doorsill and cobwebs festooned all about in corners.

"The janitor rat will clean up everything before Tuesday," said Lady Mouse. "I just want to be sure there is nothing wrong," but as Uncle Wiggily opened the door for her a queer sound echoed in the empty school.

"What's that?" squeaked the mouse teacher, hiding behind Uncle Wiggily. "The door hinges are rusty and they squeaked," said the bunny.

"It sounded more like a groan or a sorrowful sigh," whispered the Lady Mouse. "I am sure there is some one hiding in my school. Oh, Uncle Wiggily! Suppose it should be a tramp dog!"

But at that moment there came crawling along out of the door a very strange creature. It had ink bottles for eyes, and three pencils on one side for legs, while three pen holders were legs on the other side.

"Who are you?" cried Uncle Wiggily, who had to be brave for the Lady Mouse. "What are you doing here?"

"I am the School Bug," was the answer, "and I am doing no harm here. I have lived on chalk dust all summer and had a wonderful time. But now I suppose school will open soon and I shall have to take my vacation."

"I don't understand," said Uncle Wiggily. "How can you take a vacation when school opens? Vacations come when school closes."

"Not with me!" buzzed the bug, who was almost as large as the Lady Mouse. "You see I am a School Bug. I live all summer in closed schools, eating chalk dust and sleeping under book covers. I like to be alone and lonesome. I have read all the books in your school," he said to the Lady Mouse. "I know the geography book by heart. I can say the spelling book backward. I can do all the problems in the number book upside down."

"What's that?" squeaked the mouse teacher.

"I wish some of my pupils were as smart as you," sighed the Lady Mouse.

"Perhaps we can get the School Bug to stay and show the animal children how smart he is," suggested Uncle Wiggily. But the Bug shook his head, which was made of blackboard erasers, and oggled his ink bottle eyes as he said:

"No, I must go away until school closes again and then I will come back. I am going on my long vacation." So the queer bug crawled away on his pen and pencil legs, and Uncle Wiggily and the Mouse Teacher, entering, found the hollow stump all ready for the bell to ring on Tuesday morning. Perhaps I shall tell you more about the School Bug later, but if the tack lifter doesn't pull the tail off the letter Q and make T of it, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily.

GOLDEN WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. O'Leary, of King's Wharf, Receive Gifts.

As the mile-stones in life pass rapidly by, the journey becomes crowded with pleasant, precious memories. To reach the golden span of wedded life is an honor that comparatively few attain. Recently the golden anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. O'Leary, of King's Wharf, was celebrated. It was the occasion for the assembling of all the members of the highly respected family with their families. It was the occasion for receiving hearty congratulations. It was the crowning event in the life of the highly esteemed couple and their family.

Under ideal weather conditions, the bride and groom, with members of the family and friends from the surrounding country, gathered at St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, where Mass was said at nine a.m. by Rev. Father Galvin. It was very fitting that Mass should be held in the village where Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary were joined in matrimony's holy bonds just half a century ago, by Rev. Father Coyle.

Friends and relatives from far and near gathered at the family home at King's Wharf, where dinner was served at six o'clock, over fifty being in attendance. The table and house decorations were very pretty and the small pile of gold pieces, received from many admiring friends, was in keeping with the occasion.

Among those present were the children, namely: John O'Leary, Lindsay; Mrs. Wm. Perdue, Peterboro; Mrs. John Guiry, King's Wharf; Mrs. Michael Harrington, King's Wharf; Joseph O'Leary and Miss Florence O'Leary, at home.

Another highly respected guest was Mrs. Jas. Cadigan, of Ennismore, who acted as bridesmaid at the wedding fifty years ago. Mrs. Cadigan is a sister of Mrs. O'Leary. The groomsman, Mr. Austin O'Leary, of Los Angeles, Cal., is still hale and hearty, but was unable to attend the anniversary event.

The gathering was also graced by the presence of 22 grand-children, as well as by Mr. John O'Leary, a veteran of Downeyville, who was a guest at the wedding half a century ago. Other guests included Mrs. Galley and Miss Traynor, of Lindsay.

During the dinner, Rev. Father Galvin, of Downeyville, graciously acted in the capacity of master of ceremonies, and his address was one of the finest the reverend gentleman has ever delivered, a beautifully worded address on the sanctity of marriage. A number of others spoke along congratulatory lines, while numerous messages of congratulation were received and read.

An interesting presentation took place during the dinner when Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary were presented with a well filled purse of gold by Mrs. Perdue, while Mr. J. O'Leary, of Lindsay, delivered the address. The presentation was made on behalf of the children.

Later on in the evening a number of young people gathered at the residence and joined in the merry-making. They also presented the bride and groom with several pieces of gold, the presentation being made by Miss Viola Herlihey and Miss Lavina O'Neill.

It is interesting to note that Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary lived for a time at Downeyville, Douro and then King's Wharf. For over forty years they have been residents of King's Wharf, where for years Mr. O'Leary was postmaster and conducted a general store.

The Examiner joins with numerous friends in extending heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary. May they live to enjoy many more years of happy wedded life.

Mrs. O'Leary's maiden name was Honorah Crimmons.

PARIS FINALLY RECOGNIZES--- AND TRANSFORMS SPORT FROCK

"With interesting jacket effect in velvet or wool."

"Suggestive of a stick of peppermint candy."

"Apple green crepe, combined smartly with black."

BY HENRI BENDEL
For NEA Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—No type of dress is being given more careful and more sophisticated attention in Paris than the sport frock.

Practically every authentic couturier has ad epartment devoted entirely to these charming and informal frocks, and all the little touches of individuality, and the tricks of line and cut that more formal clothes have are reflected on them.

Sport clothes were first sponsored by the English woman, and then by the American, but it was not until Paris began to recognize their existence that they were raised to any sartorial importance.

Each year the number of occasions when sport attire is appropriate grows. In the winter, for instance, there is no real need of sport clothes on the part of most women who do not go south, or north, for winter sports, and yet they are worn everywhere as casually as afternoon frocks.

In fact, the sport dress, and modifications of it, have become standard day attire, particularly for the flapper and young matron.

No woman who has kept her figure youthful need hesitate to wear sport attire. And no one need question its absolute propriety for general wear.

Picture today are three of the most approved fall models. The sleeveless model will continue for winter, and usually is shown with an interesting jacket effect in velvet or wool. The one photographed is of rose flate crepe, trimmed with bands of the same material on the cross grain. The skit is knife pleated in groups in front and back, and is the abbreviated length that Paris decrees.

Very suggestive of a stick of peppermint candy is the striped model which comes from Chantal. The blouse is of rose colored kasha cloth, and the skirt is of striped red in shades of rose, black and green. The striped red is very cleverly used to trim the belt and sleeves, and is made into ribbons for the tie.

This very long type of blouse is very popular in Paris and is extremely smart on the tall figure.

A one piece frock of much charm and of a type very becoming to the heavier figure, is worn by the mannequin with the hat. The material is apple green flat crepe, combined very smartly with black crepe which binds the sleeves and gives smartness to the hem of the pleated insert.

The tie fastening, with its suggestion of black, is a little touch of its French originator, Paquin, which has no excuse for being except that it adds immeasurable charm and originality. A medium-sized hat of French velour sounds the right note in millinery.

Jumpers, despite their popularity this summer, are extremely smart for fall in all materials, particularly in velvet, velveteens and crepes. However, there are ever so many one-piece costumes shown, which give the appearance of being jumpers. Lines are straight and comfortable, but belts are very much in evidence, and pleated sections make skirts comfortable and roomy.

In colors, rose, green, blue and the fashionable red tones prevail. Hats frequently contrast with the costume instead of matching it.

THE SECRETS OF CHARM

By Lucrezia Bori.

Woman's everlasting beauty is an interesting and a very commendable practice. Yearly statistics on the amounts spent for cosmetics are appalling.

Yet, what does it show? It shows that women are earning money and spending money to become attractive in every way. For after one has procured the necessities of life, one usually turns to the extras that make for happiness. Clothes and attractive looks come among the first things dear to women's hearts. And if they can manage the time and money to achieve these things, why shouldn't they have them?

But what I started out to tell my readers is that it doesn't matter where you are or how few people you come in contact with, you can gain great satisfaction from being as lovely to look upon as you know how to be.

I was greatly amused recently at a friend of mine who lives in a smaller place, and who came to New York for a vacation. She confided to me that she has discovered that she allows her appearance to become "seedy" if she stays away from the city for too long a time.

Now, this seems ridiculous to me, for I maintain that women can be just as careful of their beauty and the appearance of their clothes, no matter where they are.

It may be true that there are not as many beauty doctors at hand in a small place as there are in a city, but then many women manage to care for their complexions painstakingly without ever consulting a beauty doctor. The papers and magazines that give minute attention to questions of beauty and dress are so numerous now, that they are within the reach of all.

You can learn how to take care of your hair and complexion through reading them. The same applies to clothes. Smart and simple clothes are illustrated in every woman's magazine, also the fact that clothes need not be expensive to be smart. You can cultivate a knack for choosing the most becoming clothes possible, and you can enjoy the process of cultivating it. There is also real fun in the planning of a wardrobe so it will stay within the means of the person concerned.

I know many women who are more wonderfully groomed and better dressed on a megare income, than some of my very wealthy friends who can spend any amount of money on the selves. And there is nothing strange in this, for the women who has to count the pennies, will invariably choose her clothes with a more far-seeing eye as to their effectiveness and suitability to type, than the woman who can satisfy every passing whim of fashion.

So, no matter where you are, try to realize that you can achieve results in attractiveness, proportioned to your efforts in its behalf.

Every Woman Deserves One

The SMP Roaster is a fine time saver. You put the roast or fowl in the oven. The roaster does the rest; bastes, roasts to perfection. It roasts with very little shrinkage, thus saving dollars every year. None of the tasty meat juices are lost; all the rich flavor is retained. Besides you can buy cheaper cuts, for it makes cheap cuts taste like choice ones.

The close fitting cover keeps all the cooking odors and the grease inside the roaster—the smell of cooking doesn't fill the house, and the oven is kept sweet and clean. Best of all, it cleans out in a jiffy after the roasting. These are splendid vessels. Price 85c. to $3.50 according to size and finish. Sold in all hardware stores.

Daily Short Story

PRIZE BABIES

(By Jane Osborn.)

"Miss Lorimer, pray be seated," said George Taylor, the city editor, with mock ceremony. "That chair has only three good legs, but if you are careful it will do you no harm."

Myrtle Lorimer sitting cautiously on the wobbly chair in the city editor's small cubicle tried to hide a smile. "You are unkind to make fun of me," she complained.

"Here's the trick,' Taylor said. "Next week is to be 'Boost Torenton Week,' and we're planning to come out big for it. It pleases the advertisers. Among other things that the celebration committee are going to pull is a baby contest. Old gag, but everyone likes that sort of thing. Now, I want a page or maybe two devoted to baby contests of the past. There have been eight or ten of them here in the past. You can find out about that in files of the paper. Twenty-five years ago they had their first baby contest here in Torenton. The chairman of the celebration committee was telling me, and I want you to find out the names of the prize babies. Trace them down and get an interview. Give 'em a big boost—show the world that prize babies in Torenton make good. Get photographs—baby photographs and up-to-date photographs."

George Taylor looked up and saw to his surprise that Myrtle Lorimer was looking both annoyed and embarrassed. "I'd rather not—" she stammered.

"What next?" he asked with ill-hid den annoyance, then coaxingly, "you know, girl, that sort of stuff is just your line. No one on the staff could do it half so well. I didn't expect you'd pull any temperamental stuff when I asked you."

Myrtle laughed, but it was a cheerless little laugh. "Don't you see how hard it would be for me?" she asked. "I'm just twenty-five years and a half old. I was entered in that baby contest—and I was one of the prize babies."

"Not at all," cried George Taylor, waxing interested. "You don't have to sign the article. All you have to do is to tell the story and get interviews. You can get a dandy interview with yourself—give yourself a good boost and that's good publicity for the paper."

"Oh, but Mr. Taylor," protested Myrtle with tears welling into her pretty gray eyes. "If you only knew how I hate to do it."

"Well, if you're going to put your own personal feelings ahead of the good of the Banner then you're not the sort of newspaper woman I thought you were," said George.

Myrtle blinked back a tear or two and gave George Taylor a quick glance that he did not soon forget. "You are my superior, Mr. Taylor," she said. "You know I could never be guilty of insubordination—to you—but—but it's hard."

Nothing in Myrtle's life had been any harder than that assignment. But Mr. Taylor had said she was showing the right spirit. She wanted his approval—wanted it as she had seldom wanted anything in her life. She spent the next day getting the interview with herself in condition, digging out old baby pictures and having a new picture taken. She showed the result of her work to George Taylor. His praise made it all worth while.

They met the next night, not at the office, but at the quiet hotel restaurant where they had agreed to meet. George Taylor thought he had never seen Myrtle looking half so pretty as she did when he saw her, waiting for him in the hotel lobby. But then he had never seen her away from the newspaper offices.

"You weren't late, I was early," she told him to relieve any possible concern. "I was so impatient to—to see you."

"That's good of you," stammered George. "But you couldn't have been half as impatient as I have been——"

"Wait till I tell you," laughed Myrtle. Then they made their way into the quiet old-fashioned dining-room where they could talk in quiet without the jazz of a more modern establishment. They had taken their places opposite each other and had agreed on the bill of fare.

"You see I traced the identity of the other prize baby to-day," she said. "It was just a matter of looking over old files of newspapers. The Banner wasn't in existence then and I had to go into the vaults to get the old files of the Standard. But I found the right papers, and saw a most amusing account of myself at six months. There were two prizes—one for a girl and one for a boy. The boy was nine months old and his name was—George Taylor."

For a full minute George Taylor sat looking at Myrtle Lorimer across the table. Then he chuckled.

"Let's call it all off," he said at length. "I know I'm a coward. I'm not showing the right spirit, and you did. But I never could stand the ragging I'd get if I was played up as a prize baby. It would be different with a girl. But we won't either of us appear. We'll think of some other scheme. No, it wouldn't do, Myrtle—it wouldn't do at all—to have our pictures played up that way—you and I—when—when—some time—soon I hope our names might be mentioned in some other connection. You know, I mean——"

"What do you mean?" smiled Myrtle

"I mean I love you, Myrtle," said George. "I want you to marry me—and you know you said you couldn't be guilty of insubordination."

"Not to you," said Myrtle.

BUFFALO LOSES TO TORONTO IN PITCHERS' DUEL

Pinch Hitting in the Tenth Brings in Winning Tally.

CARLISLE SOLD.

Reading Lost Its 15th and 16th Games To Baltimore.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press)—By defeating Buffalo, 2 to 1, in ten innings at Toronto yesterday, the Leafs virtually clinched the International pennant. Lena Styles, pinch hiting for Mickey Heath in the tenth, doubled and scored on Otis Miller's single. The game was a brilliant pitching battle between Jess Doyle and Ernie Proffitt.

It was announced that Cleo Carlisle, Toronto outfielder, had been sold to Boston Nationals.

Reading lost its 15th and 16th games in a row yesterday, losing a doubleheader to Baltimore, 10 to 5 and 7 to 3. Moose Swaney pitched both games for Reading and was pounded for a total of 31 hits.

After the Stars had been shut out, 10 to 0, by Thormahlen of Rochester in the first game of yesterdays doubleheader at Syracuse, a large fifth inning in which they made five hits count for six runs, enabled them to take the second, 8 to 4. Catcher Devine of Rochester received a broken knuckle trying for a foul in the first game and will be out for the balance of the season.

Newark and Jersey City divided the honors at Newark. The Skeeters lost the first, 3 to 2, and won the second, a seven inning affair, 7 to 2.

YANKEES HAND BOSTON SETBACK FIRST OF SERIES

Yanks Bunch Hits For Three Runs in the Third Inning.

MAKES 17 DEFEAT.

Browns Score Six Runs From Indians in First Three.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (aCnadian Press) — The New York Yankees set back Boston, 4 to 2, in the first of a three games series yesterday, marking the 17th successive defeat for the Red Sox. The Yankees bunched four hits for three runs in the third inning, Ruth's double accounting for two of the tallies.

The Browns at St. Louis bunched hits off Uhle in the early innings and won from the Cleveland Indians, 8 to 3. The Browns scored six runs in the first three frames on two doubles, four singles and three Indian errors.

Chicago drove Smith off the mound in the first inning, took a commanding lead over Detroit and defeated the visitors, 4 to 2, in the final game of the series. By making a clean sweep of the three game set, Chicago won the season's series, fourteen games to eight. Purdy, outfielder, purchased from Lincoln, and Bud Clancy, purchased from Little Rock, started the rally which gave Chicago the game.

ST. LOUIS TAKE SHUTOUT GAME FROM PIRATES

Adds To League Margin While Chicago Wins Over Cincinnati.

HITS SCATTERED.

Douthit and Hafey Lead in Batting Attack Against Pittsburgh.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (Canadian Press)—St. Louis gained ground in the National League by visiting Pittsburgh and whitewashing the Pirates, 8 to 0, while Chicago was beating Cincinnati. Sherdel the Cardinals' southpaw, mastered the Pirates from the outset. He kept Pittsburgh hits well scattered. Only one Pirate reached third base.

The Cards bunched hits to take the victory. Douthit and Hafey led the attack with three each, Hafey's total including a single, a double and a triple.

St. Louis pushed across a pair of runs in the fourth on Bottomley's single, Hafey's triple and O'Farrell's sacrifice. Two more were added in the fifth when Douthit singled, Grantham made a wild throw on Southworth's tap and Hornsby singled. The seventh brought three more runs, two singles, a sacrifice, a double and a triple accounting for the tallies. The Cardinals closed the game with another run, Southworth scoring on a sacrifice.

Cincinnati dropped a home game to Chicago yesterday, 8 to 5. Fumbles behind Carl Mays cost a number of runs while the Reds did not take advantage of the hits they made off Kaufmann and Bush. With a sure double play in his hand in the first inning, Critz muffed Dressen's assist. He also let a grounder go through him later.

The Giants divided a doubleheader with the Braves at Boston, taking the first game by 7 to 2 and dropping the second by 7 to 5. Although Boston gained an even break the team went back to last place.

At Philadelphia the Phillies shut out the Brooklyn Robins, 7 to 0, Wayland Dean yielding but six hits to the visitors. Fred Leach led the attack on Pitcher Petty of Brooklyn with a triple and two singles which allowed him to drive in two runs and score once himself.

BIG TORY RALLY NORTH MONAGHAN

Mr. Peck Gives Lengthy Address on Fall of King Government.

A meeting was held in the interests of the [illegible] North Monaghan last night. E. A. Peck, the [illegible] by V. J. McElderry and W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

E. A. Peck.

M. Peck explained at some length the conditions that led to the forthcoming election laying the blame at the door of Mackenzie King, whom he said was only enabled to carry on as Prime Minister through the support of the Progressives. The Customs scandal, he declared, was responsible for the falling away of that support. The country lost millions of dollars by reason of the smuggling that was permitted under the Liberal regime, he said, and for that reason Mackenzie King had proved his inability to rule Canada. He touched on the question of protection, stating that it was an important matter to the farmer. The food producer, he maintained, was in an unenviable position as when he exports produce he is forced to pay double the tariff on goods entering the United States that is demanded from the United States grower for goods entering Canada. Since the inaugurating of the Australian treaty, he declared, statistics show that over one million dollars' value in butter has entered Canada from Australia and the same amount from New Zealand.

V. J. McElderry.

Reading from a copy of Saturday Night, in which was republished the text of an interview that E. D. King, the financial editor of the Wall Street Journal, had with Mackenzie King, and in which appears the statement, "If the Liberal party win then the British government might as well give up the idea of a solid British Empire.' "This gentleman," declared Mr. McElderry, must have obtained his material from no other than Mackenzie King, since he obtained a photograph of him which was published with the interview. The Saturday Night of September 4, he declared, stated definitely that E. D. King interviewed Mackenzie King, and as yet their statement has not been contradicted.

In conclusion said Mr. McElderry, "a man who is supposed to be Prime Minister of this country and gives an impression like this to a foreign country is not a suitable man to lead one of the great parties of Canada."

W. H. Bradburn.

Mr. Duffus, declared Mr. Bradburn, made a vigorous attack on Mr. Regan in connection with a speech he made at Douro with reference to the nomination of himself. "What Mr. Regan did say," declared Mr. Bradburn, "was that had Mr. Gordon or Mr. Hall thought for a moment that the Liberals of this riding or the Liberal government had any chance of being returned to power they would have taken the nomination themselves rather than allow it to go to Mr. Duffus." Mr. Duffus has also stated that a Conservative applied to Mr. Stevens, the new Minister of Customs, asking that the pressure of watching the border might be lessened, he declared, and that the Minister in reply ordered that the preventative work be applied in such a way that it would not interfere with many people in the constituency. He challenged Mr. Duffus to name the constituency in which this occurred. There was no doubt in his mind, he said, but that Mr. Duffus had got the matter mixed up with W. K. Baldwin, the Liberal candidate, who ran in Stanstead, Quebec, in the election of October, 1925. Hon. Jacques Bureau who was then Minister of Customs on the advice of his chief preventive officer and discontinued the watch on the border, he declared.

struck him, but had used no improper language.

Alderman Turner said that he was sure that Mr. Abramson, as a citizen, wished that the brigade should be effective, while Mayor Holloway pointed out that there was no time to mince matters while fighting a fire, and that if the Chief had acted a little hastily it was in the excitement of the moment. He urged the two men to let the matter drop and forget it, and was supported by Aldermen Fife and Greene, with the result that they shook hands, smiling happily.

Civic Holiday.

Hereafter Peterborough will celebrate its Civic Holiday, in company with the majority of Ontario cities, on the first Monday in August. The old by-law, which had stood since 1905, was repealed last night and a new one passed without discussion.

Not so happy was the fate of another by-law, that to re-surface George Street from Charlotte Street to the C.P.R. crossing. After passing the first reading the question was raised, while in committee, as to where the money was to come from. When it was stated that it was to be done as a local improvement, by debenture issue, Mayor Holloway recalled the petition of the ratepayers along the street that it be done out of the general funds. Alderman Fife said that he didn't want the matter being constantly brought up, urging the aldermen either to pass the by-law or decide to keep on patching the pavement. On a vote on the first clause of the by-law it was defeated and the by-law consequently thrown out.

Two Deputations.

Several residents of Wolfe Street came before the Council to ask for improvement on the roadway in front of their homes, which are situated between Park Street and Monaghan Road. Their spokesmen were Messrs. Abbot, Boddison, and Morrison, and they claimed that nothing had ever been done to the road in nine years except one day's work by one man. Their characterization of this effort as entirely useless was hotly resented by Alderman Fife, but he agreed to go with the Mayor to inspect the road.

Two residents of Centre Street appeared to ask for better accommodation for pedestrians on that thoroughfare. They asserted that certain parts, especially near the bridge, were bad at night, while the cinder path was full of holes. They were promised consideration.

Delays which the Council considered unwarranted were reported by Alderman Turner with regard to lighting schemes. The Utilities Commission had been asked for prices and had asked the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, early this year, but so far no answer had been received. The matter will be pressed.

These lights were brought up during the discussion of conditions at the foot of the hill on Aylmer Street, just north of Dublin Street. The storekeeper there reported that water stood in front of his store, and the aldermen feared that damage might result. They will look into the matter.

A license will be issued to the fish and chip shop being operated on Charlotte Street by A. Murray. The Suburban Area Commission will be interviewed about the drain south of Lansdowne Street on Park Street, despite the claim advanced that it had no responsibility. Alderman Greene reported the parks and bathing beaches closed for the season and took the opportunity to praise the splendid service given by the various caretakers. He also mentioned the tourist camp.

PETERBORO C. C. WINS FAST GAME ON LABOR DAY

Beats Birchcliffe 103-52 in Annual Holiday Match.

GOOD FIELDING.

Spectacular Catches By Local Players Retire Toronto Batsmen.

As a year ago, after a wet Saturday and Sunday, when the rain did not merely drizzle but simply poured down, the local club journeyed to Toronto to play the return match with Birchcliffe. The game was scheduled to start at 11.30 a.m. Standard time on Monday (Labor Day), but as only six of the local team had arrived on the ground by that time, there was no alternative but to bat those who were there. It was a sporting offer, however, of the Birchcliffe captain to give the local club the choice without tossing the coin.

The sun shone odt around 10 o'clock and developed afterwards into a birght sunny day with a stiff breeze blowing over the ground from the lake. Dunkerley and Thorpe started the batting for Peterborough. The first ball of the match lifted over the boundary for four. The second ball of the second over, Thorpe misjudged and took his leg stump. It was a drying wicket, giving the batsmen lots of trouble. Wickets fell steadily up to the score of 49 for seven, when a noteworthy partnership between Stuart and Dunkerley, who had played steadily, carried the score to 90 before the former was bowled. With eight more runs added, Dunkerley skied a ball into the long field, and was well caught for a well appreciated 61, having given only two difficult catches when near fifty. His score was the only double figure one for the locals.

The innings closed at 103 for eleven wickets, each team batting and fielding twelve men. Hallowell got four wickets for 36, and Robertson and Murray three each for 30 and 24 runs respectively.

Birchcliffe opened with Robertson and Field, who played steadily, carrying the score to 26 before the latter was beautifully caught one-handed by Garbutt in the slips.

Two runs later this same player in the same way, got the next wicket. Murray and Robertson then carried the score to 37, when the former made a hot drive above Massey-Cooke's head, the latter throwing up his hands and holding the ball. Forty-eight hours after, he still knows that portion of his hand that got in the way of that ball.

The score rose to 47 for 6 when three more wickets fell without adding to it, the innings closing at 52 for eleven. Of the Peterborough bowlers tried, Reg. Dyer was most successful taking six wickets for 23, and Dunkerley five for five runs. The fielding by the local team was airtight, not a chance missed, and some difficult catches taken, which featured the game. Garbutt made three, two of them one-handed; Coutts, two, and D. Dyer, Thorpe and Massey-Cooke one each, the latter very difficult.

Though the kindness of the Birchcliffe Club and their ladies, luncheon was taken at 12.30, and supper after the game at about 5.30, at the Birchcliffe Club Rooms. Splendid eats were served out in very generous helpings, and thoroughly enjoyed by the twenty-six local players and fans.

This match was arranged a year ago this spring, and it is remarkable the spirit of friendliness that has developed between the two clubs in the meantime. This was amply demonstrated during the several votes of thanks tended after the supper, and it was the feeling of all present, that this spirit continue, and as a result the same dates next year (Dominion Day and Labor Day) are provisionally set aside. Many compliments were paid, eulogising the clean game played and the wonderful fielding shown by the local club, but perhaps the one of which they will feel most proud was the one that there had been better teams than Peterborough to the Birchcliffe ground, but none to show better clean cricket and brilliant fielding.

After cheers for the respective clubs and musical honors to the Birchcliffe ladies(who had themselves prepared the meals) the party finished up with "Auld Lang Syne."

R. R. HALL TELLS OF EARLY DAYS OF PETERBORO'

Addresses Kiwanians About Founding of City in 1825.

RECALLS CHAMPLAIN.

First Trading Post Was Near Water Trough on Chemong Road.

R. R. Hall, K.C., was the speaker at the Kiwanis luncheon on Friday at which a number of veteran citizens were entertained. He spoke on the founding of the city.

The following is Mr. Hall's address

"It is a little over 100 years ago since the white man first started to settle in this district.

"About that time this district was laid out into Townships with their lots and concessions but no less than 200 years before that Samuel de Champlain made his famous trip from Georgian Bay to Trenton.

"This great explorer passed over the very ground on which this city now stands.

"It is on record that this great explorer made this famous trip from Georgian Bay up the Severn River and passed through Lake Simcoe and continued on down the waters of the Trent system.

"The question is asked 'Did this great Explorer come down the Chemong Road?' What other road could or would he come. I have it on the authority, not only of the earliest settlers, but from the sons of the earliest settlers, that the Chemong Road was an Indian trail from Bridgenorth to the Locks Bridge below Peterborough and that where the watering trough now stands was the site of a Trading Post midway between these two points. The alternative route by way of Buckhorn, Burleigh Falls, Youngs Point and Otonabee River with a continuous rapids involved too many portages and was a much longer route than by way of the Chemong Road.

"The future site of this City was changed from the watering trough on the Chemong Road to its present site owing to the fact that it furnished more convenient transportation facilities and was a better point for production and distribution of the needs of the district.

"Adam Scott has the honor of being the first manufacturer in Peterborough. He established a saw mill in 1825 about where the Peterborough Canoe Works now stands and constructed a head race from the Creek across George street and through the lot upon which the Grand Opera House and Turner's Tent and Awning Factory now stand and later on he erected a small flour mill.

"About this time the Hon. Peter Robinson brought out 2000 settlers which were housed on the property surrounding the Empress Hotel and it took upwards of a year or more before they were able to construct their houses and settle on their farms in the Townships surrounding Peterborough.

"These early settlers started in a very modest way. The Imperial Government presented each farmer with a cow, an axe, an auger, and a saw and every ten were entitled to the use of one yoke of oxen.

"The lack of roads and transportation facilities was one of the biggest handicaps. Many of the old pioneers have carried on their backs through the woods a bag of flour from Port Hope to Peterborough.

"To provide transportation facilities the construction of the Trent Canal was commenced and a dam and lock was built now Peterborough and at Hastings in 1837.

"The first railways were being constructed at this time and in 1854 the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway which ran across Rice Lake afforded a great blessing to this district which was later followed by a railway from Port Hope to Peterborough.

"These railways were a blessing to the early settlers in many ways. They relieved them of their many hardships in getting in supplies and in marketing their products. They stimulated the growth and development of this City and County and placed the foundation of our industries upon a stable and profitable basis."

The following gentlemen were present: Messrs. F. H. Dobbin, McGariel, Jr., C.P.R., McGariel, Sr., Cardinal, Ont., George W. Powell, Children's Aid, R. G. Kingan, E. A. Peck, Robert Mulligan, Charlie Laundervilll, B. F. Ackerman, John Nugent, Robert Fair, William Scott, Lawrence Webber, S. R. Armstrong, J. J. Howden, R. B. Rogers, T. W. Robinson.

ISSUES BEFORE THE ELECTORATE IN PETERBOROUGH

This space is contributed daily by The Examiner for discussing of the election issues by representatives of the candidates of both parties for this riding. The articles are to be kept free from personalities and will be the opinions of their respective authors, not those of The Examiner.

The Conservative Viewpoint

Prepared by the Liberal-Conservative Association of Peterborough, on behalf of E. A. Peck, the Conservative candidate.

The elector, who is conscientiously endeavoring to decide the question of which candidate in West Peterborough he or she should support on September 14th, may find, in this summing up what we consider the paramount issues in this campaign, something that will be of assistance.

1. Is Canada to have a responsible, stable government, or is she to struggle along four more years of a government and parliament under the thumb of an irresponsible and sectional minority?

2. Is debauchery and corruption of the public service in this country to be condemned or condoned at the polls?

3. Is Canada to have a national fiscal policy, or one dictated purely and simply by political expediency?

These are the three main and outstanding issues of the campaign.

We are satisfied in regard to the first that the people of Canada want to put an end to group government, that they are disgusted with the development of recent sessions of parliament and that the outsome the vast majority hope for is a clear majority for one party next Tuesday.

That Mr. King cannot get such a majority is the clearest feature of the whole political tangle.

He couldn't get a working majority in 1921; he couldn't get a working majority in 1925.

If he failed in those two campaigns when conditions were much more favorable to him, how can he hope for a working majority in 1926 when he faces the country censured by Parliament, and with the millstone of the Customs scandal hanging from his neck?

His whole campaign shows that Mr King does not expect a majority; his tactics all are framed to secure him power by means of a little faction from the West.

It is as clear as daylight that Mr. King has given up all hope of a Liberal majority over all.

To end all political deadlock, to stop the auction-room methods that have disgusted honest electors of all parties, a clear majority of the Conservative party offers the only chance for success.

As to issue No. 2, there will be more to say in later articles.

For the present the electors of West Peterborough should remember that the policy of the King government has been summed up in a single sentence by Bisaillon, smuggler, perjurer, Chief of the Preventive Service, and friend and confidant of some of Mr. King's Ministers of the Crown in the simple words:

"I believe that in the interests of the party, it would be preferable to discontinue to watch the frontier."

No government was ever so effectively arraigned in one sentence.

A dozen Robb budgets could never drive away the rank odor of the customs scandals, a score of so-called constitutional issues could never provide a smoke screen thick enough to hide that picture of debauchery and corruption in the public service.

Issue No. 3 needs little elaboration.

It is clear that no permanent or stable tariff policy could be expected from the King-Forke government, in which as Mr. Garland, Progressive ally of Mr. King's, from Bow River, frankly puts it, the Progressive group pounded the legislation of the session into their form.

There is only one party with a clear tariff policy.

That is the Conservative Party, the party which has as its candidate in West Peterborough, Mr. Peck.

The industries of Peterborough cannot be entrusted to the tariff whims of a small western minority. The workers of Peterborough cannot afford to gamble their jobs against the theories of Western Free Traders.

If you believe that Canada needs a stable government and a stable tariff and that corruption should be condemned, your duty next Tuesday is simple.

Vote for E. A. PECK, the Conservative candidate and representative of the only party that can give Canada stability in government and tariff, and a clean administration of public affairs.

The Conservative Victory Committee

The Liberal Viewpoint.

Prepared by the Liberal Association of Peterborough on behalf of J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate.

At no time since Confederation have the people of Canada been called upon to make such a clear cut decision between the essential principles dominating the Liberal and Conservative parties as at the present time. The intention of this article is to indicate the issues. Succeeding articles will endeavour to show that the best interests of the Dominion demand a decision in favour of Liberal principles and a return to power of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King as the protagonist of these principles to ensure a continuance of policies which each successive year prove to be most advantageous to this country.

The first and perhaps the greatest issue now before the country is the Robb Budget. The Liberal party is prepared to stand or fall on the merits of this Budget and if it falls the members of the party will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that its benefits will be felt for years to come and that there is not a family in this broad land whose lot has not been made a little easier by its provisions. Note some of the features of this Budget which no Conservative Government would think of attempting to pass:—Reductions in income tax and especially favouring the smaller incomes; lowering of the tariff on automobiles and particularly the moderate priced car; a return to penny postage; abolition of the tax on receipts; reductions in sales and excise taxes; reductions in the national public debt and a balancing of the national budget. The Robb Budget will go down in history as one of the most popular efforts to lighten the burden of a tax ridden people and as one of the greatest administrative achievements ever recorded in the Federal House.

The second great issue is the Constitutional Question. After all that has been said and written on this subject it can be boiled down to the simple statement that if this country is indeed a selfgoverning Dominion as we had been led to suppose then Parliament should follow the constitutional practice of Great Britain where the prerogative of the Crown as to dissolution is exercised by the Sovereign on the advice of his Prime Minister. Of course if we are still a colony this advice need not be taken. It lies in the hands of the people of this Dominion to decide at the polls what our future status is to be.

The third and perhaps greatest issue of all is whether this country wants Meighenism and government by the Big Interests of Montreal for their benefit alone or whether it prefers government for the benefit of all classes, every section, and industries of every kind. Meighen and his cabinet were rejected because of wholesale extravagance while in office and there is no reason to suppose they have reformed. Since they were turned out the financial condition of the country has steadily improved and Meighen this spring usurped office on the rising tide of prosperity inaugurated by the late Liberal Government. Meighen has never yet become the Prime Minister of this country as the choice of the electorate and there is no reason to suppose that he is wanted now.

Mr. Meighen makes promises to suit each particular locality in which he happens to be but more and more the suspicion persists throughout the country that these are the things he really stands for: (1,) Opposition to the Canadian National Railways, as witness his present alliance with Patenaude; (2) A weakening of our ties with Great Britain, as indicated in his speeches at Hamilton and Bagot; (3) A tariff wall as high as Haman's Gallows, as shown in his attack on the Robb budget; (4) A disregard of the decencies of public life, as proved by his tacit adherence to the shameful statements made publicly by Doucet and Nicholson, and his choice of such men as Garland, Foster, Jones, Fleming and other discredited men as leaders of his party. These are some of the reasons why Hon. Arthur Meighen will be rejected by the people of Canada the 14th day of this month, and why he may never again be Prime Minister of Canada.

DEMPSEY MAY GET NEARLY A MILLION

Has Guarantee of $475,000, With Half Over Million.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 8 (Canadian Press). — Jack Dempsey may earn the fabulous sum of $850,000, nearly twice the amount of money he ever received for any previous ring engagement, when he raises his gloved fists in defence of his heavyweight championship against Gene Tunney in Philadelphia on September 23.

The world's heavyweight champion, it was revealed today, has been guaranteed the staggering sum of $475,000 with the privilege of 50 per cent of the gate receipts above $1,000,000 for the Tunney engagement. Promoter Tex Rickard has assured Dempsey that the gate with undoubtedly reach $1,750,000. In that event Dempsey will get $375,000, plus the $475,000 guarantee, for a fight that may go thirty seconds or the limit of ten rounds.

Dempsey received around $425,000 for his cyclonic engagement with Luis Angel Firpo three years ago. His previous record gate was $300,000 for defeating Georges Carpentier in their famous "Battle for the Century" in 1921. When Dempsey won the title from Jess Willard in 1919, he got $27,500 compared with the $100,000 that went to the Kansas giant.

Italians Withstood Cold Because Sober, Says Pope

ROME, Sept. 8. — (United News.)— Italian are able to stand the Polar cold because they are a sober people not afflicted with alcoholism, the Pope remarked to Col. Umberto Nobile, who accompanied Amundsen on his recent Polar flight, when Nobile told him that Italian members of Amundsen's crew had endured the intense cold easily.

PROGRESSIVES HOLD RALLY IN OMEMEE

J. J. Thurston Gives Address on Tariff and Law Enforcement Questions.

OMEMEE, Sept. 8.—A very enthusiastic gathering assembled in Coronation Hall on Monday evening to hear the Progressive candidate, Mr. J. J. Thurston. Mr. Moses Ruth acted as chairman and the addresses were interspersed with music by the Misses McNevin and Pogue, also several Scotch songs in costume were splendidly given by Mr. Murchison, of Mariposa.

Mr. F. G. Sandy opened the meeting by calling attention to the fact that many of the topics being mentioned in the campaign were not the main issues before the people, but that the questions of law enforcement and the tariff were two of the main topics under consideration.

Mr. Bruce McNevin was then introduced by the chairman. He commenced by paying a tribute to the honesty of purpose and integrity of the candidate, Mr. Thurston. He also called attention to the broken pledges of the Conservative candidate, Mr. Stinson and the past imperfect record of the Meighen government.

Mr. J. J. Thurston, who then followed, was the main speaker of the evening, spent considerable time in reviewing the general letters sent out by his opponent and to statements and attitudes of his opponent in the present election. He also dealt with the question of the tariff, favoring a reduction of the same and for other measures which would better the economic and social conditions of the masses of the people, rather than the special interests. Before closing, he gave his pledge as an Independent to act for the best interests of the people and not as a member of either of the two political parties, if he were elected.

All the speakers were well received and given generous applause.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

GILDA GRAY MAKES HER MOVIE BOW IN "ALOMA"

"Aloma of the South Seas," Gilda Gray's first starring production for Paramount which comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow is a warm colorful love-drama of the tropics. Packed with wild dancing, strong dramatic punches, beautiful tropical scenery, and great acting by a fine cast which includes Percy Marmont, Warner Baxter, Julanne Johnston and William Powell, it promises to be the film sensation of the year.

If we are to believe advance reports, Gilda as the beautiful native dancing girl, is as good on the screen as on the stage. She, "Aloma" is loved by the pearl-diver, "Nuitane." "Bob Holden", a dissolute young man, comes to the South Seas to forget his having been jilted by "Sylvia," his society sweetheart. "Bob" starts on the downward path, until "Aloma" who is very much attracted to him, shows him the right way to go. Then—"Sylvia" appears on the scene—and the dramatic struggle between the two women for the man they love is a thing of dramatic emotion.

Warner Baxter is "Nuitane", Gilda's South Sea lover; Percy Marmont, "Bob Holden", "Aloma's" captain; and Joseph Smiley is "Sylvia"; William Powell, the villain; Harry T. Morey, a treacherous sea captain; and Joseph Smiley is "Slyvia's" uncle.

Maurice Tourneur directed "Aloma of the South Seas." It was adopted by James Creelman from Hymer and Clemons' stage success of the same name.

AT THE REGENT

"BELOW THE LINE" WITH RIN-TIN-TIN.

New Warner Bros. Picture Said to Be Wonder Dog's Best.

"Below the Line," the Warner Bros. Classic of the Screen which is opening on Thursday at the Regent Theatre, has for its theme the exciting story of a vicious, snarling dog made loyal and brave through loving training. Rin-Tin-Tin, who will be remembered by all enthusiasts of dog pictures, for his remarkable work in "Where the North Begins," "Find Your Man," "The Lighthouse by the Sea" and "Tracked in the Snow Country," is said to outshine all previous performances in his latest production.

June Marlowe, the girl "with the soulful eyes," who has appeared with Rinty in previous photoplays, is with him again in "Below the Line" as the heroine, May Barton. John Harron plays Donald Cass, an uncouth but kindly boy, who, together with May Barton, befriends Rinty.

Pat Hartigan, famous for his screen villainies, is the village bully; Jamber Niles, who attacks and robs a wealthy young woman and then attempts to steal the church funds from Donald; and Victor Potel appears as Jamber's half-witted brother.

The climax of the picture comes when the half-wit lets loose a pack of bloodhounds to follow Donald and May and Rinty flings himself at the pack. The terrific dog-fight, brutal as it looks on the screen, has the endorsement of the Santa Monica Humane Society for being filmed without injury to the dogs.

Pontiac Six Has Created Its Own Field!

INTO a market already apparently divided into "classes" and "price-ranges" came Pontiac Six—a new car, a new value that swept away all barriers of "class" and "price". Pontiac Six brought quality into the "low-priced six" field. It brought low price into the "quality six" field. And, to the multitude of Pontiac buyers, it brought a new combination of quality and economy that has established for Pontiac a field and a market all its own.

Search as you will the range of low-priced sixes and you will find no other car, at Pontiac price, which provides a spacious Fisher closed body finished in dashing permanent Duco colors, a large engine of 186.5 cubic inches displacement, a 46 lb. crankshaft, automatic spark control, honed cylinders and the rugged construction which has already won for the Pontiac Six its reputation for unrivalled stamina.

Pontiac's low prices are made still lower by the removal of the Canadian Excise Tax — Pontiac Six now being Canadian-built.

AROUND THE CITY.

The Hon. G. N. Gordon returned from Belleville, where he spoke at the joint meeting held in the City Hall, with Mayor Graham presiding, and in which Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater was nominated as Liberal candidate against T. W. Tummon, the Conservative.

Mr. Gordon said that Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater was a young man who had had a splendid war record, who was an officer in command of one of the battalions, and a well-known young farmer who is a member of the County Council, who is getting enthusiastic support in Belleville.

Mr. Gordon speaks to-night at Kingston City.

IN POLICE COURT.

A charge of wantonly, cruelly and unnecessarily ill-treating and abusing a horse, was preferred against a local man by the local branch of the Humane Society his morning.

The horse in question was traded twice and eventually landed in the possession of a blinded war veteran. The case fairly bristled with horsey language, and in one portion of the evidence the main witness for the Crown, who was the last owner of the horse, referred to the man who sold it to him "as a real gentleman."

J. A. O'Brien appeared for the accused and Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton represented the Crown.

After hearing the evidence Magistrate O. A. Langley stated that in order to convict he would have to distort the facts that had been presented. On hearing the evidence of the two veterinary surgeons he was not satisfied that a layman should have reasonably known that the wound in question was so serious. The charge was dismissed without costs.

STATE OF WAR TO BE REMOVED

Spanish Government Promises Early Return To Civil Law.

REVOLT CRUSHED.

MADRID, Sept. 8 (Canadian Presss).—Early removal of the state of war, decreed last Sunday because of the revolt in the artillery branch of the Spanish army, is promised by the Government in an official communique issued yesterday afternoon.

The Government emphasizes that the rebellion has been crushed and that all artillery establishments, barracks, parks, repair shops and plants have been taken over by armed forces despatched to replace them. It appears now that these armed forces are civic guards, a branch of the Spanish police organization.

Lieut.-General Domingo Arratz de Conderena y Ugarte, President of the Supreme Council of War and Marine, before which tribunal the recalcitrant artillery officers and chiefs will be tried, arrived yesterday in the Spanish capital. He immediately went into conference with the Duke of Tetuan, Minister of War, and it was decided to appoint a member of the court to make a preliminary investigation, as is usual in Spanish court procedure, to fix the responsibility for the outbreak. At the same time the judge advocate has been instructed to draw up indictments.

The official statement also contains an appeal to the army to remain true to their oath and loyal to their country, and castigates severely the men who took part in the revolt.

"Military honor," says the communique, "must, above all, be founded on love of country; then the generic virtues, as discipline, obedience, self-denial, valor, comradeship and emulation of all that enhances and embodies the discharge of duty."

WET WEATHER AFFECTS FRUIT

Many Varieties Are Late, While Some Crops Are Poor.

PRICES HIGH.

As the canning and preserving time is now in full swing in the homes, The Examiner has obtained a fair estimate of the fruit crop prospects.

The peach crop this year is rather poor between Hamilton and Beamsville, but it is a fair crop between Beamsville and Niagara Falls. The quality is fair, most of them running number two's, and the retail price is between $1.25 and $1.75. The late crop is poor.

Plums are plentiful and a good quality, but in some district ssmall. They are retailing at 50c to 75c a basket.

The grapes in most places are a big crop but are not ripening on account of so much wet weather. It will take two weeks of good weather to ripen the crop, especially as the rain and cold nights have held them back.

The wineries are contracting heavily for the crop so it is expected that the price will be high.

Pears are a fairly good crop, as is also the quality. The canneries have been receiving large orders from England for canned pears so the price is expected to be high.

Tomatoes are good but are ripening very slowly on account of the wet weather. They are selling at from 50c to 75c a basket.

Apples in some districts are good and of a fair quality.

Onions are fairly good, but need heat to mature.

Cantaloupes are a good crop but they have received too much rain.

Sugar is retailing at $6.50 a hundred, which is fairly reasonable for this time of year.

TWO YOUNG LADIES LEAVING PARISH

St. Paul's Choir, Lakefield, Makes Presentations To Members.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 8.—On Sunday evening Rev. J. J. Garvey and the choir of St. Paul's Church gathered at the home of Captain Johnston for an interesting ceremony of double interest. Miss Margaret Allen, a valued member of the choir, enters the community of St. Joseph's as a postulant, the first young girl of St. Paul's parish to become a nun. Miss Doreen Johnston, organist and choir leader for the past two years, leaves this week for St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, where she will pursue her musical studies.

Miss Mary Johnston read the following address to Miss Allen and Miss Genevieve Allen presented her with a club bag and an umbrella:

"Miss Margaret Allen,
"Lakefield.

"Dear Margaret,—We, the members of St. Paul's choir, have gathered here this evening to bid you farewell before you depart for your new life. It is the most noble one you could have chosen, and, dear Margaret, we sincerely hope you will be spared many years to serve God. You, dear Margaret, have been a valuable member of our choir and we shall sincerely miss you. In appreciation of what you have done we ask you to accept these little gifts. You are leaving many friends and we hope you will not forget us in your prayers in your new field.

"Signed on behalf of St. Paul's choir—Pearl Charlton, Genevieve Allen, Katherine Buckley, Ambrose Coughlin, Marguerite White, Mary Johnston."

Miss Allen made a suitable reply, thanking her friends for their kind remembrance and assuring them of her hearty appreciation of the gifts and the good wishes which accompanied them.

Miss Josephine Allen read the following address to Miss Doreen Johnston and Miss Marguerite White presented her with an umbrella and fountain pen:

"Miss Doreen Johnston,
"Lakefield.

"Dear Doreen,—It is with sentiments of deepest regret that we, the members of St. Paul's choir, have learned that you are about to sever your connections with us. From your childhood you have been a valued member of our choir, giving generously and willingly of your time and talents in the glorious work of singing the praises of God. Four years ago, when you were still but a child, you took upon your youthful shoulders the onerous task of organist and choir leader. This position, though a difficult one, you have filled so successfully as to win the praise and gratitude not only of the parishioners but all who were privileged to hear you. Now that you are about to leave us to still further pursue your musical studies, we wish to thank you for the patience you have ever shown toward us, members of the choir, and to ask your pardon for ur many delinquencies. As tangible proof of our appreciation and gratitude for your splendid services, we ask you to accept these gifts, which we hope will not only be useful to you but will frequently remind you of your pleasant associations with the choir of St. Paul's.

"Signed on behalf of the choir—Genevieve Allen, Ambrose Coughlin, Margaret Allen. Isabelle White, Katherine Buckley."

Miss Johnston was taken completely by surprise, as was also Miss Allen, but she replied in fitting terms, thanking her friends for the remembrance and assuring them of her continued interest in the choir, which would remain always a memory to be cherished.

Father Garvey spoke briefly, assuring the two young ladies of the regret which their departure caused in the choir and parish, but it is in the case of Margaret Allen, opening the way to a higher sphere of work in the service of God, and to Doreen Johnston a greater opportunity for perfecting herself in music so that in days to come she will be even more proficient than at present and able to render even greater service in singing of praise to God in His house.

Father Carey also said a few words suitable to the occasion.

Car Overturns.

A motor car, containing four men, crashed into the culvert opposite St. John's Church on Sunday night between eleven and twelve o'clock and overturned. The occupants were comparatively unhurt, but only the deep ditch prevented serious injuries, if not worse. The car was badly smashed.

News Briefs.

Mr. A. V. Hill landed a lunge last week which weighed more than twenty pounds and is the largest fish caught this season in Lakefield waters. The fish was caught in Lake Katchewanooka.

The Public and High Schools reopened on Tuesday morning, Sept. 7, for the fall term. The staff of teachers in both schools is the same as last year.

Mrs. W. E. Gillman entertained at afternoon tea on Tuesday last. A pleasant afternoon was spent.

The maple trees in some parts of the village show signs of having been touched by the finger of Jack Frost, who usually pays a fleeting visit early in September to remind one that summer is passing.

WEDDING BELLS.

TAYLOR—LONG.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Port Hope on Saturday, September 4, when Annie Long and Ernest R. Taylor, both of Peterboro, were united in marriage by the Rev. Mr. Meldrum. The young couple left immediately on a tour through the Western provinces, and on their return will reside at 580 Bolivar Street, Peterboro.

NOBLE—SLINN.

On Wednesday, September 1, a wedding was solemnized in Alhambra United Church, Toronto, when Verena Berner, only daughter of Mr. James Noble and the late Mrs. Noble, of Millicent Street, Toronto, and Mr. William S. Slinn were united in marriage, the Rev. A. J. Reid officiating. The bride wore a dress of white georgette and lace, with embroidered net veil and orange blossoms, and carried a beautiful shower bouquet of white roses and lilies. The bridesmaid, Miss Marion Veals, wore rose georgette and lace, with hat of black velvet; while Mr. Arch. Dewar was best man.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. James McKenzie Noble, Fern Avenue. Mrs. Noble wore a gown of cocoa georgette and taffeta, with corsage bouquet of roses and maiden hair fern. Mrs. Slinn, mother of the groom, was gowned in silver taffeta, with corsage bouquet of roses.

The happy couple are spending their honeymoon at Canoe Lake, Algonquin Park, the bride travelling in a smart ensemble in sand with hat to match.

After their return they will reside in Toronto at 40 Millicent Street.

O'TOOLE—GUERIN.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of the Immaculate Conception when Johannah Guerin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Guerin, became the bride of Edward O'Toole, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. O'Toole. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Guiry, in the presence of relatives and friends.

The bride looked charming in a gown of ashes of roses georgette, with hose to match, black suede shoes, and large black hat. She carried a bouquet of cream roses. The bride was attended by Miss M. O'Toole, sister of the groom, in a gown of pink canton crepe, with blond shoes and stockings and large black hat, and carrying a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was supported by Mr. M. Guerin.

Following the ceremony at the church, about 35 guests sat down to a most delightful dinner at 678 Armour Road, the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple then left for a short honeymoon in Toronto and other points, the bride travelling in a rose silk frock with hose, shoes, coat and hat to match. They will reside in Peterborough.

OBITUARY.

CAVILLE KIMBLE.

KING'S WHARF, September 5.—During the terrific electric storm that passed over this locality last week, little Caville Kimble, the nine year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gayton Kimble, was shocked by the lightning and failed to recover.

The little girl was on the verandah when the bolt of lightning came and she ran in and said that she was struck. Afterwards she fell asleep, and was getting weaker and Dr. Kelly of Bobcaygeon, who was summoned, could not tell what was the matter. He had her taken to the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, where three doctors were called. The little child died on Friday night, as she was unable to eat, and her throat was paralyzed.

The funeral was held from her home, Verulam, Sunday at 2 o'clock, and was largely attended.

The pall-bearers were six little girls, school friends of the deceased.

There are left to mourn her loss her parents, a little sister, Aileen, aged 2 years, and an infant brother, Claude, 9 months.

The sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Kimble in their great loss.

MISS SARAH EVANS

OMEMEE, Sept. —It was with sorrow that news of the death of Miss Sarah Adams of Philadelphia was received here on Saturday, not only by the relatives, but by the citizens of Omemee and vicinity among whom she was well and favorably known.

The late Miss Adams was the daughter of the late William and Frances Adams, who predeceased her about twenty years ago. Deceased lady had lived practically all her lift in Omemee until seventeen years ago when she secured a splendid position in Philadelphia, where she has since made her home and made a host of warm friends, returning occasionally to renew old friendships. Miss Adams had not been well since April and two weeks ago went to the College Hospital to undergo treatment. Her condition became rapidly worse and she passed quietly away on Thursday having retained consciousness until within two hours of her death. Two nieces, the Misses Marjorie and Nurse Daisy Adams of Omemee, as well as Miss Annie Spence, of Philadelphia, a cousin and life-long companion were with her when she died and they accompanied the remains to Omemee, arriving here Saturday evening.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon from Christ Church, following a private service at the home of her brother, Mr. Robert Adams.

The service at the church was very largely attended and the Rector, Rev. A. T. Weir delivered a comforting message, his text being taken from John 14th chapter and 27th verse: "Let not your heart be troubled neither let it be afraid."

The gowned choir led softly in the singing of "On the Resurrection Morning." An opportunity was given the friends to view the remains at the close of the service and many availed themselves of the privilege.

The floral tributes were many, varied and very beautiful, bearing in their own mute way a message of love and esteem.

To the sorrowing sister and brother, Mrs. Fred Rowan, of Arcola, Saskatchewan, and Robert Adams, of Omemee, is extended the sincere sympathy of friends near and far.

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. John Spence, and three daughters, of Millbrook, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bradburn and daughter, Miss Bessie and Mrs. Peel, of Janetville, Mrs. B. B. Courtney, of Lindsay, and two daughters, the Misses Rhea and Crystal of Toronto.

WM. CHRISTOPHER SWITZER.

The death occurred suddenly yesterday of William Christopher Switzer, of 458 Weller street, in his 74th year. Mr. Switzer was born in the Township of Emily, but has been with the Toronto Savings and Loan Company as valuator for the past twenty years. He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing widow, one brother, Gabriel, of Emily, and two sisters, Mrs. Dorbe, and Mrs. J. Ellis of Omemee.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 458 Weller St., on Thursday, at 2.00 o'clock, with interment in the Emily cemetery, Rev. David Wren officiating.

ROBERT ERSKINE.

The death of Mr. Robert Erskine, elder son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Erskine of this city, occurred on Sunday morning at Marcellus, N.Y. Mr. Erskine, who had just lately returned to Marcellus after spending his holidays in Peterborough, was to all appearances in the best of health. He passed away very suddenly of acute cardiac incompetence while sleeping in his chair.

A Masonic service was held on Monday evening at Marcellus, at the home of his uncle, Mr. Edward Moir, and the funeral, which was conducted by the Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, Armour road.

The mourners were Mr. Robert Scott and Mr. Alexander Roberts, of Toronto, and Mr. John Moir, Marcellus, New York.

DOROTHY ALLAN PARK
"A SINGER WHO TEACHES, AND A TEACHER WHO SINGS"
ARTIST PUPIL OF MR. DALTON BAKER AND MAESTRO GIOVANNI CLERICI, OF FLORENCE, ITALY

"Mrs. Park has dramatic power which momentarily takes an audience by storm, yet exercises a wonderful restraint to sing with charming softness. Were she not an artiste who knows the real art of song she might win constant applause from "the gallery" by using her full voice less sparingly. She sings with remarkable ease, taking long phrases without apparent effort, and curved with perfect smoothness."—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

"She has a beautiful, rich, pure quality of voice, and possesses to a remarkable degree that great gift in a singer, a fine sense of musical temperament."—Musical Canada.

VOL. LVIII., No. 58 PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1926 PRICE THREE CENTS

From Toronto Globe Editorial, July 24th, 1926, "The Customs Scandal will live in history as one of the country's bitterest experiences. It was the failure of the Government to meet it promptly and courageously which called forth condemnatio . It was this which caused the Government loss of support, and it is this which gives it a foremost place as an ELECTION ISSUE." THE CONSERVATIVE PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

Hon. Hugh Guthrie Explains Policies At Mass Meeting

Supporters of E. A. Peck Hear Prominent Member of the Conservative Party Tell About Customs Probe—Candidate and Mrs. Fallis Also Speak.

PROTECTION, STABILITY AND CUSTOMS ARE MAIN ISSUES, SPEAKERS DECLARE

"Let us have clean, decent government in Canada," was the appeal of the Hon. Hugh Guthrie in closing his address last night in support of the Conservative candidate, E. A. Peck, at the mass meeting held in the Grand Opera House. Other speakers were the candidate and Mrs. Howard Fallis. V. J. McElderry was chairman, and there were a large number of Conservative workers on the platform. The meeting was quiet and orderly, only one or two questions being shouted at the speakers, while thunderous applause greeted important points in their arguments. The building was well filled except for the top gallery.

Starting with an appreciation of the candidate, whom he said had carried out his parliamentary duties assiduously, giving assistance of great value in the committees of the House, Mr. Guthrie took up first the reason for appealing to the people after such a short time. He said that the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King had failed to keep his word when he declared a year ago that he would not retain office unless he had a good majority, as he would not have it said that he was hanging on to office, but had not resigned when he came back with a minority group behind him. (A voice—The United States wouldn't let him). Mr. King, said the speaker, had 100 supporters; Mr. Meighen had 116, and would have had more if he hadn't been robbed; there were 25 Progressives and four other members, Labor, Independent, or otherwise. Mr. King decided then that if he couldn't hold power, he would at least hold office. He wasn't a good sport, and there ensued a government of bartering and bickering in order to get the support of the Progressives and Independents. "And the Independents wouldn't take his word," said the speaker. "Mr. Woodsworth demanded his promise in writing, and read the letter in the House the next day."

Disaster Inevitable

Mr. Guthrie said that failure, although it might be some time in coming, was inevitable with such an arrangement, but by manipulation and by arrangement, by hook or by crook, the government held on longer than was expected, escaping defeat by majorities ranging from one to thirteen. But there was something looming of which none of them knew anything, and that was the Customs scandal.

When Mr. Stevens moved for investigation of the Customs department, said the speaker, it was said that the Conservatives should have known something of what he charged before. The speaker said that Mr. King's request in March, 1925, for more money for special customs inspector and for stricter laws should have shown them, in the light of future exposures, that there was something wrong. His requests were granted and months passed, but there was nothing more heard. The information was locked in the breasts of Mr. King and his ministers.

The business men who had complained then went to Mr. Stevens and laid the facts before him, asking him to introduce the matter in the House, said the speaker. Two days later he placed the notice on the order paper and there was hurrying and scurrying in the government quarters. Inspector Duncan was sent to Montreal, and two days later he reported. The only action taken was the dismissal of Mr. Bissailon.

Commercial Smuggling

Almost from the day the King Government took power there was organized the greatest gang of smugglers, thieves, bootleggers, and toughs ever banded together, said the speaker, and the leader of it was Bissailon, inspector of the Port of Montreal. This was under the protection of a minister of the Crown, the Hon. Jacques Bureau, who, a few weeks after he took office, issued a signed order removing the Mounted Police from a part of the border. A few months later, another order took them from another district, and soon after a third order removed them, at Mr. Bissailon's request, from the inspectorate of Montreal. Then Chief Inspector Busby, was withdrawn from jurisdiction over the Port of Montreal.

It was necessary then, said Mr. Guthrie, that the gang get some members in the Customs service, and two members of the Civil Service Commission were sent gifts of liquor and wine. When they accepted, they were in the power of the gang, and 59 henchmen were given posts. When this was brought out at the investigation, said the speaker, the heads of the two rolled into the basket, but the head of Jacques Bureau had already been elevated to the Senate.

The gang operated on a real scale. Bissailon, the chief preventive officer, was also the chief smuggler and the chief bootlegger. On a salary of $2,400 he kept up a fine town house, a country residence, two automobiles, and a farm on the border.

The farm on the border, said the speaker, had a barn or warehouse right on the boundary, with a road running right through it, and truck loads of goods were brought through without anybody to stop them. There were no police, the chief inspector had no jurisdiction and the clerks and officers of the department were mostly members of the gang.

All commodities were dealt in, including drugs and filthy pictures. Twenty million dollars worth of silk was imported, which could have paid a duty of $7,000,000. It was calculated that one-third of the jewelry sold in Canada was smuggled. Prison-made goods from the United States, which could not be sold there because of health and labor laws, were smuggled in to the extent of 130 tons. Altogether goods worth $200,000,000, were smuggled in every year, and allowing an average of 20 per cent., the country lost $40,000,000 in revenue, while honest dealers and manufacturers were being driven to the wall.

Excise Evad .

The other part of Mr. Bureau's department looked even bigger, said Mr Guthrie, and the chance to evade the liquor tax was not missed. The speaker said he was not discussing the liquor laws of Canada or the provinces. Whiskey made in bond for consumption in foreign countries pays no excise, while that made for use in Canada pays $9.03 a gallon. It was possible to load ships and get clearance papers if they had a stand in with the officers. Mr. Guthrie interposed that all the scandal was not in the eastern provinces, but that the investigation had not yet reached Ontario. He also answered Mr. Raney's statement that he should be called to give evidence before the commission by stating that all his data about the customs had been taken from the evidence already given.

In 1923 there were 52 vessels sailed from Halifax and St. John, carrying 530,032 gallons of liquor, he said. In 1924 there were 125 vessels and 1,913,000 gallons. In 1925 there were 261 vessels and 3,387,000 gallons.

All this liquor came back into Canada and the treasury didn't get one five-cent piece of the $52,481,000 that should have been collected.

The scandal grew so bad, said the speaker, and the Maritimes were being debauched, that the churches and societies banded together to form the Moral Reform League. The Rev. Dr. Grant was appointed secretary, and he wrote to Mr. King, telling him the circumstances, and appealing for action. He got a reply from Mr. King's secretary, promising a reply from the Prime Minister. Five months later he got another letter of the same kind, and two months later he had a letter from Mr. King, saying that he was satisfied that some false landing certificates had been used.

Mr. Guthrie then gave dates of sailings for a number of schooners. One left Halifax for Lima, Peru, on September 17. She had on board 3110 cases and 500 kegs of whiskey, and she returned empty on Sept. 22. On Sept. 22 she cleared with another cargo for Havana. Another vessel sailed on October 5 with a cargo for Lima, and returned soon enough to start on a second voyage on the 7th. Another cleared for the bahamas with loads of whiskey on Oct. 5, 9, 12, and 16. On one occasion she returned, apparently from the Bahamas on the same day she set sail from Halifax, and a large cargo had been unloaded during that time.

Mr. King didn't raise a hand to stop all this, said Mr. Guthrie, because his friends, notably Mr Duff, were mixed up in it. In the case of the Barge Tremblay Mr. Casgrain was concerned, and Mr. Hushion bought the alcohol that remained after Mr. Bissailon's helpers had taken their toll while transporting it for a quarter of a mile. This, the speaker said, was sold in November for 36c a gallon, and the Minister of Customs said in February that it would not leave the warehouse until the excise of $9.03 a gallon had been paid.

Mr. Guthrie gave the numbers of three cars which left the Dominion Distilleries, of which Mr. Hushion was a member, during the early part of December, just after the alcohol had been purchased. These cars, all consigned to L. Evans of Toronto for export to Mexico, were unloaded at Welland, London and Sarnia.

Stills Undisturbed

Acting on the complaints of a priest whose people were being debauched by the produce of certain stills, said the speaker, two officials in Quebec proceeded against the owners. These wrote to the minister and Mr. Bissailon was advised that it would be well for the officers to be more discreet as they might lose their jobs. The priest was not satisfied and gave the men a list of nineteen stills. They didn't know what to do so they sent it to Mr. Bureau with the request that he mark which ones they might proceed against. The list, said Mr. Guthrie, was produced at the hearing with the word "No" written beside every name in Mr. Bureau's own handwriting.

The case of Mr. Baldwin's letter asking for the removal of certain officers was also discussed in detail, as was the Gaunt case by which $64,000 was lost through false invoices. The Meighen Government is after this money, said the speaker.

The End of the Session

The speaker then took up the events before the dissolution. He said Mr. Stevens had wanted to include a censure clause in the report of the customs committeee but had been defeated, the report merely containing recommendations for stricter laws. He then introduced the amendment in the house and Mr. Woodsworth brought in a sub-amendment. This was defeated and another introduced. Mr. Meighen raised a point of order and appealed to the house when the speaker ruled against him. His appeal was sustained and then a motion to adjourn was defeated.

While these amendments were being discussed the cabinet met Lord Byng, said the speaker, but nothing was done. Then on Monday, before the session opened, a group of Progressives, including Miss MacPhail, asked to see the evidence in the Duncan report.

Big Explosion and Green Flashes In Sky Startles England and Puzzles Scientists

LONDON, Sept. 9. — Vivid green flashes in the sky puzzled English astronomers yesterday. Thousands of people throughout England saw the flashes and some heard a loud accompanying explosion.

At Greenwich Observatory it was said that photographs taken showed no trace of the phenomenon. Reports of the explosion, said an astronomer at the observatory, suggest that the flashes were caused by the bursting of a meteor, but such an explosion would almost inevitably be accompanied by a meteoric shower, and no reports of any meteoric iron being picked up have been received.

While blue and white flashes caused by electric generating stations are common, green, the color of Tuesday's flashes, indicates they were caused by some kind of astronomical freak.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—(Associated Press.)— A wide area of North Midland England was startled Tuesday night by a mysterious explosion, accompanied by a sudden blaze of light which lasted only two or three seconds.

Some houses were shaken and various persons thought an earthquake had occurred. Reports from towns in five counties agree as to the flash of light, but they differ respecting the sound.

Some reports describe it as a terrific detonation, while others say that it was a rumbling. Still other reports say that the detonation was like a loud clap of thunder.

People in Hull and elsewhere assert that the light was like the concentration of several searchlights, some red, some blue and some green, all crossing each other.

At Derby the light was seen as a dull red glare, resembling that of a blast furnace.

Observers at Goole say it was a big streak of light, like a falling star.

DELEGATES RECEIVE TELEGRAM ATTACKING BRITISH GOVERNMENT

Message Supposedly Signed By Soviet Labor Leader Being Circulated.

CONDEMNS THOMAS.

Other Labor Leaders Attacked in Telegram to Trades Union Congress.

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 9 (Canadian Press). — A copy of a lengthy and abusive telegram, purportedly signed in behalf of the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions by M. Tomsky, Moscow fraternal delegate whom the Government forbade to land in England, was circulated to-day among the delegates to the British Trade Union Congress in session here.

The Tomsky telegram attacked the British Conservative Government which it said "willingly admits representatives from Amsterdam and the American Federation of Labor who either blackleg the miners or shamefully talk of loans at interest" but refused to admit representatives of the Soviet workers who were "giving their last penny to help their class brothers in this great fight."

The telegram embodied an attack on J. H. Thomas and "other trades union leaders like him," whom it accused of being too loyal to capital.

The Trades Union Council had a riotous quarter of an hour to-day when J. Bromley of the Associated Society of Locomotive Men and Firemen, was asked to second an emergency resolution pledging support for the striking coal miners.

Pandemonium broke out. Bromley tried to speak but the delegates howled and shouted him down. Unable to restore order the chairman adjourned the conference.

The incident was interpreted as an indication that the miners hold the railwaymen responsible for the collapse of the recent general strike.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT EXHIBIT COMING

Forestry Division To Send Complete Toronto Exhibit.

Through the efforts of W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., the complete exhibit made at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto by the Forestry branch of the Ontario Government will be shown in its entirety at the Peterborough Fair commencing next Monday.

This is a wonderful exhibit and Peterborough is fortunate in securing it as only two other points in the province are being so favored.

Order Intelligence Tests To Regulate Enrolment

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 9.—In an effort to control the enrolment in the Techincal School, where a registration of more than 40 pupils has overcrowded the capacity of the building, the Board of Education has instructed Principal A. D. Hone to subject all applicants to an intelligence test. Only those who attain a standard to be determined by him will be admitted. With 50 pupils more than last year alrtady in attendance, and a prospect of a still greater increase, it has been decided to increase the staff.

Mr. Hone was formerly on the staff of the Peterborough Collegiate.

POULTRY SHOW DATE CHANGED

Will Co-operate With the Dressed Fowl Fair in December.

IN MARKET HALL.

The Peterborough Poultry Association held its regular meeting last night in the Woodmen of the World Hall. A change in the date of the poultry show was discussed so as to co-operate with the dressed fowl fair which is being held on the 7th, 8th and 9th of December. The members were unanimous for joining in with the dressed fowl fair committee providing they can get these dates accepted by the committee in Toronto which appoints the judges. It was also decided to go back to the Market Hall to hold the fair, so as a larger crowd would come to the show, especially when the other fair was going on out on the Market Square.

The judging is to be done on the 7th and 8th, and plans were made and committees appointed to revise the lists, solicit advertisements and get special prizes.

With these two fairs being held on the same date, the poultry show had nothing to lose and everything to gain, for the dressed fowl fair in other places has proved a great success, bringing buyers from all over the country to purchase the fowl that is being offered for sale. Then again, the time of year was considered much better to hold the poultry show in than in early January, as the roads are open and it is not so cold, so a big attendance may be expected. The board is desirous of getting its grant as usual, and the secretary was instructed to write the department, explaining the reason for changing the date and holding two fairs in one year. It is expected that a drive will be put on for new members, so as the local board may qualify for a larger grant for their fair from the Department of Agriculture.

The local winter poultry show is certainly coming into its own. Yesterday the secretary received an application from Thomas Leonard of Cobourg, asking for a prize list to be sent to him of the winter poultry fair. Mr. Leonard is one of the big breeders in Buff Orpingtons in this district.

ELECTORAL WAR IS CENTRED IN ONTARIO RIDINGS

Political Observers Believe That the Result Will Be Close.

CAPITAL QUIET.

Both Parties Expected To Gain Moderate Majority in Election.

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.— The civil service is running the government this week and will do so until election day.

All the cabinet ministers, without exception, are away attending to their own personal elections, the last to leave being Sir Henry Drayton, who thinks that while he has a perfectly safe seat, it is up to him to show himself.

The capital will welcome a return to normality next week if the election should result in making that possible. For the past two months very little but the most ordinary routine of business has been attempted. Nor was any other course possible in view of the circumstances in which parliament abruptly broke off with little supply voted and with limitations surrounding the issue of governor-general's warrants.

Battle In Ontario.

Ontario is the particular battleground chosen by the party leaders for the final week.

Mr. Meighen and Mr. King are crossing and recrossing each other's tracks in several places. The premier will terminate his campaign in the western part of the province, and Mr. King in the east. The distinctive feature of final Conservative strategy in Ontario is recourse to the protective tariff and allied issues more than to the customs affairs.

Headquarters of both sides are wiring out to the provincial organizations for final summaries of election prospects for publication at the week-end. There is a rather surprising volume of opinion that the final result in the country is, as a whole, likely to be very close. None but the most pronounced partisans see the policy of anything like a sweep, but each professes competence to get along with a very modest majority. Most of the money being bet is without odds.

BRILLIANT CLERIC COMING TO CITY

Rt. Rev. Arthur Lea, of Japan, Speaks Here on Sunday.

The forthcoming visit of the Right Reverend Arthur Lea, D.D., Bishop of Kyu-Shu, Japan, brings a very distinguished Canadian to the City of Peterborough. He will be the speaken at the noon luncheon of the Kiwanis Club and also will be the preacher at the Rally Day services in All Saints' church.

The Bishop had a brilliant scholastic career in Canada before leaving for his distant mission field. He graduated B.A. and M.A. from the University of Toronto and studied theology in Wycliffe College graduating in 1893.

His first vist to Japan was in 1896 and after gaining experience in several cities he was selected by the Archbishop of Canterbury to be Bishop in the South Island in the Diocese of Kyu-Shu.

Bishop Lea had the distinction of taking the first motor car to the South Island and is still recognized as an authority on automobiles. The local government still gives him a first class certificate which allows him to drive any make of car and also gives a 50 per cent reduction on car taxes. Living up to his reputation as a pioneer motorist the Bishop is taking back a new car when he returns in the spring.

Hen Takes Electrical Bath Egg Yield Increased 50 P.C.

NEWPORT, Shropshire, England, Sept. 9 — Chickens which go home to roost do not get as much sleep as they did before ultra violet rays became a fad in poultry raising circles here.

Young chicks have been made to grow twice as fast by the use of electricity, says Prof. Borlase Matthews, a poultry expert. Experiments have proven, he says, that young birds treated for nine weeks with the ultra violet rays at intervals during the day and night become twice as heavy as those not so treated.

Prof. Matthews advises poultry farmers either to give chickens electrically-made ozone or to bathe them with electricity radiated from electric wires over the perches at night. If this is done, Prof. Matthews contends, the yield in eggs ought to be increased by nearly 50 per cent.

FOSTER TELLS LEAGUE ABOUT U. S. SYMPATHY

Says Millions of Americans Approve of Work Being Done.

SUPPORT IN CANADA.

Canadian Delegate Says U.S. A. Doesn't Speak For Continent.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press). — Millions of citizens of the United States have "sympathetic hearts and minds which approve of the great work the League of Nations is carrying on," Sir George Foster of Canada declared in an address before the League assembly to-day. Sir George said the League's first great disappointment had been the deprivation of the active co-operation of the United States. Many skeptics had thought the absence of the United States spelled the end of the League, "that without the United States it would be impossible for the League to do effective and continuous work."

"Despite that," he remarked, "we have continued and have made our way forward step by step. We have done that without opposition from the United States."

There were people there who did not "have the happiness to live under the flag of the United States," and north of the Gulf of Mexico there were 130,000,000 people who believed in the purposes of the League. Emphasizing that Canada was heart and soul in sympathy with the League, Sir George criticized those who imagined the United States as representing the entire American continent.

In conclusion, he asserted that the League must never bend to the cajolery or menace of outside powers and said that if outside parties laid down unreasonable conditions as the price of their collaboration they should be refused.

CIVIC HOLIDAY DATE FIRST SET BY RAILWAYS

Shortage of Cars For Excursions Made Diversity of Dates Necessary.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED.

Excursions To Toronto and Return For One Dollar Gone Forever.

The action of the city council in changing Peterboro's Civic Holiday from the second Monday in August to the first Monday in that month, shows indirectly how times and conditions have changed in the last twenty year. Two decades ago the automobile was unknown, and several excursions would be run by train to various places. The railways had a difficulty in supplying the necessary coaches to carry the crowds on the first Monday in August, and persuaded Peterboro and a few other places to celebrate the day on the second Monday instead. This explains why Peterboro has not been in line with other places. It was at one time, and will be from next year onward.

Such a thing nowadays as a cheap railway excursion is practically unknown, but old-timers can recall trips to Toronto and return for one big dollar. For a number of years the old Midland ran a fall excursion to Midland City and return, for a dollar, while a trip could be made to Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland or New York and return for from $10 to $14. Cheap fares have gone, probably never to return.

PETERBOROUGH GETS NO COAL FROM ALBERTA

Only Small Shipment Being Made in Ontario This Year.

This City Received 1,500 Tons of Western Fuel Last Winter.

It is the opinion of local dealers that Peterborough has very little prospect of obtaining any Alberta coal in the near future. The coal coming from the Prairie Province this year is a trial shipment, the result of an arrangement between Premier Ferguson and Hon. R. B. Bennett. The consignment is one of 6,000 tons as contrasted with the 50,000 tons of Alberta coal which Ontario received last Fall. No word has been received in Peterborough from the Railway Board or the Fuel Commission, and Alberta shippers are equally silent so far as Peterborough is concerned. This leads to the belief that few districts outside Toronto will burn Alberta coal during the present year.

Last year nearly 1,500 tons of Alberta coal arrived in Peterborough many dealers receiving five cars and at last two dealers receiving ten cars. As one dealer expressed himself this morning, the amount of Alberta coal to be distributed would not suffice to give each Ontario dealer a single car load.

The price of coal has advanced slightly in Toronto, but so far no change has been intimated in Peterborough.

CRUISERS SENT UP TO HANKOW

Two British Vessels Steaming Up Chinese River To Scene of Action.

PROTECT INTERESTS.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (United Press) —H.M.S. Hawkins, flagship of the British Asiatic Fleet, and the cruiser Vindictive were officially reported steaming up the Yang Tse-Kiang to Hankow, where three British officers and four men were killed in an engagement with Chinese. Two officers and fourteen men were wounded. However, by sending the two British warships to Hankow to protect British interests, the Foreign Office planned no further action after the dramatic rescue of six British merchant sailors by British naval forces yesterday.

Losses Heavy.

BERLIN, Sept. 9 (United Press). —The German Government wireless to-day broadcast a report that the Cantonese army lost 20,000 men in taking Hankow. The broadcast quoted newspaper despatches.

Marshal Wu Pei Fu, who retired from Hankow after the Cantonese attack, has retreated about fifty miles north of the city, according to the broadcast, with an army of about 10,000.

LIBERAL MEETING HELD AT LAKEFIELD

Most Enthusiastic Rally Since Beginning of the Present Campaign.

J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate, was greeted by a large crowd at his meeting held in the Memorial Hall, Lakefield, last night. Many women were present in the audience, which proved to be one of the most enthusiastic since the beginning of the present campaign.

Robert Duff, president of the Lakefield Liberal Association, acted as chairman, and officials of both the men's and women's organizations occupied seats on the platform. Mr. Duffus was assisted by J. A. Dewart and A. E. Guidal.

F. V. Crowe rendered an appropriate recitation which gained much applause.

J. J. Duffus.

Declaring his intention, if elected, "to give his full support to the Old-Age Pensions Act," Mr. Duffus said that it was only a fit and a proper thing that the old people after giving their best to the country during their younger days, should be enabled to spend the twilight of their lives in a dignified manner. He expressed himself as being pleased at the reception he had received since he had read in The Examiner that "I was the scapegoat of the Liberal party." "In to-night's paper," he said, "I see where they say I was wrong." "It was only fair," he said, "that he should be credited with having enough foresight to see that the Liberal party was going to govern Canada, and that West Peterborough was going to return a Liberal candidate." During his campaign, he declared, he had refrained from personalities, and had discussed only the major issues at stake.

Meighen's blue ruin cry, he declared, had done more to keep people from coming to Canada than any other cause in the last twenty-five years. He criticised in vigorous terms the present policy of the Conservative party, which he declared was nothing but scandal. The Tories he claimed, were saying from their platforms that the Liberal candidate would say nothing regarding the Customs investigation. They had, he declared, by their high tariff policy, made smuggling the most profitable business in the Dominion. There were instances of dishonest employees in the Customs service, he said, and some of them were Liberals but many of them were Conservatives. The same conditions have been going on for years, he declared emphatically, and the Liberals were no more to blame than any other party. Since the Conservatives had taken over the reins of government, he said, smuggled liquor had crossed from the United States into Canada and had killed a number of people. "Was that due to the Liberals?" he asked. "I would not like to blame it on the Conservatives."

Referring to Mr. Bradburn's challenge in connection with a Conservative who had written to the Hon. H. H. Stevens asking that the watch on the border be lessened, and asking him to state the name, Mr. Duffus declared, "I was alluding to Gott, who last year defeated the Hon. G. P. Graham. I read in a prominent Toronto newspaper that Mr. Gott admitted that he received a letter, in fact he read it to the reporter, from the Hon. Mr. Stevens in connection with the bootleggers in his (Gott's) constituency," and to-day there is more bootlegging than ever, he declared. The Liberals were attempting to clear up the smuggling question, and just because they were in power at the time the people were now being asked to vote against them.

J. A. Dewart.

"Almost a year has elapsed since the blue ruin prophecy of the Tories that the country would be bankrupt if King was returned," declared Mr. Dewart. "Have their prophecies come true?" asked the speaker. In his opinion, the Dominion of Canada was more prosperous to-day than at any period since the war. As a result of the war and the actions of the Canadian troops, Canada had become known throughout the world, but Meighen had nullified a lot of that sentiment when he spread that blue ruin cry. Charatcerizing the Robb budget "as the most advanced piece of legislation that has been placed on the statute book of Canada since Confederation," Mr. Dewart stated that the large manufacturers, despite their protests, were busier than they ever were. The Robb budget, he maintained, had the effect of lessening the taxation on the people of Canada, and despite this the Conservatives fought tooth and nail against it. He described at some length the position of the Canadian National Railways, claiming that it was only when Mackenzie King appointed Sir Henry Thornton at the head that the road was enabled to show an operating surplus.

A. E. Guidal.

"The business of running Canada is a gigantic matter and will only prosper according to the type of men we put in Ottawa to run it," declared Mr. Guidal. He deprecated the tactics of the Conservative orators, whom he declared were merely talking scandal and corruption. "If I had any doubt how to vote, I would get my cue from the Conservative members. Every one of them is more than anxious to tell the public that he did not vote against the Robb budget. I would vote for the party that produced it," he declared. Apart from creating, naming and making a policy, he said, there was the necessity of working it. Meighen, he maintained, had nothing constructive to offer the people. The Conservatives made a great deal of talk about the exodus, he said. "This has continued since Confederation, with the exception of the period that Sir Wilfred Laurier was in power."

He was at a loss as to the best way to characterize the present Conservative campaign. It was simply destructiveness, a species of political measles that kept breaking out in spots. One day it was tariff, or Customs scandal, or the exodus, or how to act in case of war, he declared. In conclusion, declared Mr. Guidal, "in sending Mr. Duffus to Ottawa you will send a man for whose actions you will never have to apologize. He will not come back not knowing how he voted on the most important piece of legislation that came up during the session."

Three cheers for the candidate and the singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

NORWOOD VOTERS HEAR MARSHALL

Hastings-Peterborough Liberal Candidate Addresses Voters of District.

NORWOOD, Sept. 9.—A meeting in the interests of Mr. John Marshall of Stirling, Liberal candidate for Hastings-Peterborough, was held in the Norwood Town Hall on Wednesday evening, when addresses were given by Fraser Alysworth of Madoc, Mr. Mulvey of Ottawa, and the candidate. Dr. Munroe, who acted as chairman, introduced each of the speakers, with appropriate and well chosen remarks.

The first speaker of the evening was Mr. Alysworth who, in speaking of the candidate, said he had known him for ten years; that he was a good business man and a shrewd Scotchman. Of couse, he couldn't help being Scotch, but that fact would assure the elctors that if successful in the campaign he would see there was no extravagance. In speaking of Dr. Embury, he said he was all right, but in with the wrong crowd; that the reason he had gone into politics was that the north country had begun to skid towards the Grits, and the Conservatives thought they would be able to get it back on account of the family doctor, who was a favorite. He dealt with the condition of affairs under Sir John A. McDonald and Sir Wilfred Laurier. He spoe very favorably of the Doukhobors who, he said, could do more than Canadians; that they had turned the northwest into a land flowing with milk and honey. These emigrants were brought out under the immigration policy of Mr. Sifton, a minister in Sir Wilfred's cabinet.

The speaker said, "The handwriting has been seen on the wall. The King Government will be returned." He then touched on the reduction of tariff, penny postage, old age pensions, Sir A. Currie's war report, Meighen's whispering campaign, Ross rifles, the Oliver equipment, Customs scandal, Volstead Act, and the Duncan report. Mr. Aylesworth, although not half finished with his adress, left the field to the other speakers.

John S. Marshall.

Mr. Marshall was then introduced to the audience and began by saying he was not as fluent a speaker as Mr. Aylesworth. He hoped Mr. Aylesworth was right in saying that 52 p.c. of the voters in the riding were ladies, and if so, he was all for the ladies, and hoped they would be for him. He said he could see some good in all men especially the premiers from John A. McDonald down to the Hon. Arthur Meighen who he said had lasted 65 hours and he hoped he wouldn't last any longer. He said Meighen was good, but King was better.

He spoke of protection for the farmers and said he had always favored low tariff. The pulpwood embargo and the Robb budget were dealt with. The latter, he said, had brought in the greatest period of prosperity in ages, and said the reason for the lack of help in the western harvest fields was because of so much employment here.

Mr. Mulvey, of Ottawa, was the last speaker of the evening and dealt with the customs probe. He said the Liberals had began the investigation and would see it through in the next session of parliament. He took up the question of the constitutional issue, whether Baron Byng, Governor-General of Canada, was justified in granting dissolution to Mr. Meighen, after refusing Mr. King. He closed by saying, "I am sure that on the opening of parliament I will have the pleasure of welcoming John Marshall, the Liberal candidate for Hastings-Peterborough. He made a strong appeal to the electors to support the candidates.

Mr. Aylesworth was then called on and he recited two of Pauline Johnston's poems, one of which was "Canadian Born," and finished by saying the Liberal party was the only loyal party in the Dominion of Canada.

After three cheers for the candidate and the Hon. Mackenzie King, the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

HON. HUGH GUTHRIE EXPLAINS POLICIES

They notified Mr. King that they would vote against him and he rushed off to Government House to demand a dissolution. When this was refused he offered his resignation. This dissolution was asked for, said the speaker, to escape condemnation and censure. Here a member of the audience asked about leaving the matter to the decision of the people, and Mr. Guthrie said that he got his appeal to the people, so why should he kick.

Continuing on this point, the speaker said that the complaint of Mr. King was because he could not appoint the election officers. Last year he conducted an election in which ballot boxes were stuffed and ballots destroyed ,and some of the officials fled to the United States. "One guarantee in this election," said Mr. Guthrie, "is that every ballot cast will be counted the way it was polled." This assurance was greeted with loud applause. Mr. Guthrie remarked that in July, while acting Minister of Justice, he had received a petition for the release of "Baldy" Robb.

"Every Liberal speaker says the customs scandal is not the issue," he continued. "What caused the present general election? The Customs scandal. Are we going to insist on clear, honest administration in this country or are we going to wink at dishonesty?" he asked.

"Mr. King claims that he started the investigation. That is not true. The business men of Montreal and Harry Stevens started it. They say ours is only a provisional government, but the police have been put back on the borders and the prosecution of offenders has started in an effort to recover some of the losses."

Mr. Guthrie asked if it seemed reasonable that Mr. King, if returned to power, would do anything drastic, and promised that there would be a clean-up if Mr. Meighen were returned, let the blow fall where it might. He appealed to the electors to consider the country ahead of their political affilations, but to return a candidate to support Mr. Meighen.

E. A. Peck

Mr. Peck said that there were two main issues, protection of Canadian labor interests and the Customs investigation. On the first point, he said that the policy of the Conservative party was the same as last year when he had been returned. He said raw materials were being shipped out of Canada and manufactured goods brought in to the detriment of Canadian manufacturers and their employees.

The revelations of the Customs probe had astounded the country, continued Mr. Peck, and the House had voted censure on Mr. King and his government. Many Progressives who had supported Mr. King all through the session voted against him, and one said that it was the worst scandal that had ever besmirched the name of Canada. It was a matter which affected the whole population of the riding and the electors should show their appreciation of the importance of the matter by casting their votes for a supporter of the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen.

Mrs. Howard Fallis

A particular appeal to the women was made by Mrs. Fallis. She referred to the statements of the women when they were seeking the franchise that politics would be cleaned up by their influence. On two occasions before women had the vote there had been scandals, one when the Ross Liberal Government was defeated after a long tenure of office in Ontario, and the other the defeat of the Roblin Government in Manitoba. Now there existed a similar condition of affairs at Ottawa and it was the duty of the women to help in the house-cleaning. (Applause).

Mrs. Fallis touched the issues raised by the Liberal speakers. She said that nobody was particularly interested in the constitutional issue. All Mr. King's long speeches about it might be condensed into one sentence: "Mr. Meighen was given the chance to appeal to the people instead of Mr. King." She said that Lord Byng had the same high sense of duty when he considered the requests for dissolution as when he led the Canadian troops in France. Mr. King's reiteration of this reminded her of the man who came home drunk and told his wife a long story about dining with friends. When she answered that the people he mentioned had had dinner with her, he said that he had made up that excuse and was going to stick to it.

The income tax reductions and the removal of the tax on automobiles did not help the ordinary man, said Mrs. Fallis. He would gain some slight relief from the return to penny postage. A reduction that would have helped everybody would have been the abolition of the sales tax. To the Liberal claim of having reduced the sales tax, Mrs. Fallis stated that when Mr. King took office the tax was three per cent. It had been imposed to help pay off the war debt, and its removal as soon as possible had been promised. Mr. King's government had raised it to four and one-half per cent, and then to six per cent. Since then it has been cut to five per cent.

The main issues, according to Mrs. Fallis, are the customs scandal, the need for protection, and the need for stable government. Mr. Peck, she said, had dealt with the tariff, but she added that Mr. Meighen's tariff policy was the same from coast to coast, while Mr. King's seemed to be affected by the climate, varying as he spoke in different parts of the country. Without arguing on the theory of protection or free trade, she said, the policy of adequate protection was the proper one for Canada.

Mrs. Fallis advanced a letter from Miss MacPhail as answer to the argument that Mr. King had known nothing about the state of affairs in the Customs department. She quoted Mr. Sparks as saying that with proper enforcement of the present laws, fifty per cent of the smuggling could be stopped, and with the laws tightened ninety per cent could be stopped. She referred to Mr. Dunning's discussion of the Customs when he asked the members of a Western Ontario audience to stand up if they had never smuggled, and called the whole matter a joke when nobody stood up. "If you think it a joke to have the treasury lose millions, to elevate Jacques Bureau to the Senate, to smuggle drugs into Canada, then vote Liberal."

Mrs. Fallis said that all responsible papers were advocating a return to the two party scheme for stability, and stated that Mr. Meighen had the best chance of being returned with a working majority. A gentleman in the audience disagreed with her on this point. Referring to different times when Liberals had supported the Conservative party to avert a crisis, she called on all electors to put the country before the party as in those days, and vote for Mr. Peck and Mr. Meighen.

PRESENT RAILWAY

mile of track is more than double in the United States than it is in Canada.

The railways also submitted a joint memorandum regarding advances and reductions in freight and passenger rates in Canada, with a comparison of similar advances and reductions in the United States. While general advances of 15, 25 and 40 per cent were shown, it was explained that many commodities of a basic nature were exempted therefrom, and these were such as move in large quantities.

Western Canadian rates are lower than those in the United States, it is claimed, while operating costs are higher and are therefore not reasonable and fair to the railways. Had the Canadian railways received the same rate per hundred pounds of grain products to the head of the lakes during 1925 as was and is still being paid to American carriers over similar distances, Canadian carriers would have that year earned an additional sum of $34,679,000. The comment was added at this point that the freight rate structure in Canada is recognized as being the lowest in the world.

A joint memorandum was presented to show that the passenger revenue per mile on the Canadian National railways had fallen from 2.70 cents in 1922, to 2.62 cents in 1925, and on the Canadian Pacific railway, from 2.91 cents in 1921 to 2.54 cents in 1925, while freight revenues per ton mile on the Canadian National had fallen from 1.00 cents in 1922 to .96 cents in 1925, and on the Canadian Pacific from 1.19 cents in 1921 to .97 cents in 1925.

Much has been heard lately, the railways contend, about the improvement in the financial return of both railways, but this is a year to year matter subject to greatly varying conditions. It was pointed out that the excellent crop of last year followed a comparatively poor one; that the Canadian National was still far short of balancing its budget, and that the Canadian Pacific in recent years had found itself unable to produce net financial results which compare favorably with those of some years ago, and unable to produce an annual balance which, by a very substantial sum, comes within reach of the amount recognized by authorities as proper protection for such an investment as exists in the company.

Reducing by radio is becoming popular. One woman reported that 15 minutes exercise a day, directed by the expert for one of the large broadcasting companies, cut her weight from 150 to 130 pounds.

A POPULAR CHANGE.

The changing of Peterboro's Civic Holiday from the second Monday in August to the first, finally made by the City Council at its meeting Tuesday night, puts this city in line with the majority of other Ontario muncipalities.

Although the second Monday arrangement had been in force a couple of decades, there has always been a feeling among many citizens that it was a mistaken policy and the holding of the local Civic Holiday on the same day as other cities will be accepted by the public generally as a commendable change.

The Examiner has consistently advocated the move and is glad that the change has at last been made.

THE LOP-SIDED BOB.

The barbers say it is here but that it will stay very briefly. Of course in the matter of hair styles everything has to be tried once. The bob is so new as to be still in the experimental stage, but the lop-sided bob is the newest thing out. The lop-sided or bias cut requires a boyish clip on one side of the head, with a generous mop remaining on the other side. By sundry dressings and sketchy maneuvering, say the barbers, the total result can be made striking, picturesque, different or whatever is the style requirement as the mind feminine appraises such things.

But the lop-sided bob is too daring to last, the barbers say. It will have its season and a certain indeterminate percentage of feminine approval and adoption. But it will fade out after a very short run. There doesn't seem to be any satisfying logic to support it—and besides, it might warp the necks of the girls out of plumb, and that has to be considered.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

THE COST OF AN ELECTION.

General elections in Canada have increased in cost along with most other things, and the statement from Ottawa that the present election will be $1,700,000 will give the public some idea of what is involved in an appeal to the country.

It may be surprising information that the services of some 80,000 men are necessary in the official carrying on of the election.

That is the number under the control of the Chief Electoral Officer, Col. Biggar, the list of employees including 28,000 deputy returning officers, a similar number of poll clerks, 20,000 rural registrars, 241 returning officers, 241 election clerks and 300 revising officers.

In addition to this army of officers employed by the government, each candidate of course is authorized to instal an agent or scrutineer or perhaps both in and around the 28,000 poling places in the Dominion, which add more than 100,000 more to the list of those concerned in taking the vote.

When the workers engaged in the political organizations are taken into consideration the total number of people engaged would reach a very high figure.

NO DEARTH OF CANDIDATES.

Although the public may be apathetic in regard to the election there is at least no lack of interest, so far as aspirants for office are concerned.

The official nominations revealed but one seat in Canada going without a contest—the riding of Provencher in Manitoba—and even there there would have been a fight had not fate intervened and bad roads prevented the filing of the nomination papers of the Conservative candidate.

Altogether 528 people believe that they have the necessary qualifications to occupy a seat in parliament, which means that 283 will know about the middle of next week that the majority of the voters in their respective constituencies put a considerably less flattering estimate upon them.

The two old parties, of course, supply the bulk of the candidates, the Conservatives with 233 and the Liberals 199.

Of the rest there are common or garden Progressives and Liberal-Progressives, United Farmers of Alberta, Laborites and Independents of all varieties, twenty-five in all of the latter.

In thirty-five ridings three candidates are appealing for election and two constituencies have a four-cornered fight, giving the electors of their particular ridings plenty of choice.

HELPING THE PRESS.

The Examiner wishes to call the attention of deputy-returning officers officiating in this district at the Federal election next Tuesday to the explicit instructons issued by Col. O. M. Biggar, the Chief Electoral Officer, in regard to the duty of the returning officers to assist the press in getting the vote results early.

To throughly cover this district, and to get the detailed figures from the various polling sub-divisions, is at its best an arduous task and without the hearty co-operation of the returning officers The Examiner cannot hope to give the people the service they have a right to expect.

The Chief Electoral Officer has recognized the existence of this difficulty and his orders are to the effect that when the vote is counted the information is public property and every deputy and poll clerk, as well as every candidates' agent should do what lies in his power to notify the figures to the press and to the candidates' 'organizations with the least possible delay.

The Examiner is sure that it can count upon the assistance of the officials in this section of Ontario next Tuesday.

One thing to be thankful for, the Ewart-Reid controversy will soon disappear from the news columns.

PRESENT STATUS OF IMMIGRATION.

Foreigners entering the United States in the fiscal year 1925-26 numbered 304,488, an increase of about 4 per cent. over the immigration in the previous year. On the other hand, fewer aliens left the country—the number being 76,992—and the net increase in population through immigration was 227,496.

Foreign countries succeeded better in filling their respective quotas, doubtless because of improvements in the administration of the law and the effective functioning of the several stations established abroad for the purpose of examining emigrants. Despite the unemployment in England emigration from that country declined.

While the quota law is limiting old world immigration, Canada and Mexico, as non-quota countries, continue to send large numbers of laborers, farmers, farm hands and others to the United States. Canada supplied 91,000 of the newcomers in the year under review and Mexico 43,000. As a rule Canadian immigrants remain in the United States and make valuable citizens. The Mexican element is migratory and unstable.

One fact noted is that 1925-26 showed a net loss of more than 10,000 in the Italian population of the United States. More Italians returned home than were admitted as immigrants. Yet Italian statesmen have complained bitterly of the effects of the quota law, since, they say, Italy has an annual surplus of at least 100,000 men.

Of course, thousands of aliens are smuggled into the country every year. Official figures take no account of that source of additions to the population. Estimates of bootleg immigration vary, but all agree that the volume is considerable.—Chicago Daily News.

COOLIDGE AND THE WAR DEBTS.

President Coolidge has announced that the war debts must be paid that are coming to the United States. He claims that the money will have to be paid by the United States taxpayers unless it is paid by the taxpayers who borrowed it. This is begging the question. The important question is the moral right of the United States to collect the debts at all. We have so often proved that no such moral right exists that it is needless to go into that question again. But it can be pointed out that the President is accepting a terrible and dangerous responsibility in taking the stand that he has. No one can tell what the ill-feeling towards the United States will grow into in the course of time; wise Americans dread what may happen.

Good judges believe that the people of the United States as a whole do not understand this debt question. They think it is a debt and therefore should be paid, that is all there is to it. Forgotten are all the sacrifices of men and money which the borrowing countries made before the United States entered the war, and from which they received such enormous benefits, including a colossal sum of money, and freedom from the dominion of Germany. In this connection Premier Baldwin, after he had settled the terms of Great Britain's debt to the United States, said that "The American people are country people and not urban people. If you look at the Senate you will find the majority come from agricultural and pastoral communities, and they do not realize the position which exists in regard to the meaning of the international debt. The bulk of the people in America have no acquaintance with international trade. Great Britain lives on international trade; in America it is not so." In this, more perhaps than anything else, lies the difficulty about the debts. Can it be said that even the President's training and career was sufficient to make him understand international questions, and the wisest methods of conducting international affairs. Great Britain has had centuries of such experience, and the time must come when the States will have to take her advice about these debts.—St. Catharines Standard.

CANADA'S BIRTHDAY.

Proposals are being heard locally to organize a great celebration for July 1, 1927, to observe the sixtieth anniversary of Confederation, and it is to be hoped that the project will not be allowed to languish for want of leadership or public interest.

We speak of Canada as a young country—and it is in comparison with others—but a good deal of water has passed under the bridge since the patriots of 1867 forgot their political differences and got together for the purpose of bringing this now great nation into existence. Canadians of the present day are prone to forget the difficulties that were experienced then, the varying views that it was necessary to reconcile, the obstacles that stood in the path of the national union. But all these gaps were finally bridged, and out of the discussions came the political organization that we know today as the Dominion of Canada.

Many things have happened since 1867. Canada has prospered and grown, not as rapidly, perhaps, as some of us would wish, but on a solid foundation. Every year new treasures have been revealed to the people. Every year Canada has scored some gain and moved up, step by step, among the nations. Today, thanks to the efforts of the pioneers and to the thrift and industry of those who came after, our country is in a truly enviable position.

No land under the sun has been more favored by Nature. Here one finds the utmost in the riches of forest, field and stream. And we have only begun to discover our possibilities; we have only begun to appreciate the vast natural wealth given to us by the Creator and still awaiting the touch of man.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, it is the same story. There is not a Province in the whole Dominion in which Nature has been neglectful. There is British Columbia, for instance, with her teeming fisheries and her mineral treasures; the prairies, with their wonderful wheat fields, their coal and their oil; old Ontario and Quebec, with vast agricultural areas and rich ore; and the Maritimes, with their fisheries, also, their verdant farm lands, and their great coal deposits—what a picture they present, what a storehouse of varied national wealth!

A great celebration on July 1, 1927, will go far toward bringing to the younger generation some idea of the richness of their heritage and a greater appreciation of the efforts of their forefathers. We have had too little of this sort of thing in Canada, and it is one avenue of national effort in which we can learn something from our cousins across the line. No opportunity is missed in the United States to drive home patriotic lessons and to give impressionable youth an ever increasing pride in the achievements of the country and the men who made it. The sixtieth anniversary of Confederation will provide Canada with a wonderful opportunity, and the Border Cities, along with every other progressive community in the country, should take full advantage of it.—Border Cities Star.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal Winnipeg

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—With a light run of about 80 fresh cattle, and a small carry-over from Tuesday's market, a good clean up of the week's total offering was well in sight at noon yesterday. Prices were practically steady at Tuesday's slight decline on the heavy steers. Butcher steers and heifers and fat cows, good quality, steady to firm.

Export trade quiet. A few heavy steers and stores picked up at $7.25 to $8.

Good enquiry for stockers and feeders, but prices considered a little high, as compared with the finished butcher cattle, and trade rather slow.

Good enquiry for choice stockers and feeders. Good western stock offering. Light heifers, 550 lbs. sold at $4.85. Good feeders, 890 lbs., at $6.25.

Calves easier, $12 to 313 for tops. Grassers, $5.50 to $6.

Hogs, firm, $12.75 off cars, $11.75 f.o.b., with a premium of $2.42 per head for selects.

Lambs choice, $13 tops. Buck lambs, $10.50 to $11. Culled lambs, $9 to $10.

Sheep are steady at $3 to $8 cwt.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 9 (Canadian Press) — Owing to the scarcity of firm bids from foreign buyers, the export trade in grain on the local market yesterday was quiet. There was some demand from exporters for grain in the domestic market which resulted in sales of several loads of American No. 2 hard winter wheat being made at 10 1-2c per bushel over the Chicago September option, and odd lots of No. 3 Canadian western barley were sold at eleven cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, C.I.F. Montreal. The car lot trade was steady and prices were unchanged.

The local and export business in spring wheat grades of flour continued fair and values were steady. A moderate amount of trade was also done in winter wheat flour and prices were unchanged.

The undertone to the market for millfeed was easier owing to the more Liberal offerings from Ontario millers, but prices were unchanged with a fair trade passing. The condition of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was unchanged, business being quiet and the tone steady.

Prices for all grades of fresh and storage eggs were well maintained on a large turnover. The receipts were 3,184 cases.

An easier feeling again prevailed in the butter market owing to indifferent demand from local and foreign buyers. One sale of 500 packages of No. 1 pasteurized creamery was made for export account at 30 1-2c per pound. The receipts were 4,766 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 17,843 boxes.

The receipts of beans were larger, but as the demand was ample to absorb the bulk of the offerings the tone of the market was steady and prices were unchanged with sales of car lots of choice white hand-picked at $2.25 per bushel and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Clearing weather in the Canadian northwest and weakness in the Winnipeg market brought about a sharp reaction in wheat values here yesterday after a firm start. The action was reflected in other grains. Wheat closed weak at a net loss of 5-8 to 1 3-8c; corn was unchanged to 1-4c higher; oats finished unchanged to 7-8c off, and provisions were 12 1-2c down to 10c up.

Initial strength in wheat was chiefly based on higher cables and early reports of unfavorable weather conditions in the northwest. Foreign news also was considered bullish at the outset when it was predicted that the heavy export business which was done over the holidays would continue. Overseas demand, however, showed a falling off, the Canadian rain clouds began to melt away and Winnipeg reported declines in northwest markets. These factors weakened the local market before mid-day and there was no fresh buying in evidence until just before the close. With good weather for a few days, the Canadian harvest will be rushed to completion in a hurry.

Buying against bids brought about the slight recovery toward the finish. Export sales were estimated at around 500,000 bushels in all positions.

Corn displayed independent firmness, but friends of higher prices hampered by the weakness in wheat which cooled the enthusiasm of buyers to a considerable extent sentiment is growing more bullish owing to continued wet weather over the belt, and a forecast of further rain.

Oats were affected by the action of the other grains, but moved within relatively narrow limits.

Scattered commission house buying of lard and a falling off in hog receipts gave provisions a slightly firmer undertone.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 13,000; all steers 10 to 15c higher, spots mostly 25 to 40c higher for week to date; kinds selling under $10 showing most advance; extreme top in load $11.10; 1,471 pound bullocks $11; several loads scaling 1,200 to 1,375 pounds making that price.

Hogs, 15,000; generally strong to 25c higher; very uneven; pigs and light lights weak to 25c lower; heavy butchers and packing sows showing most upturn; top $14.25; choice 210 pound averages up to that price; bulk 210 pounds down $13.75 to $14.20; 220 to 250 pound butchers mostly $13 to $14; bulk 260 to 300 pound averages $12 to $13; few extreme weight butchers down to $11.25; bulk desirable packing sows $10.25 to $11; bulk strong weight slaughter pigs $12.75 to $13.50.

Sheep, 18,000. Fat lambs strong to 25c higher; most sales 15 to 25c higher than Tuesday; bulk westerns $14.50 to $14.90; sheep steady to 25c higher; bulk fat ewes $5.50 to $7.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 1-4.
Sterling cables $4.84 3-4.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

This space occupied by Mr. Burnham's letters is paid for by him.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:

Crookedness and subsequent scandals are not the sole property of any party, political or otherwise. In fact if it were not that men of devious mental make-up work together as confederates, from opposite sides, they could not attain their ends. If you want to make certain of this fact just go and serve a term in parliament. How can we stop this sort of thing? By sending strong, straight, capable and fearless men to parliament. Every time we send a man who is not fearless we send one, no matter how straight he may be, who will be terrified by the wolves of the parties who use the party for their own ends, into keeping quiet. It is useless to send "ladylike" members to fight corruption. It takes a fighter to fight anywhere but mostly so in parliament.

The great bulk of people like to get along on Sunday school texts. It is their daily food. They were not born to fight and hate it. Hence the triumph of the smugglers, the crooks, and the bandits of parliament and elsewhere. There is more plunder to get at Ottawa than anywhere else and these gentry fear no exposure from those who are afraid to expose them.

J. H. BURNHAM.

CAUSES DISCUSSION.

Sir William Arbuthnot Lane, famous surgeon, whose resignation from the British medical Association has raised the right of British physicians to write articles educating the public in health matters. When an article bearing his name, and illustrated with his photograph appeared on restaurant menus the medical association ordered the photograph covered with white paper on every copy of the menu.

The town councillors of Landau-Bavaria, recently tried to impose a tax of 50 marks a year on all bobbed heads, but the Borgomaster asked his colleagues not to make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the world, whatever their private opinions might be, and urged with some passion that a woman's hair was her own. As a result, the proposal was defeated—and the women and hairdressers in Bavaria smiled again.

WATCH YOUR VERB

If you change the tense—that is, the time—of the verb in a sentence, be careful to see that you express the verb correctly. A case in point, and one that illustrates a very common lapse in speech and writing, was noted in the following sentence, taken from a letter in a newspaper:

Any one who reads, as I have, the letters from relatives and friends describing the great work of the American Relief Administration, will have the deepest appreciation of its work."

In this sentence the verb reads" is in the present tense, and the verb have (read)" is in the perfect tense, known also as the present perfect tense. Therefore, it is better to say or write, Any one who reads, as I have read," etc.

It may be held that the word read" is understood," but it is better to express it.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

HIS OWN WIFE'S OWN COOKING

He likes to joke about my cooking,
For husbands have a way of looking
For little faults in cakes and pies;
But women who are really wise
Don't let these little matters fret them,
As husbands will, if wives will let them.

If you would like the truth about it,
Though husbands criticize and doubt it,
If you would like to know just what
They think about a thing or not,
Yes, if you want to see right through them,
Just watch, and don't just listen to them.

Next time the ladies have a dinner
Down at the church, then take the sinner
And see the things he wants to eat;
He'll want your pie, he'll want your meat—
No matter what, no matter who made,
He'll always reach for things that you made.

He likes to talk about my cooking,
But I look, when he isn't looking,
And that's the only way to find
The truth about a husband's mind—

Don't take a man the way he preaches
But judge a man the way he reaches.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

Chopping up beech logs is George Bernard Shaw's nearest approach to a hobby. He repudiates, as is well known, all conventional forms of competitive sport. For exercise he will bicycle slowly from his summer place to the nearest green-grocers shop for the inevitable vegetables which compose his diet. If he is at the seaside he will swim, in a severe, conscientious way, from the shore to the lifeline and back.

But for fun, England's leading playwright likes to take an axe and split up a section of beech log.

"It is purely destructive," he has explained. "It is tearing down, not building up, and so I like it."

There's nothing like that "dimeful" daily,
To make one look on life more gaily.

Smile, Man—it's GOOD to be alive

Forget it!

Forget what? — why, those fancied woes of yours — those imaginary worries, and really unimportant troubles. In short forget yourself, and you've acquired the greatest secret of happiness.

Now the thing about yourself that's most difficult to forget is the first thing you must forget. It's your inside. You simply must be healthy before you can be happy.

And your surest way to health is the habit of the "little daily dimeful" of Kruschen Salts.

The effect of modern city life on you is this: your inside fails to get in the natural way the six vital salts that it must have to enable it to do its job properly. So you get constipated — which is as much as to say, poisoned. And there you are, made miserable for no reason at all.

Kruschen has power to change all this simply because the "little daily dimeful" is a full day's supply of just those six vital mineral salts. As much as will lie on a 10-cent piece every morning, tasteless in your first cup of coffee or tea and the trouble disappears. You're fit and feel it.

More! the direct tonic effect of Kruschen upon your blood-stream gives you the glorious sensation of overflowing vitality that's called for short "that Kruschen feeling!"

The price of a bottle of Kruschen won't break you. Buy one now. Begin the "little daily dimeful" at once, and stick to it. Soon you'll be chirping with the best of us — "It's the little daily dimeful that does it!"

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea
Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

The dose of a dimeful taken every morning is found in practice just the right amount of a most invigorating daily tonic. The medicinal dose for persons suffering from pains of rheumatism, gout, lumbago or sciatica, or habitual constipation, with inactive liver, etc., is half to one teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water before breakfast. Every druggist sells Kruschen. A 75c bottle lasts three months. This works out at half-a-cent a day for health and happiness. Get a bottle at your druggist's to-day and start to-morrow. It's the little daily dimeful that does it!

PRESENT RAILWAY CONDITIONS DO NOT JUSTIFY WAGE INCREASE COUNSELLORS STATE TO BOARD

Railway Rates Remain Same, While Living Costs Are Lower.

SALARY DISPUTE.

Canadian Railways Present Case Before Arbitration and Conciliation Board.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 9 (Canadian Press)—Maintaining that the present cost of living and the rates of pay now in existence as they affect conductors, trainmen and yardmen on the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways do not justify an increase in wages, representatives of both railways yesterday presented their case to Mr. Justice Hugh T. Kelly, of Toronto, and his two colleagues on the board of arbitration and conciliation now attempting to arrive at a settlement in the wage dispute between employees of the two railways and their employers.

The railways point out that the existing rates were established by a board of conciliation in 1921, and that since that time the railways have suffered substantial reductions in passenger and freight rates, and the cost of living has also decreased somewhat. The existing wage scale, they point out further, is the outgrowth of conditions developed during and subsequent to the war.

With regard to the present applicants who, the railways claim, are among the highest paid classes of railway employees in the Canadian service, the joint statement of the companies points out that the application is identical in all respects with those already submitted to and declined by the United States railroads.

"When it is recognized that increases in rates of pay approximating twenty cents an hour have been applied for," the railways submit, "and that the application of the increase of even one cent an hour to all classes of employees on Canadian railroads would mean an amount of $3,672,000 per annum, it will be seen how serious the question is in view of Canadian economic conditions at the present time."

The railways propose to show further that there is no warrant for any increase in the existing rates of pay for the reason that, quite apart from the country's economic condition, the rates of pay at present being received by conductors, trainmen and yardmen are quite as high as they should be, taking into consideration the increases that have been received in recent years, the comparisons in the cost of living, substantial reductions in revenue of the railways per unit of service, and the position of the railways at the present time in regard to the general question of adjustment of freight rates.

The railways fyled a comparison of Canadian and American rates of pay with figures as to changes in the cost of living as shown by official returns.

The population per mile of railways, they pointed out further, is in Canada 222 as compared with 454 in the United States. The gross earnings per capita in Canada being four dollars less than in the United States, while the gross earnings per

BETHANY MAN DIES OF INJURY

Claude Porteous Succumbs as Result of Being Run Over.

BADLY CRUSHED.

BETHANY, Sept. 9.—On Wednesday morning Claude Porteous succumbed to the injuries received when he was fatally crushed beneath a farm tractor he was using to cultivate a piece of fall wheat ground on Friday afternoon last.

It appears he was leaning back to adjust some part of the machine, when he was thrown off, the transmission passing over part of his body, crushing his chest, injuring the spine, and piercing the lungs. Medical aid was called, and all that could be done was done to relieve the sufferer, but without avail.

He had only been on the farm from March, having operated a garage in the village previous to that. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the sorrowing wife, five small children, the aged parents whose only son he was, and the two sisters, Mrs. Ona Thorndyke and Mrs. Edwin Veals.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon from the family residence to Fallis cemetery.

Endeavors For Three Party Conference With Miners and Government.

SHORTEST PATH.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has not ceased his endeavors to bring the mine owners into a three party conference with the miners and governments representatives for ending the coal strike by "the best and shortest path."

Government circles are optimistic that the Chancellor's move may amount to something, and Laborites, such as Ramsay MacDonald, are congratulating the nation upon the prospect of negotiations being reopened.

Some of the miners' leaders, however, believe that the owners are adamant against a national settlement. One of them, who is classified as a moderate, said to The Westminster Gazette's Labor correspondent yesterday, "I don't see a settlement this side of Christmas."

Progress toward the Churchill conference is being held up while the Mine Owners' Association consults its constituents upon the question of resuming negotiations on a national basis.

New Theory Is Advanced As To Cause Of Cancer

NEW YORK, September 8. — Dr. William S. Speaking before the annual convention of the American Academy of Physiotherapy, he expressed the belief that multiple ailments, each sustained by the other, were the basis of all cancer, and that attempts to eradicate one disease were useless.

TWO PETERBORO COUNTY GIRLS WIN PRIZES AT CAMPBELLFORD

Awarded High School Scholarships—Other Winners Announced.

A MAYBEE RALLY.

(Examiner Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 9.—Two Peterborough County girls are winners of Campbellford High School scholarships in the results of the recent Upper School examinations. They are Ferne McCarthy of Keene and Helen Brackenridge of Birdsall's.

The complete list of scholarship winners, as announced by the principal, Mr. E. H. Greig, is as follows:

The Dr. Peake (St. Louis) medal to the student obtaining the highest standing in the Middle School examinations—Miss Marjorie Ackerman.

The I.O.D.E. scholarships, $10 each—In French, Miss Cherry Turner; in English, Miss Helen Brackenridge; in British history, Miss Ferne McCarthy.

The New Classes.

The school year of 1925-26 opened with an enrollment Tuesday of 202 students, of whom 87 are new pupils. The initial attendance is as large as last year, and will be increased during the week as later arrivals register. Many of the students are from outlying villages and rural sections of the district. The excess accommodation provided in the new High School is being called into use as the attendance increases, and will be entirely occupied sooner than was expected if the present growth continues.

Mr. Greig welcomed and introduced at the opening of the term the two new teachers, Miss Mona Hammond and Miss Maizie Wheadon.

WILL BE OPENED BY COMMISSION

New South Wales Parliament Drops From Usual Custom.

NO REASON GIVEN.

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 9—(Canadian Press)—Hon. J. T. Lang, Labor premier of New South Wales announced yesterday that parliament would be opened on September 22 by a commission instead of by the governor, Admiral Sir Dudley Rawson Stratford De Chair. No reason is given for the abandonment of the usual custom.

Following the friction in New South Wales last March between the Labor government and Sir Dudley De Chair over the appointment of members to the legislative council, the second chamber of parliament, it was reported that Premier Lang would ask the Imperial government to recall the governor. This was later denied but the attorney-general of the state submitted a memorandum to Lt. Col. L. C. S. Amery, secretary of state for dominion affairs, proposing that Australians be appointed as state governors in Australia.

The reply made by Lt. Col. Amery was not made public but cables reported that the Imperial government accepted the principle that the matter should be decided by Australian opinion but thought that the opinion should be so strongly in favor of the change that subsequent demand for its reversal would be unlikely to arise. The reply was reported to have added that it was manifest there was at that time the strongest opposition in Australia to the proposal.

When Premier Lang first asked the governor to sanction the appointment of 25 members to the legislative council, which the government was desirious of abolishing, Sir Dudley complied under protest but when Premier Lang's plan to do away with the council proved abortive — some of the newly appointed members disregarding the pledges they had made to the government — Sir Dudley refused to sanction more appointments and a constitutional deadlock resulted.

Girl Provides New Father Must Pay Bigamy Penalty

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(United News.)—Although she had borne two children and had been deserted at the age of 16 by her first husband, Mrs. Anna Roco Stevens must pay the peanlty for providing the children with a new father, by serving a term at the Bedford reformatory for women.

Mrs. Stevens, who is 20, pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy lodged against her because she had married Chester Stevens, a contractor, without divorcing Roco.

Stevens testified against her, declaring he had known nothing of the former marriage.

His wife's request that she be allowed to keep her children in jail while awaiting sentence was denied.

CAVAN NEWS

CAVAN, Sept. 8.—The Ladies' Aid of Cavan United church held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. R. S. Staples on Thursday afternoon.

There were eleven members and two vistors present.

After the devotional part of the meeting came the routine of business. This was followed by a reading, entitled "Contrasts," by Mrs. Staples.

Mrs. James Douglas, Mrs. I. Keegan, Mrs. D. White and Mrs. D. J. Hunter were the committee in charge of the lunch. Mrs. D. J. Hunter invited the Aid to meet at her home in October. That meeting will be the second week in October instead of the first on account of Millbrook fair coming in the first week.

The Rev. J. O. and Mrs. Totten returned from their vacation on Thursday.

Mr. Melville Staples called on friends in Cavan on Wednesday.

Mrs. W. Galloway, Manvers, visited at the home of her brother, F. M. Staples on Wednesday.

Miss Helen Syer returned on Tuesday from a visit with her sister, Mrs. Clegg, in Montreal.

Mrs. Clegg returned with her and will remain for a visit.

Miss Syer went to her school in Otonabee on Tuesday evening.

G. E. Staples went to his school in Lifford, where school opened on Wednesday.

A number of the rural schools will not reopen until Tuesday, September 7th.

A meeting was held in S.S. No. 7 on Thursday evening to revise the voters' list.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Matchett and Archie and Muriel visited friends in Manvers on Sunday.

Mr. Bruce Sharpe, Ida, won first and second prizes on his wheat, both in the sheaf and grain in the bag, at Toronto Exhibition. He won second and third prizes on the same wheat at Ottawa.

This speaks well for Cavan farms and Cavan farmers.

CAVAN, Sept. 7.—The Rev. J. O. Totten was in charge of the services on Cavan circuit Sunday.

In Cavan church on Sunday evening his sermon was appropriate for the Sunday before Labor Day.

Mr. Gordon Reynolds, Toronto, spent the holiday week end with Cavan and Millbrook friends.

Mr. Everett Keegan has been visiting friends at Mount Horeb.

Mrs. Given, formerly of Millbrook, is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Paul.

Mrs. Warriner, Stouffville, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Totten and the Rev. J. O. Totten.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Fisher, Peterborough, spent the week end with Mrs. Fisher's sisters, Mrs. Mulligan and Miss Kelly.

The Misses Alma Perrin and Mildred Smith and Melville Perrin, returned on Sunday from a visit in Toronto.

Mr. W. H. Clegg, Montreal, joined Mrs. Clegg at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Syer, for the holiday week end.

Mr. Richard Matchett sold a Durham calf to G. A. Hearne, Blackwater. The grand sire of this calf was Browndale Champion.

Mr. Claude Porteous, who was seriously injured while working a tractor on his own farm, is still in a very serious condition, but hopes are entertained for his recovery, which was at first thought to be impossible.

Drs. Hamilton and Turner have been in attendance and Dr. Cameron was called for consultation on Sunday.

The heavy rain of Saturday and Sunday has again delayed the completion of the harvest. Many farmers had hoped to finish on Saturday and Monday, but it will be a few days before the grain is fit to draw in.

Give Your Children a Hot Breakfast!

Mother! Don't neglect your children's breakfast. It is the important meal of the day. Coming after the longest fast of the twenty-four hours, it must supply energy quickly. Health authorities recommend hot oats and milk because it is a balanced food, easily digested, that provides energy that "stands by" all morning.

Give your children hot Quaker Oats and milk. Then see how much better they look, how much better they feel.

These appetizing oats furnish the essential food elements for energy and growth. Your children go to school warm and satisfied, ready for the morning's work.

Keep Smiling for Him

There is absolutely no need for you to wear out your nerves and knuckles over a washboard. Change the hard work of washing to just rinsing.

Rinso, the marvelous time and labour saver made by the makers of Lux, takes all the hard work out of wash-day.

Rinso is already granulated and therefore dissolves instantly in hot water.

Clothes soaked for a couple of hours—overnight if you wish—in Rinso suds need no rubbing. Think of it! You just rinse the dirt out.

Don't do another washing without Rinso.

Keep smiling for him.

Made by the makers of Lux.

Rinso

DIRECTIONS

Put some Rinso in a saucepan. Pour boiling water over it to set all its good, cleansing power free. Pour this into the wash-water. Quickly, completely, the tiny granules dissolve into a clean solution.

Use enough to get creamy, lasting suds. Then drop in the clothes. Soak—boil—or use a washing machine as you prefer. Rinso works perfectly any way you like best to wash.

There's nothing like that "dimeful" daily,
To make one look on life more gaily.

Smile, Man—it's GOOD to be alive

Forget it!

Forget what? — why, those fancied woes of yours — those imaginary worries, and really unimportant troubles. In short forget yourself, and you've acquired the greatest secret of happiness.

Now the thing about yourself that's most difficult to forget is the first thing you must forget. It's your inside. You simply must be healthy before you can be happy.

And your surest way to health is the habit of the "little daily dimeful" of Kruschen Salts.

The effect of modern city life on you is this: your inside fails to get in the natural way the six vital salts that it must have to enable it to do its job properly. So you get constipated — which is as much as to say, poisoned. And there you are, made miserable for no reason at all.

Kruschen has power to change all this simply because the "little daily dimeful" is a full day's supply of just those six vital mineral salts. As much as will lie on a 10-cent piece every morning, tasteless in your first cup of coffee or tea and the trouble disappears. You're fit and feel it.

More! the direct tonic effect of Kruschen upon your blood-stream gives you the glorious sensation of overflowing vitality that's called for short "that Kruschen feeling!"

The price of a bottle of Kruschen won't break you. Buy one now. Begin the "little daily dimeful" at once, and stick to it. Soon you'll be chirping with the best of us — "It's the little daily dimeful that does it!"

PRESENT RAILWAY CONDITIONS DO NOT JUSTIFY WAGE INCREASE COUNSELLORS STATE TO BOARD

Railway Rates Remain Same, While Living Costs Are Lower.

SALARY DISPUTE.

Canadian Railways Present Case Before Arbitration and Conciliation Board.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 9 (Canadian Press)—Maintaining that the present cost of living and the rates of pay now in existence as they affect conductors, trainmen and yardmen on the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways do not justify an increase in wages, representatives of both railways yesterday presented their case to Mr. Justice Hugh T. Kelly, of Toronto, and his two colleagues on the board of arbitration and conciliation now attempting to arrive at a settlement in the wage dispute between employees of the two railways and their employers.

The railways point out that the existing rates were established by a board of conciliation in 1921, and that since that time the railways have suffered substantial reductions in passenger and freight rates, and the cost of living has also decreased somewhat. The existing wage scale, they point out further, is the outgrowth of conditions developed during and subsequent to the war.

With regard to the present applicants who, the railways claim, are among the highest paid classes of railway employees in the Canadian service, the joint statement of the companies points out that the application is identical in all respects with those already submitted to and declined by the United States railroads.

"When it is recognized that increases in rates of pay approximating twenty cents an hour have been applied for," the railways submit, "and that the application of the increase of even one cent an hour to all classes of employees on Canadian railroads would mean an amount of $3,672,000 per annum, it will be seen how serious the question is in view of Canadian economic conditions at the present time."

The railways propose to show further that there is no warrant for any increase in the existing rates of pay for the reason that, quite apart from the country's economic condition, the rates of pay at present being received by conductors, trainmen and yardmen are quite as high as they should be, taking into consideration the increases that have been received in recent years, the comparisons in the cost of living, substantial reductions in revenue of the railways per unit of service, and the position of the railways at the present time in regard to the general question of adjustment of freight rates.

The railways fyled a comparison of Canadian and American rates of pay with figures as to changes in the cost of living as shown by official returns.

The population per mile of railways, they pointed out further, is in Canada 222 as compared with 454 in the United States. The gross earnings per capita in Canada being four dollars less than in the United States, while the gross earnings per Claude Porteous Succumbs as Result of Being Run Over.

BADLY CRUSHED.

BETHANY, Sept. 9.—On Wednesday morning Claude Porteous succumbed to the injuries received when he was fatally crushed beneath a farm tractor he was using to cultivate a piece of fall wheat ground on Friday afternoon last.

It appears he was leaning back to adjust some part of the machine, when he was thrown off, the transmission passing over part of his body, crushing his chest, injuring the spine, and piercing the lungs. Medical aid was called, and all that could be done was done to relieve the sufferer, but without avail.

He had only been on the farm from March, having operated a garage in the village previous to that. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the sorrowing wife, five small children, the aged parents whose only son he was, and the two sisters, Mrs. Ona Thorndyke and Mrs. Edwin Veals.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon from the family residence to Fallis cemetery.

SEEKS PARLEY COAL DISPUTE

Endeavors For Three Party Conference With Miners and Government.

SHORTEST PATH.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has not ceased his endeavors to bring the mine owners into a three party conference with the miners and governments representatives for ending the coal strike by "the best and shortest path."

Government circles are optimistic that the Chancellor's move may amount to something, and Laborites, such as Ramsay MacDonald, are congratulating the nation upon the prospect of negotiations being reopened.

Some of the miners' leaders, however, believe that the owners are adamant against a national settlement. One of them, who is classified as a moderate, said to The Westminster Gazette's Labor correspondent yesterday, "I don't see a settlement this side of Christmas."

Progress toward the Churchill conference is being held up while the Mine Owners' Association consults its constituents upon the question of resuming negotiations on a national basis.

New Theory Is Advanced As To Cause Of Cancer

NEW YORK, September 8. — Dr. William S. Bainbridge, cancer and skin disease specialist, yesterday advanced the theory that cancer, contrary to the general belief, is a group of diseases which must be separated before a cure can be effected. Speaking before the annual convention of the American Academy of Physiotherapy, he expressed the belief that multiple ailments, each sustained by the other, were the basis of all cancer, and that attempts to eradicate one disease were useless.

TWO PETERBORO COUNTY GIRLS WIN PRIZES AT CAMPBELLFORD

Awarded High School Scholarships—Other Winners Announced.

A MAYBEE RALLY.

(Examiner Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 9.—Two Peterborough County girls are winners of Campbellford High School scholarships in the results of the recent Upper School examinations. They are Ferne McCarthy of Keene and Helen Brackenridge of Birdsall's.

The complete list of scholarship winners, as announced by the principal, Mr. E. H. Greig, is as follows:

The Dr. Peake (St. Louis) medal to the student obtaining the highest standing in the Middle School examinations—Miss Marjorie Ackerman.

The I.O.D.E. scholarships, $10 each—In French, Miss Cherry Turner; in English, Miss Helen Brackenridge; in British history, Miss Ferne McCarthy.

The New Classes.

The school year of 1925-26 opened with an enrollment Tuesday of 202 students, of whom 87 are new pupils. The initial attendance is as large as last year, and will be increased during the week as later arrivals register. Many of the students are from outlying villages and rural sections of the district. The excess accommodation provided in the new High School is being called into use as the attendance increases, and will be entirely occupied sooner than was expected if the present growth continues.

Mr. Greig welcomed and introduced at the opening of the term the two new teachers, Miss Mona Hammond and Miss Maizie Wheadon.

Maybee Rally To-Night.

A political rally in the interests of M. E. Maybee will be held in the Regent Theatre to-night and will likely be largely attended. The Conservative candidate himself will speak, assisted by A. J. Anderson, K.C., the party's candidate in the Toronto High Park riding, and Mrs. Fallis of Peterborough.

WILL BE OPENED BY COMMISSION

New South Wales Parliament Drops From Usual Custom.

NO REASON GIVEN.

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 9—(Canadian Press)—Hon. J. T. Lang, Labor premier of New South Wales announced yesterday that parliament would be opened on September 22 by a commission instead of by the governor, Admiral Sir Dudley Rawson Stratford De Chair. No reason is given for the abandonment of the usual custom.

Following the friction in New South Wales last March between the Labor government and Sir Dudley De Chair over the appointment of members to the legislative council, the second chamber of parliament, it was reported that Premier Lang would ask the Imperial government to recall the governor. This was later denied but the attorney-general of the state submitted a memorandum to Lt. Col. L. C. S. Amery, secretary of state for dominion affairs, proposing that Australians be appointed as state governors in Australia.

The reply made by Lt. Col. Amery was not made public but cables reported that the Imperial government accepted the principle that the matter should be decided by Australian opinion but thought that the opinion should be so strongly in favor of the change that subsequent demand for its reversal would be unlikely to arise. The reply was reported to have added that it was manifest there was at that time the strongest opposition in Australia to the proposal.

When Premier Lang first asked the governor to sanction the appointment of 25 members to the legislative council, which the government was desirous of abolishing, Sir Dudley complied under protest but when Premier Lang's plan to do away with the council proved abortive — some of the newly appointed members disregarding the pledges they had made to the government — Sir Dudley refused to sanction more appointments and a constitutional deadlock resulted.

Ms. Alfred Devan left Friday for Muskoka owing to the serious illness of her son-in-law, Mr. Ed. Mortimore.

A very serious accident occurred Monday when Peter Scully the little adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis C. Scully received serious injury. The little fellow was raking and in some way the shaft fell down which frightened the horse, causing it to run away and throwing the little fellow off the rake in front and the rake passed over him fracturing his skull and seriously injuring him.

The little fellow is suffering great pain and little hopes are held out for his recovery.

Girl Provides New Father Must Pay Bigamy Penalty

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(United News.)—Although she had borne two children and had been deserted at the age of 16 by her first husband, Mrs. Anna Roco Stevens must pay the peanlty for providing the children with a new father, by serving a term at the Bedford reformatory for women.

Mrs. Stevens, who is 20, pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy lodged against her because she had married Chester Stevens, a contractor, without divorcing Roco.

Stevens testified against her, declaring he had known nothing of the former marriage.

His wife's request that she be allowed to keep her children in jail while awaiting sentence was denied.

CAVAN NEWS

CAVAN, Sept, 8.—The Ladies' Aid of Cavan United church held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. R. S. Staples on Thursday afternoon.

There were eleven members and two vistors present.

After the devotional part of the meeting came the routine of business. This was followed by a reading, entitled "Contrasts," by Mrs. Staples.

Mrs. James Douglas, Mrs. I. Keegan, Mrs. D. White and Mrs. D. J. Hunter were the committee in charge of the lunch. Mrs. D. J. Hunter invited the Aid to meet at her home in October. That meeting will be the second week in October instead of the first on account of Millbrook fair coming in the first week.

The Rev. J. O. and Mrs. Totten returned from their vacation on Thursday.

Mr. Melville Staples called on friends in Cavan on Wednesday.

Mrs. W. Galloway, Manvers, visited at the home of her brother, F. M. Staples on Wednesday.

Miss Helen Syer returned on Tuesday from a visit with her sister, Mrs. Clegg, in Montreal.

Mrs. Clegg returned with her and will remain for a visit.

Miss Syer went to her school in Otonabee on Tuesday evening.

G. E. Staples went to his school in Lifford, where school opened on Wednesday.

A number of the rural schools will not reopen until Tuesday, September 7th.

A meeting was held in S.S. No. 7 on Thursday evening to revise the voters' list.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Matchett and Archie and Muriel visited friends in Manvers on Sunday.

Mr. Bruce Sharpe, Ida, won first and second prizes on his wheat, both in the sheaf and grain in the bag, at Toronto Exhibition. He won second and third prizes on the same wheat at Ottawa.

This speaks well for Cavan farms and Cavan farmers.

CAVAN, Sept. 7.—The Rev. J. O. Totten was in charge of the services on Cavan circuit Sunday.

In Cavan church on Sunday evening his sermon was appropriate for the Sunday before Labor Day.

Mr. Gordon Reynolds, Toronto, spent the holiday week end with Cavan and Millbrook friends.

Mr. Everett Keegan has been visiting friends at Mount Horeb.

Mrs. Given, formerly of Millbrook, is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Paul.

Mrs. Warriner, Stouffville, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Totten and the Rev. J. O. Totten.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Fisher, Peterborough, spent the week end with Mrs. Fisher's sisters, Mrs. Mulligan and Miss Kelly.

The Misses Alma Perrin and Mildred Smith and Melville Perrin, returned on Sunday from a visit in Toronto.

Mr. W. H. Clegg, Montreal, joined Mrs. Clegg at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Syer, for the holiday week end.

Mr. Richard Matchett sold a Durham calf to G. A. Hearne, Blackwater. The grand sire of this calf was Browndale Champion.

Mr. Claude Porteous, who was seriously injured while working a tractor on his own farm, is still in a very serious condition, but hopes are entertained for his recovery, which was at first thought to be impossible.

Drs. Hamilton and Turner have been in attendance and Dr. Cameron was called for consultation on Sunday.

The heavy rain of Saturday and Sunday has again delayed the completion of the harvest. Many farmers had hoped to finish on Saturday and Monday, but it will be a few days before the grain is fit to draw in.

NICE VACATION.

COOKING A LA CLOCK

Bride—Good heavens, John, dear that pie is burning and I can't take it out for ten minutes yet.—Aussie, Sydney.

Give Your Children a Hot Breakfast!

Mother! Don't neglect your children's breakfast. It is the important meal of the day. Coming after the longest fast of the twenty-four hours, it must supply energy quickly. Health authorities recommend hot oats and milk because it is a balanced food, easily digested, that provides energy that "stands by" all morning.

Give your children hot Quaker Oats and milk. Then see how much better they look, how much better they feel.

These appetizing oats furnish the essential food elements for energy and growth. Your children go to school warm and satisfied, ready for the morning's work.

Keep Smiling for Him

There is absolutely no need for you to wear out your nerves and knuckles over a washboard. Change the hard work of washing to just rinsing.

Rinso, the marvelous time and labour saver made by the makers of Lux, takes all the hard work out of wash-day.

Rinso is already granulated and therefore dissolves instantly in hot water.

Clothes soaked for a couple of hours—overnight if you wish—in Rinso suds need no rubbing. Think of it! You just rinse the dirt out.

Don't do another washing without Rinso.

Keep smiling for him.

Made by the makers of Lux.

Rinso

DIRECTIONS

Put some Rinso in a saucepan. Pour boiling water over it to set all its good, cleansing power free. Pour this into the wash-water. Quickly, completely, the tiny granules dissolve into a clean solution.

Use enough to get creamy, lasting suds. Then drop in the clothes. Soak—boil—or use a washing machine as you prefer. Rinso works perfectly any way you like best to wash.

DOURO ANNUAL FAIR IS SET FOR SEPT. 25

School Fair and Sports To Be Held Day Before.

DOURO, Sept. 9—Douro's second fair takes place on Friday and Saturday, September 24 and 25. The school fair takes place on Friday and some local sports will also take place, but Saturday will be the big day. In view of the success of the fair of 1924 there is no doubt that the 1926 event will be even better. Mr. P. G. Towns, the man who put the "Do" in "Douro" is again in charge, and Mr. Towns is always successful in his undertakings.

KING'S WHARF

KING'S WHARF, Sept. 8.—Threshing has commenced and the grain in general is not nearly as good as last year. Mr. W. C. Herlihey threshed fall wheat which yielded 40 bushels to the acre.

Peas are only a fair crop and buckwheat looked splendid a week ago but now it seems to be blighted and has turned brown and is not going to be any good. Potatoes are also a poor crop.

Miss Hazel O'Neill left for Buffalo, N.Y., where she has secured a position.

QUAKE SWEPT TOWN

Above is a panoramic view of the town and harbor of Horta, capital of the Island of Fayal, in the Azores group, which was swept by a disastrous earthquake, causing twelve deaths and heavy damage, Tuesday. The photograph clearly shows the volcano which, towers over Horta, and which was presumably, indirectly responsible for the shock. The Island of Fayal is 30 miles in circumference. In addition to the town, there are several outlying villages, the total population of the island being abou 20,000. It is situated in a seismic zone, as are the other islands of the group, with the excepion of Flores and Corvo. According to reports a seismic wave coming from the southwest struck the island on its eastern side and ran along in a northerly direction through the channel, which separates Fayal from the island of Pico.

NEW TEACHERS IN 8 SCHOOLS

Three of Last Year's Staffs Are Back in Places in Dummer.

WARSAW NEWS.

WARSAW, Sept. 9.—The following teachers are in the Dummer schools this year: Cottesloe, Miss Blakeley; Ninth line (brick), Miss Raddon; Warsaw, Mr. Blakeley and Miss Quinn; Third line, Miss Edith Calder; Fourth line, Miss Sage; Centre Dummer, Miss Davy; South Dummer (Union), Miss Miller; Clarina, Miss Cross; No. 6, Douro (Union), Miss Madill; Forsyth (Union), Mr. Sloan. Miss Sage, Miss Madill and Miss Quinn were in their schools before.

On Sunday, Sept. 12, Prof. Trivin, of Toronto University, will preach at the services of the United Church, and on Sunday, Sept. 19, Rev. Mr. Gordon, of St. Andrew's Church, Peterboro, will preach morning and evening at Warsaw United Church anniversary services.

Saturday's and Sunday's rains soaked the grain so that even yet what people had hoped to draw in on Saturday is hardly fit.

Apples of the winter varieties seem likely to be scarce. Those whose Duchess trees were due to bear this year have these apples for early fall use. Wild plums seem plentiful. Root crops really look well.

Farmers have been so busy trying to save their harvests that few seem to have gone to the Toronto Exhibition.

On Monday afternoon Mr. V. B. Coleman and children motored from Port Hope, spent a few hours in Warsaw, and returned the same evening.

Joseph Miles went to Toronto for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. MacIlvena were in Toronto last week.

Miss Edith Tucker has returned to her nursing in New York.

Mrs. Sinclair and children returned to Tilsonburg on Friday last.

TORY MEETING AT STANWOOD

Mr. Maybee, Conservative Candidate, Gives Address on Customs Investigation.

SEVERAL SPEAKERS.

STANWOOD, Sept. 9.—A meeting held in Stanwood school house on Tuesday evening, in the interests of M. E. Maybee, the Conservative candidate for the federal elections from Northumberland was well attended by local supporters. Mr. Maybee was present and was assisted by Major Belford, M.P.P. for East Northumberland and Mr. Gordon Sheppard, Toronto.

After a few introductory remarks by the chairman, Mr. Charles Lawrence, Mr. Sheppard addressed the meeting. He stated that Mr. Meighen considered Mr. Maybee a valuable man to the Conservative party. He likened Mr. King to Ananias of Bible history, the greatest prevaricator of all time. The rest of his address dealt with the customs investigation almost entirely. In closing he accused the Progressives of foreign allegiance. "They are not Canadians," he said.

Mr. Maybee, the member for the last five years, was the next speaker. He reviewed the closing days of the last session and again expressed his belief in protection as the only means of salvation for the farmers. He believed that his opponent, Mr. Fraser, had no right to run in the riding as he was a resident of Trenton.

Mr. Maybee and Mr. Sheppard then left to address a meeting at Meyersburg and the crowd were entertained for another hour by Major Belford, who was in good form. The Major's ready wit makes him a very popular speaker with the adherents of all parties. He reviewed the points brought out by the other speakers and stressed certain things which he thought worthy of note.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

BETHANY HEARS CONSERVATIVES

F. W. Bowen and Supporters Address Meeting of Electors There.

ATTENDANCE GOOD.

BETHANY, Sept. 9. — A mass meeting in the interests of the Conservative party was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening. The hall was comfortably filled when Mr. Harry Ward, acting as chairman, called the gathering to order and introduced the speakers of the evening. Mr. Bowen, Conservative candidate for this riding, was the first speaker. He outlined the actions and doings of the Conservative party since the election in November. Mr. A. J. Fallis followed by explaining the loss sustained to the Canadian farmer due to the low tariff. Mr. Joe Harris, member for East York, was the third speaker and he spoke chiefly on the loss Canada endured through the rum-runners or bootleggers as they were better known. All three speakers were listened to with great interest. A bust of Sir John A. McDonald rested on the table behind the speakers as a reminder of the former staunch leaders of the Conservatives. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, Sept. 9.—On Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. H. McGinness, their son and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Howden and two children narrowly escaped serious injuries, when en route by motor to Cobourg to attend the Howden re-union which was being held at that place. The accident occurred near Millbrook, while coasting down a hill; the driver, Mr. McGinness, was unable to see an approaching car a short distance away, owing to the heavy fog. He immediately applied the brakes, with the result that the car slewed from one side to another, and in passing the car he cut off the side of the road and turned gently over in the ditch. Mrs. McGinness and Mr. Howden were found with their heads through the two broken windows of the sedan, the former receiving only a couple of slight cuts on the back of the left hand and a bruised elbow while Mr. Howden had a few scratches. The remainder of the party escaped unhurt.

A team of horses pulled the car to the road again, and although damaged to the extent of broken windows and a bent fender, when replenished with gas, oil and water, it was able to operate under its own power and bring the party nerved up by their experience, to their homes.

Twenty-three members of the Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United Church met in their regular monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon in the Sunday schoolroom. The president, Mrs. Rowland, presided, and, following the opening hymn, the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison.

A letter from Miss Dunoon regarding the sectional convention in connection with the Lindsay Presbyterial was read by Mrs. Rowland, and after some discussion it was decided to hold the same in Trinity United Church on Wednesday afternoon, September 15. Mrs. S. T. Wilson and Mrs. Wm. Henderson were appointed as a recention committee, and Mrs. R. Poast, Mrs. G. Haygarth and Mrs. Bushnell a committee to arrange the menu, as afternoon tea will be served at the close of the session.

Mrs. E. Bradburn was appointed to take charge of the missionary topic in the Sunday school, the first Sunday in October.

It was unanimously decided to order the new study book, "New Days in Old India," to be used in the Society during the coming year.

The Scripture lesson, taken from Hebrews xi., 1-10, was read by Mrs. Haygarth, and was followed by the devotional leaflet, "Faith and Adventure," by Miss Myrtle Weir.

Mrs. H. Lamb gave an interesting paper on "Our First Birthday."

A leaflet introducing the first chapter of the new study book was read by Mrs. Rowland, after which the first part of the chapter, "How to reach our mission fields," was taken by Miss Neill and the second part by Mrs. Henderson.

A season of prayer followed when Mrs. Brandon, Mrs. Poast and Mrs. Rowland were heard, and the meeting was brought to a close.

A social half-hour was enjoyed with Mrs. R. Bradley, Miss N. Rutherford and Mrs. J. Widdis as hostesses.

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's disillusioned father warns him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love scornfully—and forget." This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time. Infamous Lucretia Borgia, greatest power in Rome, seeks his love. Exquisite Adriana Varanese, coveted by Donati, Borgia's kinsman, becomes interested in Juan. This makes deadly enemies of Juan and Donati. So that Adriana will be left alone at their mercy, the Borgias try to poison her father, but Juan thwarts them . . . and taunts Lucretia.

She did not take the flower. He tossed it to the ground beneath, and as he did so, following it with his eyes, saw that in the courtyard Adriana and her father were making their departure. Adriana stepped into a palanquin, followed by her maid, the duke and his servant mounted their horses and moved slowly toward the great outer gates.

Juan, watching them, hardly realized that Lucretia's eyes were upon him. For the first time since childhood he was off his guard before a woman. He did not know, either, that Cesare Borgia stood in the doorway behind them, also noting the departure of the Varanese.

Lucretia, in response to a glance from her brother, turned to leave the balcony. Juan also turned and as she passed him in going toward the door murmured in her ear:

"Your balcony—at midnight?"

She gave no sign that she had heard until she reached the door. Then, looking back, she nodded to him and followed her brother into the room, where Donati impatiently awaited them.

From where he stood Juan could watch them. And he knew, as if he had overheard their words, that they were plotting against the Duke della Veranese. He even suspected the content of a remark of Cesare's—"This Don Juan is no fool. We must strike before he has time to warn the Duke."

And, turning again to the balcony rail, he leaped lightly over it to the courtyard a dozen feet below.

Pedrillo awaited him there. Curtly Juan gave his orders, and would have gone straight to the gate, but at that moment a man ran past, and Juan dragged Pedrillo into the shadow of the palace.

The man, hurring past, called to the palace guard:

"For the Count Donati three armed guardsmen!"

And Juan, turning to Pedrillo, nodded his head understandingly. Donati, had he seen the young Spaniard in that moment, would not have been contemptuous of his strength. For Juan was no longer the languid lover, but the adventurer, the fighter, who would gladly draw his sword for any cause that appealed to him.

Sauntering out from the shadow, he nodded to the palace guard, sauntered across the courtyard and with Pedrillo at his heels went out into the narrow street. Still slowly he walked to the corner. Reaching and rounding it, he broke into a run, taking the direction in which the Duke and Adriana had gone.

CHAPTER V

Only a moment after Don Juan and his servant had left the courtyard of the Borgia palace Donati entered it from the house. Three masked men were awaiting him. Adjusting his own mask he signalled to them to follow him and made his way to the door of tunnel leading under the palace, through which there was a short cut to the street that Varanese and his daughter would be sure to take on their way home.

Lucretia Borgia, coming out on the balcony just above, noted their departure and smiled. It always amused her to see how simple a matter it was to rule Rome, as she and her brother did, if one merely scorned all scruples. Her brother wanted the Varanese fortune, her cousin wanted the Varanese heiress—what, indeed, could be easier then that to dispose of the Duke della Varanese and acquire both daughter and fortune?

Juan had said he would meet her on the balcony at midnight—she could recall his exact words, "Your balcony—at midnight?" he had said, and the tones of his voice and the glance of his eyes had underlined every syllable. She wondered where he was. It must be nearly midnight now.

She let her thoughts run into the channel he had opened before her. "The greatest lover in all Europe"—and he would be here at her side at midnight! Amusing, the way she had caught him philandering with her maid, and the adroitness with which he had slid out of the situation and made it seem that his servant was the guilty man! Truly, her own kind of man, this Don Juan, the Spaniard.

Impatiently she looked down into the courtyard, then turned and surveyed the ballroom. He must be somewhere quite near, for it was nearly 12. Her brother was passing the door leading to the balcony, and she summoned him to her with a glance.

"Our guests have ceased to interest me," she told him. Make my excuses, will you not?"

He lifted his eyebrows in amazement. It was not like her to withdraw her presence at so early an hour.

She turned back to the balcony again and stood looking down at the moonlit garden, then up at the sky, across which tiny clouds were scudding before the spring night's scented winds. She stretched, lazily like a sleek cat. In imagination she was already in the arms of Don Juan. He must come soon now, very soon.

At that moment nothing was further from the mind of Juan than his engagement with Lucretia. In fact, he had quite forgotten her very existence.

It was but a few moments after midnight when Donati and his three assassins, with drawn swords, leaped out from the archway in whose shadow they had been hiding, confronting the man who rode beside the palanquin in which were Adriana and her maid.

To their amazement the man whom they attacked showed neither surprise nor fear. His cape had been swathed about his chin, his hat drawn far down over his eyes. There was no hint that this might not be Varanese, save his obvious zeal to cross swords with them.

Two of the assassins leaped upon

Two of the assassins leaped upon him. The third attacked his servant. The two made no headway, for the man on whom they had fallen so furiously was defending himself more than capably. His sword, flashing in the moonlight, might have been wielded by three men instead of one, so deftly did it parry the murderous thrusts of the weapons of Donati's assassins.

Donati himself, lurking in the shadow of the archway, stared in amazement. Could this be the elderly, rather delicate looking Varanese, this expert swordsman?

Varanese's servant was having difficulty in meeting the onslaught of the third of Donati's men. Suddenly he fell and would have been pierced through by the other's sword in a moment more, but just then Pedrillo, leaping out of the bushes at the side of the road, lifted a heavy broadsword high over his head with both his hands and brought it down on the assassin's head. The man went slithering to the ground.

At that moment also Juan disarmed one of his assailants, sending the man's sword flying over his shoulder to the ground. Instantly Donati took his place opposite Juan.

It was a royal battle that followed, for Donati was as good a swordsman as any man in Rome.

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food; but not until we perfected "ironized yeast" — which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

ROSH HASHONAH NEW YEAR'S DAY KEPT BY JEWS

Observance of Beginning of Year Began Yesterday at Sunset.

GATHER TO PRAY.

Annual Festival Seems To Have Great Hold on Members of Race.

Last night at sunset marked the beginning of another year of the Jewish calendar. According to their calendar to-day marks the first day of the year 5687. Services were held in the synagoge last night, continuing to-day and to-morrow, when the celebration of the new year will draw to a close. Over one hundred members of the race who are located in Peterboro and the surrounding districts, are participating in the observance of the occasion which marks the second biggest day in their religion. To-day in any part of the world, where Jews are gathered together, groups of ten or more can be found worshipping God. Before the meeting can be held in a synagogue there must be at last ten male Jews over the age of thirteen years, gathered together.

The lay observer of Jewish life must find it puzzling to account for the strange hold which the celebration of Rosh Hashonah appears to have on all classes of Jews. It is beyond dispute that the Jewish religion, like other religions in occidental lands, is constantly losing ground as a force in life. The causes for people's estrangement from religion are well known—materialism, ignorance, intellectualism. Yet somehow when the season of Rosh Hashonah comes around, we find Jews who are the rest of the year outside the pale of the synagogue, flocking to attend services in houses of worship. Even men who cannot because of intellectual convictions subscribe to theological tents feel a strange longing to get closer to their people and share for the nonce their mood of religious exaltation. Is it a sin that religion still holds sway over people's minds and hearts, as the professional theologians would say? When religion cannot draw more than a bare "minyan" to the largest orthodox synagogues on the Sabbath it would be living in a fool's paradise to speak of the continuing strength of religion. Rather must it be recognized that the Rosh Hashonah situation is something quite unique, apart from its religious nature. Indeed the designation of "Rosh Hashonah Jews" as contra-distinguished from the ordinary religious Jews, has already become a phrase among observers of Jewish affairs. One might even go so far as to venture the coinage of the term "Rosh Hashonahism" as aptly describing the reaction of the large body of irreligious Jews towards the Rosh Hashonah stimulant.

Upon analyzing the content of the Rosh Hashonah concept we find that it is composed of three elements which persist as separate entities, each exerting a distinct influence on people particularly susceptible to its appeal. We have (a) the chronological or secular element; (b) the religious or superstitious element; and (c) the emotional or contemplative element.

To people with bookkeepers' minds the termination of one period of time bearing a certain serial number, and the beginning of a new period successively numbered, is an event of paramount importance. To them life has meaning and is intelligible only in as far as it lends itself to mathematical arrangement. A person's kinetic and intellectual activity is measured not in units indicating its value, but in units of time. To the rationalist it is obvious that the time-unit is entirely irrelevant. the purpose of measuring the significance of life. But is is convenient and easy. And people seize upon this external code of measurement and ascribe to it all the importance which belongs to life itself. Thus we see them make much ado about the play of numbers. On a certain day the number 5866 or the number 1926 ceases to be used as a register of the process of living and another number comes into force. On that day people must lay off work and check up accounts. The exercise in accounting is accompanied by violent emotional reactions. Non-Jews on their New Year days celebrate and jubilate with much abandon over the change in numerical designation. And Jews, ever ready to mimic their neighbors, have also taken to the practice of celebrating the aspect of change in the New Year holiday It is well known that on the secular New Year, or rather eve, many Jews even out-do the non-Jews in the zeal with which they acclaim the change. But even during the Rosh Hashonah season a large number of Jews imagine that the fundamental significance of the holiday lies in its being a time when the change of years takes place. Rosh Hashonah means to them a time for extending greetings to friends, for reading summaries of the expiring year's events in Jewish life, for changing their Jewish calendars. It means to them just what they think the secular New Year means to the world at large, with the exception that it has certain Jewish characteristics. A New Year day is an important event. On the secular New Year Day they go to a hotel to eat and drink. On Rosh Hashonah it is prescribed that they go to a synagogue to pray.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Peterboro, September 3, 1926.

To the Editor of the Examiner,
Peterboro, Ont.:

Dear Sir: There are many reasons why I am supporting the Liberal candidate, J. J. Duffus, in this election, but the most essential reason is his outstanding knowledge and untiring efforts in connection with agriculture. Proof of this is contained in the following letter which was sent on the morning of October 1st, 1924, when it was pouring down rain.

Oct. 1, 1924.

The President and Directors,
Keene Agricultural Society,
Keene, Ont.

Dear Sirs I regret exceedingly that you have been so unfortunate as to run into such bad weather for your fair. However it is under such conditions, when assistance is needed the most, and for this reason I am attaching herewith a cheque for the sum of $10.00.

I appreciate the fact that it will not help very much; however, every little assists, and I trust before the day is over that your receipts will be more satisfactory than you had anticipated.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) J. J. Duffus.

There is no denying the fact but that if J. J. Duffus is given the support which is justly due him on Sept. 14th ,Peterboro will have possibly the best representative that it has ever sent to Parliament.

Yours very truly.
J. A. DRUMMOND

MAN SUICIDES AT PORT HOPE

Shell Shock Victim Leaves Home For Work and Doesn't Return.

FOUND IN LAKE.

PORT HOPE, Sept. 9. — The body of A. D. Borden, aged 32, was found floating in Lake Ontario off Braund's beach, two and one-half miles west of here, yesterday afternoon.

Borden recently came to Port Hope from Providence, R.I., as traveler for the Nicholson Company here. Yesterday morning he left his home on Ontario street at the usual time, and signified his intention of going to the file plant as usual. When he did not return for lunch investigation revealed that he had not arrived at the plant.

The police were notified, and relatives instituted a search. Mr. and Mrs. William Smith, hunting along the lake shore at Braund's beach, found the man's hat and coat, and later perceived the body floating in the lake about 25 yards from shore. An alarm was given, and the corpse was taken to a local morgue. Coroner A. G. Aldrich stated last night that no inquest would be necessary, as it was clearly suicide. Borden served overseas and was shell-shocked and suffered from the effects of war wounds.

BRITAIN TAKES NO ACTION YET

Will Send Note To Chinese General When Fighting Is Over.

IN STRONG TERMS.

LONDON, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—While the British Government is unlikely to do anything for the moment regarding the Kaiwo incident, in which several British naval officers and seamen were killed or wounded by Chinese troops attached to Wu Pei Fu's forces, it is certain that there will be some sort of diplomatic action as soon as conditions warrant.

In view of the chaotic situation in China, no diplomatic note has been sent to Peking. In fact the unofficial attitude is that such action in the present state of affairs would be rather a compliment to the Peking regime which is supposed to be governing the country.

However, if Wu Pei Fu retires sufficiently to escape the Cantonese Reds who are harassing him, and can again give his attention to such "irresponsible acts of brigandage" as the Kaiwo affair, he will hear from Great Britain in the strongest terms.

Timothy O'Brien, of St. John, Had Reached Age of 102.

ST. JOHN, N.B., September 9. — Canadian Press. — Timothy OBrien died at his home here last night at the age of 102. He was born in Queenstown, Ireland, in 1824, and came to Canada when about 30 years of age. He remembered having heard Daniel O'Connell speak in Ireland. Until the last he retained a remarkably clear memory.

The So-Called "Robb" Budget

WHEN the so-called Robb Budget was being written, the King Government was in a minority of forty-three members in the House of Commons. The Progressives were masters of the situation and dictated their terms to Mackenzie King, who had no power to refuse the Progressive demands, and therefore bartered and compromised with them on the terms of the new Budget.

The only hold Mackenzie King had over the Progressives was the constant threat of a much-dreaded second general election. The Robb Budget was in reality a Forke-Robb budget. Forke got what he could, and Mackenzie King promised to avoid a general election.

Mackenzie King, however, was under other and stronger pressure to provide a popular budget,for he knew—what Forke did not—that a general election was inevitable owing to the Customs Scandal, which was shortly due to break wide open.

Forke saw no reason why, with a popular budget, Mackenzie King should not carry on for four years with Forke as virtual dictator, but Mackenzie King had known of the Customs situation from the year 1923, and in 1924, and again in 1925, he came to know so much that he secured Jacques Bureau's resignation, and appointed him to the Senate with a salary of $4,000 per year for life. He knew that his government was doomed if there were any honest votes among the Progressive members in the House.

Under this intolerable pressure Mackenzie King created two artificial and dishonest issues:—first, the misnamed "Robb" Budget, and second, the so-called "Constitutional Issue," against the general election, which at the time he foresaw was inevitable.

And so the Robb Budget, born of fear of an election on a proven Scandal Issue, and of compromise with Robert Forke, was duly produced in the House, its main appeal being based originally upon a reduction of the customs duties on automobiles coming into Canada.

Mackenzie King, time and again, in the campaign of 1925, announced that he would not further meddle with the Customs tariff until he had consulted the new Tariff Commission, but he broke his pledged word, for he never made even a pretence of consulting the Tariff Board on the automobile tariff, but he took a leap in the dark and he landed in trouble.

Arthur Meighen, leading the Conservative party, at once announced his determined opposition to the tariff cut, which meant the extinction of the Canadian automobile industry, affording a livelihood to a population of one hundred thousand Canadians.

This was the Robb Budget—A TARIFF CUT—CHEAPER AUTOMOBILES—THE DESTRUCTION OF CANADA'S GREATEST INDUSTRY—and though it failed, this is the only and true "Robb" budget before the electorate today.

Most of the automobile manufacturers were not vitally concerned, as their Canadian plants were originally forced to this side of the border because of the tariff imposed upon imports from the United States, and it made very little difference to their profits whether the automobiles sold Canadians were manufactured there or here, or whether their Canadian plants closed or operated.

But the one hundred thousand people whose livelihood depended upon a continuance of the Canadian industry, were heard from immediately, and deputations of workers proceeded to Ottawa, made grave protests to Mackenzie King and his Finance Minister, and after a display of petulant bad temper, Messrs. King and Robb finally gave way, and the "Robb" budget as originally conceived with respect to automobiles disappeared under a screen of smoke.

A rapid shift was made. The tariff cut was allowed for appearance sake to stand, but the difference to the Canadian manufacturing plant was made up by shifts and changes, the most important of which was that the luxury tax was remitted to the manufacturer on automobiles produced in Canada, while it was still collected on imported machines, and also remitted customs duties on raw materials, parts, etc.

The Robb Budget originally provided cheaper automobiles by destroying the greatest of Canadian industrial undertakings, but cheaper automobiles were actually and finally provided not by the tariff cut but by the remission of the luxury and other taxes, and thanks to the Conservative party the automobile industry was saved. The Luxury Taxes were changed into a protective duty.

The people of this country today have cheaper automobiles, and the automobile industry is at the same time carrying on not by reason of the Robb Budget but in spite of his amateur interference with the tariff, originally based upon:

1. Fear of the Progressives.
2. The necessity of providing something to offset the Customs Scandal.
3. The satisfying of Mackenzie King's revenge against large manufacturing constituencies which had rejected his candidates in the election of 1925.

To call the budget of 1926, as finally passed, the "Robb" budget, is a joke. So far as the automobile situation is concerned, it was finally a budget forced upon Mr. Robb after he had created a situation which was a menace to the life of industrial Canada.

Furthermore, the "Robb" budget was scrapped, together with all other legislation of the 1926 session, when Mackenzie King, in his last and unsuccessful clutch at the control of the election machinery of the country, refused to follow British precedent and co-operate with the new Meighen Government, and combined with the Progressives to defeat the Meighen Government, and the electors of Canada will remember that after the Meighen Government was defeated, and after dissolution was granted, the budget of 1926 was saved and put into effect, in spite of Mr. King's refusal to co-operate, only by Orders-in-Council issued by the Meighen Government under the Audit Act.

The other changes in the Robb budget, such as the rearrangement of income taxes, the reduction of the postal rate, etc., can be disposed of in a few words.

Under the five years of the King Government Canada was one of the most onerously taxed countries in the world, and it was high time that some reductions were made. Four good crops, with the savings of the Canadian people, had provided a basis for reduction. It is difficult to understand why credit should be taken by Mackenzie King for a reduction of taxes to the Canadian people because of expanding revenues provided by the Canadian people themselves, chiefly by a sales tax on clothing, etc., 60% higher today than it ever was under the Conservatives.

The Conservative party promises a gradual reduction, and the eventual extinction, of all nuisance taxes, such as stamp taxes on cheques, sales tax, etc.

For four years thirty five million dollars per year were stolen under the King Government by bootleggers, dopesters and smugglers, with the connivance of officials and with the proven collusion of more than one of Mackenzie King's Ministers and ex-Ministers.

There is no reason why the readjustment of the luxury and other taxes on automobiles should not have been initiated three years ago, if the government revenues had not been diverted into the pockets of the bootleggers and smugglers. There is no other reason why all the nuisance taxes should not now be in process of reduction.

If from now on there is honest administration in the revenue-producing departments, and especially in the Customs and Excise Department, and if a firm hand is exercised in regulating the spending departments, Canada can look forward to a steady reduction in taxation. The record of the Borden-Meighen Governments from 1911 to 1921 is before the people. Billions of money were spent during the war, and not one word of proof has ever been offered to show that any Minister in the Borden-Meighen governments was ever derelict in his duty.

The Conservative Party, under Arthur Meighen, stands on its record, and promises the people of Canada HONEST GOVERNMENT, HONEST COLLECTION OF REVENUES, AND HONEST BUDGETS, which will reduce taxation, and at the same time build up industrial Canada, preserve Canadian markets for the Canadian farmer, and produce such a season of prosperity as will yield increased revenues, which will be applied in decreasing taxation.

FASHIONS

NEW YORK, (United Press)—August fur sales are opening simultaneously in stores through out the United States and many people are taking advantage of the reduction in prices at this time. Special groups of fur coats are being sold as low as $145 in several New York shops.

These include gray kid, caracul, seal-dyed coney, pony, natural muskrat and silver muskrat. Medium-priced models including gray caracul trimmed with platinum fox, ermine-dyed coney with squirrel, cocoa-dyed squirrel, Hudson seal trimmed in nutria or black fox, bronze sheared lamb with beige squirrel collar, and mink-dyed marmot sell from $105 to $350.

Sports fur coats are those which seem to be selling best at present These include caracals, racoons, pony, muskrat, leopard, sheared lamb and gray kid. Novelty furs are also much in demand, including giraffe stencilled kid, snowflecked ground squirrel and reversible models.

Most shops are offering at least 20 per cent discount on fur garments purchased at this time. In addition to this offer they agree to give one year free storage. Instalment payments are also offered by some of the moderately priced specialty shops.

Furriers believe that this will be one of the largest fur seasons due to the fact that so many good-looking models are being sold at low prices Mendoza beaver, for instance, is selling as low as $100. Caracul, natural muskrat, northern sealions trimmed with squirrel and Persian paws are selling as low as $150 in some shops. Of course, one can't judge entirely by the prices quoted here since quality has much to do with the cost of a fur garment. There are caracals which sell as high as $1,000. Others sell for $125. Even low-priced garments should give two years' wear, which brings them within the means of everyone.

In buying higher-priced coats one should avoid novelty furs and silhoutettes. Straight-lined coats with medium-sized collars and sleeves are those which can be worn for years without alteration.

A weighing machine, designed for use in shops, is so finely constructed that it will weigh anything from a human hair to an article of 40 pounds.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)
FOR FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1926.

Good luck should attend most endeavors today, according to astrology, which finds certain aspect strongly dominant.

It is a time of real inspiration for poets and composers who are to benefit greatly from public appreciation.

Romance flowers under this sway of the stars which precipitates engagements and marriages. Summer flirtations may become serious pursuits of happiness.

This is read as an auspicious time for women to begin public work, but they are warned that they will encounter many obstacles and disappointments.

If the stars are to be believed women will now go through a period of political negation in which they will receive small consideration, but the next few months will be marked by new organizing efforts.

Again the stars smile on all who seek employment and women should be especially lucky, under this direction of the planets.

This is held as a lucky day for the bestowal of gifts, especially for the presentation of engagement rings.

Mars is in a place that certainly presages many human conflicts on the Earth. Armies in Europe will not be idle, if the signs are read right.

For the United States great constructive enterprises are foretold and the nation is to attain tremendous power, despite enmities from many quarters.

Neptune is in an aspect today which is favorable for oil interests and for the extended use of the by-products of "black gold."

According to the seers, aerial navigation is to be developed to an astonishing point where immense anchored stations in the clouds will expedite travel and even afford hotel accommodations.

Labor is fairly fortunate under this rule which promises employment that is profitable.

Persons whose birthdate it is have a most fortunate year, if the stars are to be believed. They should push all their affairs, for success is strongly indicated.

Children born on this day probably will have prosperous years. Many of these subjects of Vigro enjoy the forests. Profit from dealing in timber or working in wood are easily made.

JUDY SPEAKS OUT

I was furiously angry.

"In the first place, I cannot understand what you mean by 'encouragement of your poor friend.' I am only treating him as I would treat any other man who is interesting and apparently interested in me. I deny absolutely that there is any reason for treating Mr. Meredith any differently.

"It does not necessarily follow that he has intentions which are serious, or that I have designs. I think your intimations are insulting."

"Mr. Meredith, Miss Dean, is a very wealthy man."

"I cannot understand where that concerns me," I answered quickly. "Perhaps, however, it concerns you more. You seem to be afraid that something will interfere with your expedition into the wilds of Africa.

"As far as I am concerned, you need have no fear as I think this expedition would be a great help in bringing John Meredith into his own, especially if accompanied by the right companions."

This made the man in front of me wince, but he quickly recovered himself and said:

"Were you thinking of joining the expedition, Miss Dean, or are you going to Europe as planned?"

"Just at present it looks as though I were going to do neither. However, you know, a woman sometimes changes her mind."

I left him and followed Joan into the house, where she had followed her brother when he turned away.

When I reached the door I turned and said distinctly: "The whole trouble with John is that you and all the other sycophants about him have completely robbed him of his assurance so that he is completely dependent upon all of you. Whether or not this has been done through disinterested motives, remains to be seen.

"I only know this, that his sister told me this very afternoon that while she realized this, she seemed powerless to remove the shackles.

"However, I shall forgive you for what you have said to me if you can help make John Meredith keep on forgetting himself and build up his courage to a point where he will be strong enough in the future to overcome any false and silly idea of self-consciousness and take standing any annoyance or real hurt that might come to him."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU AND MME. D'EPINAY

Rousseau was one of the bravest men that ever lived, for he used himself as material for literary creation and gave to the world in his "Confessions" probably the frankest, most daring portrayal and analysis of human passion that it has.

Rousseau was born of a drunken watchmaker and a minister's daughter. The mother died at childbirth, leaving Jacques to be brought up by his father. His father taught him to read; what he knew to make him one of the most celebrated of philosophers, he learned himself in the school of life. And it was a life of extreme variety, more especially where women were concerned.

His first serious affair was with a lady named Mme. De Warens. Rousseau was twenty-four; Mme. De Warens much older. She saw the evidence of genius in the young man and, fearing for his moral safety if left to his own devices in love adventure, she kindly decided to become his love mentor. It was an odd situation and it fascinated Rousseau to the point of dazed bewilderment, but it had the effect Mme. De Warens expected. It was a lesson gained with the least harm.

Rousseau's connection with Mme. De Warens lasted two years; then he had to make a little journey to recuperate from a chronic illness and the influence of his protectress waned to the extent that a young woman was his companion on the trip. When he returned to the De Waren menage, he found his place usurped by another novice, as his punishment. However, Madame was magnamimous enough to permit Rousseau to share her favors with the other young man. This privilege Rousseau would aot avail himself of, and he broke with her.

The letter that follows was written by Rousseau to another woman who played a role in his life, Mme. d'Epinay. Rousseau was in hard circumstances at the time and Mme. d'Epinay had offered him a villa and an income if he would remain in France near her. Rousseau answered:

". . . Your friendship for me puts an obstacle in the way of my plans which now appears to me more difficult than ever to surmount. But you have consulted your heart rather than the state of your fortune or my inclinations in the arrangement you propose to me. This proposition chills me to the soul. How badly you understand your own interests when you wish to make a valet of a friend and how badly you understand me if you think a consideration of this sort can affect my determination. I am not in any trouble about living or dying . . . I have never yet feared that I should want for bread and if the worst comes to the worst, I know how to go without it. You will understand I do not refuse to listen to what you wish to tell me, if you will remember I am not for sale. . . . As for what regards you personally I feel certain that your heart recognizes the value of friendship—but I have reason to believe that yours is more necessary to me than mine to you, for you have compensations that I am without and that I have renounced forever."

For many years of his life, Rousseau lived with Therese Levasseur, a young woman whom he had met as a servant girl in an inn, although she was not over-attractive and did not approach in mentality his other loves.

CONDITION—Large ankles.

DIAGNOSIS—This error in bodily structure is difficult to remedy, except in cases where the patient is overweight, and can restore a shapely contour by general reduction. It can be remedied, but you must be very persistent. All exercises such as dancing, swimming, and playing tennis, which call for quick foot work, are beneficial. Specific ankle exercises are also helpful.

TREATMENT—This one is particularly good: stand erect with the heels together, and stretch one foot forward as far as it will go. Then using the toe for a pivot, describe a semi-circle with the heel. Alternate. You can do this same exercise while seated, and it is less tiring.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Good health is assured those who wear a coral ornament since it is today's talismanic gem. It is believed to preserve its wearer from contagion. It has also the power of strengthening bodily and mental health. A lowering of the vitality is registered by the paling of the coral.

The diamond is today's natal gem. Its brilliance is said to drive away for those who were born on some anniversary of this day, all fears and wear it and all diseases that threaten them.

Today's flower is the jasmine, potent in creating an atmosphere of peace.

BANDITS CAUGHT AFTER STEALING VALUABLE GEMS

Taken in Corn Field Near Scene of Daring Robbery on Train.

$500,000 IN GEMS.

Hour's Start of Little Service To Three Chicago Robbers.

CHAMPAIGN, Ills., Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Three dapper Chicago bandits who robbed three diamond merchants of half a million dollars worth of jewelry on an Illinois Central train near here last night were captured in a cornfield nearly Buckley, Illinois, this morning.

Timing their movements by the railroad schedule they bound, gagged and locked up three diamond merchants just before the crack New Orleans Limited arrived here from Chicago and stepped to the station platform with the gems. Without hurry, they hailed a taxicab and were driven to adjacent Urbana where they engaged a driver and another car, waited while he persuaded a friend to go along for company and started on their flight toward Chicago, 125 miles away.

So quiet and methodical was their work that others on the Pullman were unaware of the robbery until the train neared Mattoon, 70 miles further south. Then William Davidson, San Francisco, freed himself, Joseph Riskin, New York, and Morris Minsky, also of San Francisco, and the alarm was given.

The bandits entered the drawing room of the three jewelery men twenty minutes out of Champaign and before the train arrived bound the trio, rifled their stock cases, and bolted the compartment door. They did not make thorough search of all the baggage, and missed $50,000 in uncut diamonds in Riskin's satchel.

The three men told the officers they had hidden the jewelry between Loda and Buckly. A search is being conducted for the jewels. Two hundred farmers assisted in the capture, and surrounded the men in a cornfield, finally compelling their surrender. The men had taken refuge in a barn in the field.

VALENTINO WILL LISTS ESTATE

LOS ANGELES, September 9. — Canadian Press. — The Examiner says that Teresa Worner, an aunt of Rudolph Valentino's former wife, Natascha Rambova, will share equally with Alberto and Maria Guglielmi, brother and sister of the dead actor, in his estate.

The estate is valued at $500,000 exclusive of the actor's interests in his last pictures. In addition to a $50,000 life insurance policy, the will lists "Falcon's Lair," Valentino's $175,000 home in the Beverley Hills, his collection of armour and antiques, valued $75,000, his motor cars, his horses and dogs, and private yacht, among the properties of the estate.

Valentino's last will is said to have broken an earlier one made in New York, naming Miss Rambova, or Winfred Hudnut, as she was known in private life, as the sole heiress.

The dancer and former wife of Valentino is said to have been cut off with one dollar in the subsequent will.

Wheat Moves Upward Following Liverpool Lead

CHICAGO, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Wheat to-day took an early swing upward, due more or less to an unexpected upturn in the Liverpool market. Buying, however, soon ran its course and a re-action set in. After starting 1-8 cent to 7-8 cent higher, with September delivery showing the most strength, wheat values here quickly broke to below yesterday's finish. Corn, oats and provisions were firm at the start, corn opening 1-8 cent to 3-8 cent up on reports of cool weather over the belt and unfavorable conditions down state. Coarse grains later showed sympathy with wheat.

NEW ACADEMY OPEN TOMORROW

Kiwanis Club Will Get Proceeds of Opening of Duffus' Building.

FINELY EQUIPPED.

What constitutes one of the most complete recreation academies in the Province will be officially opened by the members of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club tomorrow night.

The owners of the new building, J. J. Duffus Ltd., in placing the building at the disposal of the Kiwanis Club, were actuated by the desire to further the public interest in some good cause. The members of the club with their characteristic vigor have made elaborate arrangements for the entertainment, the proceeds of which will be used to assist the charitable work of this splendid organiaztion.

The building itself should provide considerable interest to those who visit it as the complete arrangements that have been made for the comfort and convenience of the guests are an eye-opener.

Ten of the very best bowling alleys obtainable have been installed in a beautifully finished room. In addition to the alleys there is ample accommodation for the spectators, special seats being provided on a section of the floor that has been raised above the level of the main floor. This ensures an uninterrupted view of any game that is being played.

Ladies using the alleys will be enabled to enter without entering the public corridor as a special door leads direct from an assembly room that has been tastefully fitted up for their convenience.

A large assembly room measuring forty-five feet by thirty-five feet is also available for meetings or dances. The floor on this room is the first of its kind that has been installed in this section of the Province and is guaranteed to make dancing a pleasure.

Check rooms are also in abundance and an up-to-date refreshment booth has been installed where ice cream and soft drinks may be obtained under modern sanitary conditions. A long distance telephone booth is another convenience that will meet with the approval of the patrons.

An abundant supply of light and fresh air has been assured by the numerous windows that have been installed, and in every room special electric exhaust fans will be in operation in order that the air may be always clean and pure.

The best manner in which to get an idea of the outstanding nature of the building is to pay a visit tomorrow night. In addition to viewing it the patrons will be enabled to spend an enjoyable evening. The Peterborough Kiwanis Club enjoys an enviable reputation for putting things over and the public may rest assured that tomorrow night's performance will be of the usual high calibre staged by its members. Lovers of dancing can find no better place to spend the evening, as in addition to the splendid floor, a special orchestra has been engaged. People who have heard this orchestra in other places claim that it wil put pep into every person, young and old alike.

Those devoted to bowling will have the thrill of seeing the best that the Kiwanians can produce, try their skill against the organization that accepts their challenge. In this connection the ladies will feature as a challenge has also been issued to any ladies' team in the city that cares to participate.

This promises to be the biggest community night that has yet been seen in the city so better not miss it.

Rupture Expert Here.

Do you suffer from rupture? If so, your big opportunity has now arrived. Mr. Reavely the noted rupture expert will be at the Empress Hotel for one day only Saturday, September 11th, and will be pleased to give free examination to any sufferer and to demonstrate his famous appliance. This appliance will contract the opening in 10 to 15 days and will cure cases in from three to six months. This appliance is positively demonstrated to you right on your own person without any charge. You do not spend a penny unless you are fully satisfied that it is the right appliance for you. A consultation with Mr. Reavely will cost you nothing. Don't let this opportunity get away from you. Remember the date.

TORONTO HAS MORE PEOPLE

Population Has Increased Over Seven Thousand in Past Year.

ASSESSMENT UP.

TORONTO, September 9. — Canadian Press. — The population of the city of Toronto now stands at 556,691, which shows an increase over the figures for the last fiscal year of 7,263, according to the statistics made public to-day by Chief Assessor George Farley.

The city's total assessment is $913,067,2[illegible] which includes an increase over the last returns of $26,227,432.

The rate of increase in population is stated to compare favorably with that of other years.

MEIGHEN SPEAKS AT KINCARDINE

Speaks in Support of Col. Clark in North Bruce.

A BUSY DAY.

KINCARDINE, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Premier Meighen opened another hard day at Kincardine this morning. A half dozen meetings and about a couple of hundred miles of motoring over wet roads lie ahead of him. He opened in fairly good voice. He spoke highly in support of the Conservative candidature on North Bruce of Col. Hugh Clark. "No constituency in the history of Canada ever sent a man more universally popular," said Mr. Meighen. Mr. Meighen added that he had heard that James Malcolm, the Liberal candidate in North Bruce, was representing himself as a man to be in the King Government if Mr. King became Premier. "That contingency is so remote," Mr. Meighen pursued, "that it's not very much worth talking about."

"There won't be any King Government," Mr. Meighen said further.

MOSES AZIZ OR Why Mr. King Left Ottawa

Now Moses was a bootlegger and he flourished in the land of the Bluenoses. He was also a scribe.

There were at that time in the land of the Bluenoses, three Customs Preventive Officers appointed by the King Government. They were well qualified for the duties the King Government desired them to perform. They could neither read nor write. Better qualified for the purposes of the King Government they could not have been unless they were also deaf, dumb and blind.

Moses Aziz had a kind heart and he assumed their duties. He wrote their letters for them. Yes, wrote their letters! (Reference to evidence of G. P. Stewart before the Lemieux Commission last Friday).

Perchance the three jolly Customs Preventive Officers of the King Government and the kindly Moses Aziz, the Rum Runner, laughed together as Moses wrote their letters.

But Moses did not allow his secretarial duties to interfere with his business. No. He was busily and profitably engaged in smuggling, rum running and bootlegging. Wholesale and retail.

And all this time Moses should have been where the dogs could not bite him.

He had been convicted under the Provincial Prohibition laws of New Brunswick.

He had been convicted under the Customs Act for having 98 gallons of smuggled whiskey in his possession.

He was caught a third time with nine 5-gallon kegs of gin, two kegs of Scotch whiskey, and four cases of whiskey. He was sentenced by a magistrate to a fine of $150.00 and three months in jail. He paid the fine.

Then the friends of Moses Aziz got busy to save him from jail.

The Hon. P. J. Veniot, Liberal Premier of New Brunswick, wrote, under date of August 1st, 1925, to the Minister of Customs and Excise in an effort to save Aziz from jail. The chief reason advanced being in the following language.

"Mr. Aziz is a very well known man in the county and has a wide circle of friends, and he has been a strong worker for the common cause." (Page 1320, Stevens Commission.)

The "common cause," of course, means the cause of the King Government.

And Moses Aziz did not go to jail till the Stevens Committee exposed what had happened.

When Miss Agnes McPhail and some other Progressives found that the King Government knew of this sort of thing and were allowing it, they voted against Mr. King.

Can the electors of West Peterborough imagine a more beautiful example of comic opera administration of public affairs than this spectacle of a notorious smuggler, thrice convicted and still busy at his illegal operations, handling the correspondence of three of Mr. King's preventive officers, paid by the government to stop smuggling?

The evidence against the King Government of wilful neglect of public trust, the consequences of which are felt in all parts of the country, is overwhelming.

Does Mr. Duffus realize what he is asking the people of Peterborough to condone!

No right-thinking Canadian can condone such offences and the people of Peterborough will do their part in condemning it by voting on Sept. 14 for PECK AND A CLEAN ADMINISTRATION OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

—The Conservative Publicity Committee.

OFFICIAL LIED TO SAVE FRIEND

Previous Testimony in Athabasca Investigation Was Untrue, He Admits.

BALLOTS MARKED.

FORT SASKATCHEWAN, Alta., September 9. Canadian Press. — "I lied to save my friend, Mr. Hamel, Postmaster at Lac Labiche."

This was the confession of J. A. Simoneau, who was deputy returning officer at the Lac Labiche rural poll at the Federal election held in October, 1925, on his second appearance before Mr. Justice Clarke as a witness at the investigation Wednesday morning at Fort Saskatchewan under the Corrupt Practices Inquiries Act, which is now drawing to a close.

Simoneau, in his evidence at Lac Labiche, had brand[illegible] a lie the evidence of Frank Fisher, the poll clerk, that Hamel had secured from him a ballot for one Joe Bessette, who was absent, and had marked it and placed it in the ballot box, and that he had also put in ballots for four or five other absent voters. His own previous evidence Simoneau now confesses to have been perjured. Fisher's evidence, he admitted, was true to the best of his knowledge.

H. M. Jenner, who was Deputy Returning Officer at Frog Lake poll, and J. O. Bilos, Deputy Returning Officer at the Venice poll, near Lac Labiche, brought from Prince Albert Penitentiary to give evidence, confessed to stuffing the ballot boxes at both these polls. The evidence of Bilos also implicated one Jex, enumerator at the Venice poll.

Toronto Wins Final Game of Series From the Bisons

DELORO WINS EASTERN ONTARIO INTERMEDIATE CHAMPIONSHIP BY WHITEWASHING PORT HOPE 8 TO 0

Hope's Pitcher Clipped For Nine Hits and Six Runs.

PLAY GINGER BALL.

Hutching's Throw To Plate in First Feature of Game.

Bob Elliotts smart Deloro team cleaned up the Eastern Ontario honors in the O.B.A.A. intermediate series at Riverside Park yesterday, when they handily walloped Port Hope 8 to 0.

The Deloro crew looked much the better team and their victory was richly deserved, although the margin might not have been so big had Port Hope made a better pitching selection.

Russell, who was sent in to subdue the Smelters, had nothing with which to perform the task and was cuffed for nine hits and seven runs in the first three frames. Brokenshire went to the hill top in the fourth and held the winners to one run for the balance of the game.

Jack Shea, Deloros young right-hander, pitched fine ball, holding Port Hope to seven singles and retiring eight by the strike out route. Shea had speed and a nice hook and outside the third frame, when three singles filled the bases for Port Hope with nobody out, was never seriously threatened.

The Deloro crew played gingery ball in the field, giving Shea great support. Jack, at short stop, handled his chance in sparkling style and Regan played bang up ball at third.

At that starry fielding plays were contributed by Port Hope, Friar and Sleeman each making a sensational one-handed catch, while Hutchings good throw to the plate in the first was a feature.

Both teams had contingents of rooters in the stands, but the Peterboro representation was small.

Deloro got enough runs to win in the first inning. Bond beat out a roller to short and after A. Quinn fanned Jack singled to centre. Boudreaus long single to centre scored Bond and Jack trotted in on Jimmy Quinn's sacrifice fly to right on which Friar made a beautiful catch. Brown singled to centre and Hutchings' fine throw home nipped Boudreau at the plate.

The winners broke the game wide open in the third. Bond beat out a bunt. A Quinn walked and Jack bunted safely, filling the bases. Boudreau fanned but Jimmy Quinn singled to left, scoring Bond and Brown cracked a single through short sending A. Quinn and Jack in. Hughes' double down the left field foul line sent Jimmy Quinn and Brown home. Regan was safe when Russell's throw hit him, but Hughes was out at the plate trying to score on the play, and Shea forced Regan at second.

The last run of the game was scored in the sixth off Brokenshire. With two out Art Quinn doubled to left, stole third and scored on Jacks hit past Weeks.

Port Hope's best chance was in the third. Chalk dropped a single back of second, Sleeman singled to left and Brown, batting for Russell, pasted a single past third, filling the bases. Jack and Jimmy Quinn cleverly caught Chalk off third and after Friar drew a pass, Guy hit into an odd double play. He rolled to Regan who threw Sleeman out at the plate. Brown, who was on second, ran nearly to third and then turned back. Then when Jimmy Quinn's throw went to centre field he tried to make third again and was an easy out on Bond's toss.

Pittsburgh's Recruit Outfielder Knocks Three Doubles and Singles.

NEW YORK. Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—Fighting desperately to remain in the pennant race, Pittsburgh came to life yesterday in her home park and trounced Cincinnati in two games, 6 to 1 and 11 to 0. The double victory brought the champions to within a half game of the second place Reds, and three and a half games from the League-leading St. Louis Cardinals, who were idle yesterday. The Pirates were on a batting rampage. They collected 15 hits in the first game off Donohue and Lucas and 17 singles in the second off Luque, Meeker, Lucas and Nehf. Meadows held the Reds powerless in the first contest, keeping their hits well scattered. Carmen Hill, who came to the Pirates recently from the Indianapolis American Association Club, was master of the situation in the second game, blanking the visitors.

Fred Brickell, Pirate recruit outfielder, won the batting honors of the day with three doubles and three singles.

The Pirates play another double-header to-day with the Chicago Cubs as opponents.

At Boston the Braves divided a double-header with the Giants by winning the second game by 4 to 2 after having dropped the opener, 5 to 1. Boston clinched the season's series from the Giants, 12 victories to nine, with a single game remaining to be played to-day.

The Phillies made it three straight over Brooklyn at Philadelphia by staging a six-run rally in the ninth inning to win by 8 to 4. After Philadelphia had tied the score at 4-all in the last frame, Cy Williams drove out his 14th home run of the year with the bases full. Fred Leach hit for the circuit earlier in the fray.

SLOOP ELEANOR WINS FIRST RACE

Victor in First of Series For the Richardson Cup.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—The sloop Eleanor of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, Toronto, won the first race of the three-race series for the Richardson Cup here yesterday. The Canadian entry, owned by R. S. McLaughlin, Oshawa, Ont., and skippered by Norman Goodzerman, of Toronto, finished 23 seconds ahead of the Fantome of the Chicago Yacht Club.

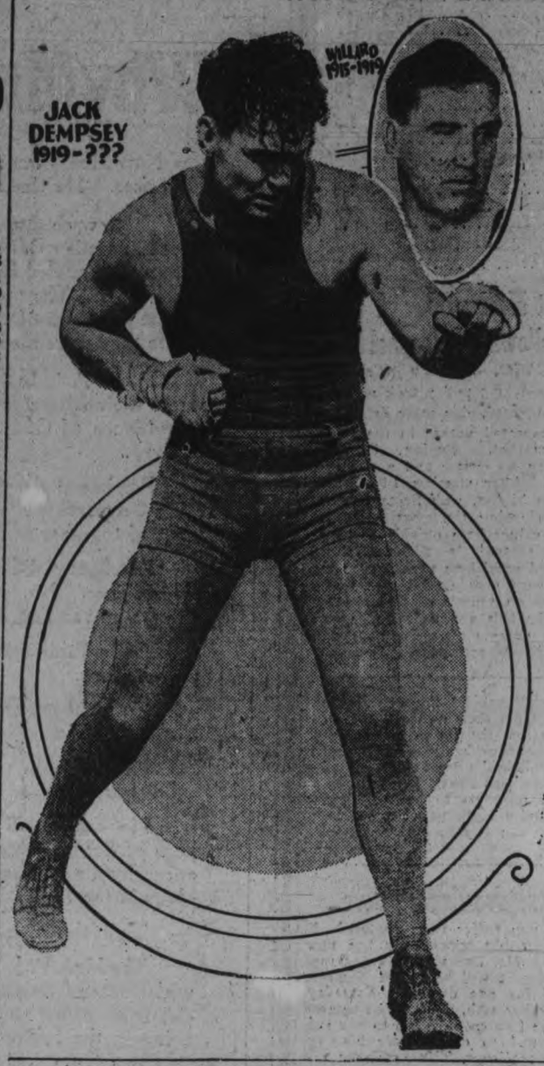
Elyria of the Cleveland Yacht Club, the third entry, representing Lake Erie in the International series, bumped the Eleanor at the starting line and was disqualified.

The two yachts were never far apart over the 18-mile course, swept by an 18-mile wind. Superior windward work during the last six miles gave the Canadians the advantage.

Weather conditions were almost ideal and the Marconi-rigged crafts raced with full spreads of canvass, including ballooners and spinnakers.

The second race of the series will be sailed to-day over an 18-mile windward and leeward course.

WILL DEMPSEY FOLLOW THESE OLD FISTIC KINGS?



Jack Dempsey has ruled the pugilistic parapet longer than any heavyweight champion in history. Jack has been on the throne more than seven years. That's quite a span in any athletic endeavor.

Ranking next to Dempsey is Jack Johnson, the gold-toothed colored boy. Johnson led the parade a little less than seven years, or from December, 1908, to April, 1915.

He Then Retired.

Jim Jeffries perched atop the ladder from 1899, when he whipped the lanky Bob Fitzsimmons, until 1905, when he retired because of lack of formidable challengers, or challengers of any type for that matter.

In 1910 Jeff was enticed out of retirement, however, going down to defeat before Johnson, who two years before had handed Tommy Burns a terrible trouncing. (Burns came into the honor in 1906 by beating Marvin Hart, who had been given Jeff's title after stopping Jack Root).

Of the other heavyweight kings, Jim Corbett held the title five years. Corbett shocked, startled and otherwise upset the pugilistic fraternity by putting the great John L. Sullivan, affectionately referred to as the "Boston Strong Boy," out of commission in 21 rounds at New Orleans in 1892.

In 1897 Corbett met the 'Ruby Robert" Fitzsimmons in their memorable battle at Carson City, Nev. In the fourteenth session Fitz came through with his famous "solar-plexus" punch and Corbett's star went out.

Two years after winning the crown Fitz tackled the young giant, Jim Jeffries, a boilermaker by trade. Jeff was too tough for the frail Fitzsimmons, and in the eleventh round Bob was kayoed—the title, of course, passing to Jeff.

Jeffries met them all for the next few years — Sharkey, Fitz, Corbett (twice), Jack Monroe and so on. He beat every opponent sent against him and then, as mentioned, retired.

Willard In 1915.

Jess Willard, the mastodon from the Kansas plains, reached the top heights at Havana, Cuba, in 1915. Willard stopped the Big Smoke, Jack Johnson, on that occasion. He did it in 26 rounds. From then until the Dempsey brush at Toledo in 1919 Willard strutted around as the champion of the universe.

The famous clash at Toledo is still fresh in the minds of fistic followers. Jack, outweighed by nearly 60 pounds and resembling a midget, pitted against the Willard hulk, all but knocked out the champion in the first round. As it was Dempsey gave Willard such a beating in three sessions Jess was unable (or didn't care) to come out for the fourth round.

What About Dempsey?

Starting with the famous John L. Sullivan we find the heavyweight kings ruled their division in this fashion: Sullivan, two years; Corbett, five; Fitzsimmons, two; Jeffries, six; Burns, two; Johnson, six; Willard, four, and Dempsey, seven—to date.

Now the big question concerning the fanflock is: Will Dempsey continue as emperor of the pugilistic domain, or will he follow Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons and the rest into fisticuffing oblivion?

It will all be answered September 23 when the champion goes into the ring in his 10-round titular battle with Gene Tunney, ex-marine and foremost challenger, for the crown so long held by the "Manassa Mauler."

LEAFS REGISTER HUNDREDTH WIN BUFFALO LOST

Smashes the Bisons' Last Hope for the Pennant.

ALLOWED THREE HITS.

Keys Suffer Seventeenth Defeat at Hands of the Orioles.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—The Leafs registered their hundredth win of the season at Toronto yesterday, defeating Buffalo, 16 to 0. The defeat knocked Buffalo's last hopes of the pennant. The Leafs hit freely, while Sorrell held the Bisons to three hits.

Baltimore made a clean sweep of the series at Reading, taking the final game, 9 to 2. It was the Keys seventeenth straight defeat.

Jersey and Newark divided the double-header at the latter city, the Skeeters copping the first, 5-0, and dropping the night cap 3 to 1.

Rochester and Syracuse were idle.

CLERKS WIN FIRST GAME

Defeat Mill Team in Play-off Game at Campbellford.

PLAY AGAIN FRIDAY.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 9. — The Clerks won the first game of the play-off for the Campbellford Cloth Co. Cup, defeating the Mill, 10 to 6, at the Agricultural Grounds on Tuesday night. The Clerks outhit the Mill boys, 11 to 10, and they made every hit count, Wood, Cook and Ibey coming through with hard smashes at the opportune time, while the mill were cut down with the bases occupied, thirteen being left stranded on the sacks.

It was a real battle all the way and was anybody's game right up to the last out, with plenty of fine fielding by both teams.

One of the largest crowds of the season was keyed up to a high pitch as first one team and then the other took the lead, only to relinquish it.

The second game will be played on Friday night at the Agricultural Grounds, commencing at 5.30 p.m.

RED SOX DEFEAT YANKS IN SECOND GAME OF SERIES

Wiltse Retires Ruth on an Infield Tap With the Bases Full.

CHECK LOSING STREAK.

Cardinal Players Attend the Game For Points on Yankees' Play.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press). — The Boston Red Sox checked their losing streak of 17 straight here yesterday, defeating New York in the second game of the series, 5 to 2. Harold Wiltse allowed but five hits and when the Yankees filled the bases with none out in the third inning he struck out Paschal and Meusel and retired Babe Ruth on an infield tap. Wiltse fanned Ruth twice.

Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals, Catcher Bob O'Farrell and the regular members of the St. Louis National pitching staff, Alexander Haines, Sherdel, Rhem, Keen and Sothoron, attended the game and got pointers on the Yankees.

At Detroit, Cleveland lost a chance to pick up a game on the New York Yankees, falling before the Tigers, 10 to 7. Detroit made 17 hits, driving Shaute out of the box in the fourth inning and falling on Karr until the sixth when Benge started pitching. Manush and Fothergill continued their personal argument for the League's batting leadership, each getting two hits out of five times at bat.

The St. Louis-Chicago game, the only other contest scheduled, was postponed because of rain.

GUS WILSON TO ATTEND CHAMP

Will Assume Role of Jack Kearns as Chief Second.

SECOND REST DAY.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press)—Gus Wilson, a one-time chief second to Georges Carpentier, will assume the role once held by Jack Kearns when the world's heavyweight champion peels off his bathrobe to engage Gene Tunney in defense of the title here two weeks hence.

Gene Normile, Dempsey's business representative, announced yesterday that Jack will have four attendants in his corner, with Wilson in charge. The others will be Jerry Luvadis, his faithful personal attendant; Captain Charles Mabbutt of the U. S. Army, boxing instructor at Camp Holabird, Maryland, and Normile.

The champion spent the second day of his three day layoff resting quietly in and near his camp at Atlantic City, N.J.

Gene Tunney told several hundred sightseers at Stroudsburg yesterday that they would have to come back today to see him do his daily dozen. The challenger did no boxing and did not don his ring togs. He ran, walked, skipped and hopped nine miles in the morning and spent the rest of the day tossing the conversational ball.

Tunney said that the rest did him good and that he is conscious of increasing benefits from occasional recesses in his boxing program.

FAMOUS "BILLS" TO CONTEST FOR TENNIS LAURELS

Play For Sixth Time In International Davis Cup Finals.

WITH FRANCE.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press).—For the sixth time in seven years the United States has placed the chief burden of her battle for international tennis laurels in the hands of the famous "Bills" —William T. Tilden and William M. Johnston.

"Little Bill" Johnston will oppose Rene Lacoste, while "Big Bill" Tilden will face the "Bounding Basque," Jean Borotra, to-day at the Germantown Cricket Club in the opening two singles matches of the challenge round series between the United States and France for the Davis Cup, historic trophy that represents world's team supremacy on the courts.

Johnston's selection yesterday instead of Vincent Richards as Tilden's running mate in the singles came as a surprise.

AUSSIES PLAY TEST GAME WITH SELECTED TEAM

Picked From Batsmen Who Had Played in Former Matches.

THREE DAY CONTEST.

Is Second Last Match of the Antipodeans' English Tour.

SCARBOROUGH, England, Sept. 9 (Canadian Press). — The second last game of the Australians' tour of England was opened yesterday at this Yorkshire summer resort when a team selected by Mr. C. I. Thornton engaged in a three-day contest with the Antipodeans. Mr. Thornton's team was drawn from the various counties and contained for the most part batsmen who have played in Test matches in the past. It was skippered by A. E. R. Gilligan, the Sussex captain.

The English players won the toss and elected to bat first, Sutcliffe of Yorkshire and Jack Hobbs of Surrey going to the wicket. The beginning was not propitious, for Sutcliffe was ill at ease, and when the score stood at 32 runs, gathered chiefly by Hobbs, Sutcliffe's stumps were taken by Clarence Grimmett.

Ernest Tyldesley of Lancashire went into pair with Hobbs and a bright stand was staged until the former succumbed to a catch by Gregory off Ryder, the only wicket taken by Ryder during the day. Holmes was next man up, and he carried on a good batting offensive which lasted until Hobbs was stumped with the score at 154. The downfall of Hobbs at the hands of Oldfield was the first of three casualties for which the Australian wicket-keeper was responsible in this fashion, Vallance Jupp and G. O. Allen also falling victim to his watchfulness. Wilfrid Rhodes, the veteran Yorkshire batsman, was a fourth to ascribe his downfall to Oldfield, Rhodes being caught out behind the wicket.

G. T. S. Stevens was quickly dismissed and Jupp partnered Holmes for a while, until Holmes was retired and Jupp followed him.

Thereafter the English tail-end was unimpressive, and the game finally saw the retirement of Mr. Thornton's eleven with the scoreboard showing 244, all out.

Only a few minutes were left to the Australians, and W. M. Woodfull and W. M. Oldfield went to bat. When each had broken his duck-egg and one extra had been conceded, the first day's play ended. Woodfull and Oldfield will resume batting for the Australians to-day.

"BELOW THE LINE" IS FIFTH PICTURE FOR RIN-TIN-TIN

"Below the Line," the Warner Bros.' Classic of the Screen, which is coming to the Regent to-day for a three day engagement, marks Rin-Tin-Tin's fifth starring production since his film debut. This dog wonder was introducel to the picture world in "Where the North Begins," followed by "Find your Man," "The Lighthouse by the Sea," and "Tracked in the Snow Country."

In "Below the Line" Rinty appears as a snarling, vicious animal who develops into a loyal and courageous friend of the boy who has treated him with kindness. The picture is said to be the most thrilling the dog star has yet had.

June Marlowe and John Harron play the two principal human roles, and the cast includes Pat Hartigan, Victor Potel, Charles (Heinie) Conklin, Gilbert Claytor, Edith Yorke, and Taylor Duncan.

Herman Raymaker who directed Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked in the Snow Country,' handled the megaphone for "Below the Line," which is an original story written and adapted to the screen by Charles A. Logue. John Mescall was the cameraman.

Murderer Confesses, Saying Victim Would Have Driven Him Away.

SURRENDERS.

McCLENNA, Alta., September 9.—Canadian Press. — Octave Lambert, a young unmarried farmer of the little French - Canadian settlement near Grouard Lake, north of Fahler, is dead with a bullet wound through his back, and Joseph Trottier, a middle-aged neighbor, is held here as the self confessed murderer, following the killing, which occurred last Friday, but which was not known until Trottier gave himself up to the police at Donnelly on Tuesday afternoon.

The trouble between the two men began some time ago when a bull belonging to Trottier trespassed on Lambert's farm. Trottier was fined, and according to his own story was convinced that Lambert intended to drive him out of the country.

"If I didn't get him he was going to get me; I had to do it to protect myself," he said.

"Now I come to something which pains me exceedingly; I wish I could get out of saying it and I have come to the place where I almost wish I had gone to Europe the other morning; it would have been much more comfortable. I have, however, IN AGONY reached the conclusion that the late government was well aware for quite a period of time —possibly from March to November— that all was not well in the Customs Department. It is possible that they knew that Bisaillon was the head of the Montreal underworld and chief preventive officer at one and the same time. I AM AFRAID IT IS TRUE THAT IT WAS NOT UNTIL THE STEVENS MOTION WAS MOOTED that the eleven charges which had been laid against Bisaillon were investigated, and I believe it is true that Mr. Duncan was able to secure the arrest of Mr. Bisaillon four days after he was really given authority to do so."

"IN AGONY" Miss McPhail voted against her former friends, the King Government.

ISSUES BEFORE THE ELECTORATE IN PETERBOROUGH

This space is contributed daily by The Examiner for discussing of the election issues by representatives of the candidates of both parties for this riding. The articles are to be kept free from personalities and will be the opinions of their respective authors, not those of The Examiner.

The Conservative Viewpoint

Prepared by the Liberal-Conservative Association of Peterboroungh, on behalf of E. A. Peck, the Conservative candidate.

Perhaps the most vital issue of all in the present campaign is that by their votes next Tuesday the people of Canada will determine whether the conscience of this nation is prepared to condone fraud in public life.

The Customs scandal will not down.

Belittled as it may be by Liberal apologists, thick as may be the smoke screen which supporters of Mackenzie King are attempting to conceal it, this issue continues to command the earnest consideration of every right-thinking man and woman.

Smuggling there has always been. Smuggling perhaps there will always be, but never before has a Canadian government been censured by Parliament itself for permitting a virtual partnership between public officials and smugglers.

When defenders of Mackenzie King try to dismiss this issue as of little importance the electors have only to remember that the story of the debauchery of the Customs service was so appalling that it tore away from the support of the King administration Progressive members who had stood by Mr. King through thick and thin but were too honest to condone fraud and corruption.

The guilt of the King Government was proven to the hilt; the evidence was enough to overthrow the King Government in Parliament and will be enough to crush the King party at the polls.

A favorite argument of Liberal speakers in regard to the Customs scandal is that one party was as bad as the other.

Let us examine that statement.

Everybody knows that the Parliamentary investigation into the administration of the Customs Department was carried on by a committee upon which the King Government could ordinarily command a majority, it included three Liberal lawyers and had as its counsel a Liberal candidate in the last election.

Yet one word of reflection upon previous administrations cannot be found in the whole 3,800 pages of evidence.

Every facility for finding irregularities, if there had been any, during the Conservative regime was available to the committee.

They had the files, they had the records, they had the legal experience needed to bring out the evidence.

Yet the Customs report reflects only upon the Mackenzie King administration.

And when the conditions revealed by that report are realized the description given by the Toronto Globe, "one of the worst political sores in the history of Canada," seems all too mild.

For never in the history of Canada has there been conclusive evidence offered of the smuggling evil being countenanced by Ministers sworn to do their utmost to prevent it, of wrong-doing left unpunished, of connivance given the law breakers.

These charges have been proven, a majority in Parliament has censured the King Government for its record in regard to them; it now remains for the jury of the Canadian people to endorse the finding of Parliament.

If there is a public conscience in Canada—and there is—the verdict of the decent people of this country, Liberal, Conservative, farmer, city dweller alike, next Tuesday will be that the responsibility of administering the affairs of this country cannot be entrusted to those who have been proven miscreants to their trust.

The attitude of the Farmers' Sun, official organ of the U.F.O., is an indication of public opinion. The Sun says: "Because the U. F. O. has always stood four-square for clean and honest government, the U.F.O. vote will not put its seal of sanction upon a ministry which has been responsible for the scandals of the King Government."

Electors of West Peterborough who wish to put an end to plundering and blundering, who wish to restore sense and decency in our politics, who wish to condemn corruption in the public service, will have no hesitation in marking their ballots for E. A. Peck, Conservative candidate.

The Conservative Victory Committee

The Liberal Viewpoint.

Prepared by the Liberal Association of Peterborough on behalf of J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate.

It has always been a favorite Tory trick at election time to draw a red herring, or codfish, across the trail to lure credulous voters from inquiring too closely into the main issues. In 1911 we had "Continentalism" and this bait being in use for the first time was very effective. In 1921 the battle cry was "We won the War," and this might have found a ready ear if the fightful extravagances incidental to the whole matter had not been so well known. At the last election for want of anything new, the old twin bogies of "Blue Ruin" and "Brick for Brick with the Yankees" were dusted off and ragged out again. This year, a real life saver has turned up and the old codfish has printed across its back in large flaming red type, "The Customs Scandal." It is the fervent hope of Mr. Meighen that this will divert the attention of voters from The Robb Budget.

With respect to the matter of smuggling it is well known that so long as there is a tariff wall stretching along the 3,000 miles of frontier between Canada and the United States, just so long will there be smugglers boring it or stepping over it. It is well known, too, that with the enactment of prohibition in the United States smuggling of liquor from this country became one of the major industries, and at the same time nefarious devices of every sort were put into operation to load up empty trucks returning to Canada from smuggling liquor with dutiable goods for Canadian consumers. Note that this practice was in full swing when Mackenzie King became Prime Minister in 1921.

It was a colossal task for any government to deal adequately with a problem involving high-powered cars and thousands of miles of frontier. Hon. J. D. Chaplin, Acting Minister of Customs, has practically admitted that he cannot stop the export of liquor from this country. But the truth is that the Mackenzie King Government itself instituted a thorough inquiry into the whole matter with the object of tackling the problem in dead earnest. It is now known that information was "smuggled" from Inspector Duncan to Hon. H. H. Stevens who, without any regard for honor and thinking only of political advantage, stampeded the whole investigation. As it turned out, the most guilty parties proved to be Conservative appointees. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King has recently stated that "What is needed and what alone will satisfy the people of Canada is a Royal Commission composed not of one judge, but of three judges, who will be required to conduct the inquiry in all parts of Canada where there is suspicion of smuggling or irregularities of any kind, and before whom any and every person whose conduct may be in question shall be brought, and made to answer to any charges that may be laid from any responsible quarter. That and that alone will enable the public to get at the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the importance not alone to the reputation of individuals, to the effective administration of one of the departments of Government contending with a great social menace and evil, to to our honor as well."

The vital question to be asked by voters is whether we may expect improvement along these lines from Mr. King or Mr. Meighen. It may be politic to "assume a virtue if you have it not," but will the Canadian people be deceived by the mock sanctimony of Hon. H. H. Stevens and other prominent Tories who profess to be shocked with holy horror at the Customs revelations.

Hon. W. E. Raney, Progressive, and former Attorney General for Ontario, exposes the sham righteousness of Mr. Meighen and his followers when he reminds electors that it was the first Meighen Government which was responsible for debauching the Customs service of Canada by forcing the association of the Customs officials with the international outlaws who were carrying on the rum running business. Mr. Raney also points out that new regulations introduced by Hon. H. H. Stevens will divert rum running from highways to motor boats, and to use his own words, "the effect of this change will be the loss of millions of dollars of revenue to Canada."

Further evidence that the Meighen Government has assisted smuggling since usurping office last spring is submitted by Rev. Ben Spence, who states that "Recent changes in the Customs regulations of Canada provide a double relaxation of the restrictions on bootlegging and actually facilitate the business of the bootleggers. First they lift the restriction as to the manner in which liquor may be shipped. They permit it to be handled in bags inside the cases. What is that for? It may fairly be assumed that it is to make it easy for the bootlegger to handle. Second, they relax the restriction on shipment, which provided that proof must be given of arrival at the point of destination. Now it is sufficient to provide mere proof of shipment.

Another remarkable phase of the liquor-shipping situation came to light in a wire from Vancouver, stating that a letter of the Deputy Minister of Customs, dated July 3, ordering the stopping of the packing of liquor in bags be stopped, was received there. It is evident that the deputy minister was overruled later on the bagging of the bottles was permitted."

Mr. J. J. Duffus has given his pledged word that if sent to Ottawa he will do everything in his power to solve this whole problem satisfactorily.

"Loyalty!"

Dr. PAQUET, minister in charge of Soldiers Civil Re-establishment in Mr. Meighen's Cabinet, boasted in the House of Commons on Nov. 24th, 1910, that

"I loyally fought the promoters of the War Navy, and British Crown and Empire."

Meighen will wait till War comes

When asked "Do you stand by your Hamilton speech?" Mr. Meighen at Massey Hall, Sept. 8th, 1926, replied: "When the time comes that the circumstances contemplated in the Hamilton speech are before the people of Canada I will discuss that speech."

THE TWO MEIGHENS

MR. MEIGHEN, as an aspirant for the Premiership, in his Hamilton speech, dealt the worst blow ever struck in a British Dominion by a public man against the solidarity of the Empire.

The Winnipeg Tribune (Conservative) commenting on this speech said: "He has gone there (Bagot) to trade with the electors not in money or in merchandise but in Principles. He has extracted from the traditions of the Conservative Party one of the most precious belongings, debased it, revamped it, and now offers it to the electors of Bagot as a gilded trinket to be bartered in exchange for votes."

Is it any wonder that Conservatives the country over admit that "Meighen cannot win"? Is it any wonder that the Conservative Press from coast to coast have censured Mr. Meighen editorially?

Is it possible that the people of Canada can hope for stable government for one who will sacrifice his all for the tinselled trinkets of personal prestige or power?

Loyal Canadians of all parties want to know where Mr. Meighen stands in respect to his utterances at Hamilton in 1925.

Time and again Mr. Meighen has been challenged for a declaration. He refused to answer.

In 1922, when a war with Turkey seemed possible, for a cause few Canadians understood, Mr. Meighen said in Toronto, "When Britain's message came, Canada should have said 'Ready, Aye, Ready!'"

But, prior to the By-Election in Bagot in 1925, Mr. Meighen offered a bribe not acceptable to his own party or to the loyal electors of Quebec, declaring at Hamilton: "Before we put our decision into execution to the extent of dispatching troops to another Country we believe that it would be better to have the consent of the people. Such consent to be obtained by means of a General Election." After a short sojourn in the United States he returned to Bagot where he re-affirmed this anti-Imperial doctrine.

Canada still wants to know. Where does Meighen stand?

"Below the Line," the Warner Bros.' Classic of the Screen, which is coming to the Regent to-day for a three day engagement, marks Rin-Tin-Tin's fifth starring production since his film debut. This dog wonder was introduced to the picture world in "Where the North Begins," followed by "Find your Man," "The Lighthouse by the Sea," and "Tracked in the Snow Country."

In "Below the Line" Rinty appears as a snarling, vicious animal who develops into a loyal and courageous friend of the boy who has treated him with kindness. The picture is said to be the most thrilling the dog star has yet had.

June Marlowe and John Harron play the two principal human roles, and the cast includes Pat Hartigan, Victor Potel, Charles (Heinie) Conklin, Gilbert Claytor, Edith Yorke, and Taylor Duncan.

Herman Raymaker who directed Rin-Tin-Tin in "Tracked in the Snow Country,' handled the megaphone for "Below the Line," which is an original story written and adapted to the screen by Charles A. Logue. John Mescall was the cameraman.

Murderer Confesses, Saying Victim Would Have Driven Him Away.

SURRENDERS.

McCLENNA, Alta., September 9.—Canadian Press. — Octave Lambert, a young unmarried farmer of the little French - Canadian settlement near Grouard Lake, north of Fahler, is dead with a bullet wound through his back, and Joseph Trottier, a middle-aged neighbor, is held here as the self confessed murderer, following the killing, which occurred last Friday, but which was not known until Trottier gave himself up to the police at Donnelly on Tuesday afternoon.

The trouble between the two men began some time ago when a bull belonging to Trottier trespassed on Lambert's farm. Trottier was fined, and according to his own story was convinced that Lambert intended to drive him out of the country.

"If I didn't get him he was going to get me; I had to do it to protect myself," he said.

ISSUES BEFORE THE ELECTORATE IN PETERBOROUGH

This space is contributed daily by The Examiner for discussing of the election issues by representatives of the candidates of both parties for this riding. The articles are to be kept free from personalities and will be the opinions of their respective authors, not those of The Examiner.

The Conservative Viewpoint

Prepared by the Liberal-Conservative Association of Peterborough, on behalf of E. A. Peck, the Conservative candidate.

Perhaps the most vital issue of all in the present campaign is that by their votes next Tuesday the people of Canada will determine whether the conscience of this nation is prepared to condone fraud in public life.

The Customs scandal will not down.

Belittled as it may be by Liberal apologists, thick as may be the smoke screen which supporters of Mackenzie King are attempting to conceal it, this issue continues to command the earnest consideration of every right-thinking man and woman.

Smuggling there has always been. Smuggling perhaps there will always be, but never before has a Canadian government been censured by Parliament itself for permitting a virtual partnership between public officials and smugglers.

When defenders of Mackenzie King try to dismiss this issue as of little importance the electors have only to remember that the story of the debauchery of the Customs service was so appalling that it tore away from the support of the King administration Progressive members who had stood by Mr. King through thick and thin but were too honest to condone fraud and corruption.

The guilt of the King Government was proven to the hilt; the evidence was enough to overthrow the King Government in Parliament and will be enough to crush the King party at the polls.

A favorite argument of Liberal speakers in regard to the Customs scandal is that one party was as bad as the other.

Let us examine that statement.

Everybody knows that the Parliamentary investigation into the administration of the Customs Department was carried on by a committee upon which the King Government could ordinarily command a majority, it included three Liberal lawyers and had as its counsel a Liberal candidate in the last election.

Yet one word of reflection upon previous administrations cannot be found in the whole 3,800 pages of evidence.

Every facility for finding irregularities, if there had been any, during the Conservative regime was available to the committee.

They had the files, they had the records, they had the legal experience needed to bring out the evidence.

Yet the Customs report reflects only upon the Mackenzie King administration.

And when the conditions revealed by that report are realized the description given by the Toronto Globe, "one of the worst political sores in the history of Canada," seems all too mild.

For never in the history of Canada has there been conclusive evidence offered of the smuggling evil being countenanced by Ministers sworn to do their utmost to prevent it, of wrong-doing left unpunished, of connivance given the law breakers.

These charges have been proven, a majority in Parliament has censured the King Government for its record in regard to them; it now remains for the jury of the Canadian people to endorse the finding of Parliament.

If there is a public conscience in Canada—and there is—the verdict of the decent people of this country, Liberal, Conservative, farmer, city dweller alike, next Tuesday will be that the responsibility of administering the affairs of this country cannot be entrusted to those who have been proven miscreants to their trust.

The attitude of the Farmers' Sun, official organ of the U.F.O., is an indication of public opinion. The Sun says: "Because the U. F. O. has always stood four-square for clean and honest government, the U.F.O. vote will not put its seal of sanction upon a ministry which has been responsible for the scandals of the King Government."

Electors of West Peterborough who wish to put an end to plundering and blundering, who wish to restore sense and decency in our politics, who wish to condemn corruption in the public service, will have no hesitation in marking their ballots for E. A. Peck, Conservative candidate.

The Conservative Victory Committee

The Liberal Viewpoint.

Prepared by the Liberal Association of Peterborough on behalf of J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate.

It has always been a favorite Tory trick at election time to draw a red herring, or codfish, across the trail to lure credulous voters from inquiring too closely into the main issues. In 1911 we had "Continentalism" and this bait being in use for the first time was very effective. In 1921 the battle cry was "We won the War," and this might have found a ready ear if the fightful extravagances incidental to the whole matter had not been so well known. At the last election for want of anything new, the old twin bogies of "Blue Ruin" and "Brick for Brick with the Yankees" were dusted off and ragged out again. This year, a real life saver has turned up and the old codfish has printed across its back in large flaming red type, "The Customs Scandal." It is the fervent hope of Mr. Meighen that this will divert the attention of voters from The Robb Budget.

With respect to the matter of smuggling it is well known that so long as there is a tariff wall stretching along the 3,000 miles of frontier between Canada and the United States, just so long will there be smugglers boring it or stepping over it. It is well known, too, that with the enactment of prohibition in the United States smuggling of liquor from this country became one of the major industries, and at the same time nefarious devices of every sort were put into operation to load up empty trucks returning to Canada from smuggling liquor with dutiable goods for Canadian consumers. Note that this practice was in full swing when Mackenzie King became Prime Minister in 1921.

It was a colossal task for any government to deal adequately with a problem involving high-powered cars and thousands of miles of frontier. Hon. J. D. Chaplin, Acting Minister of Customs, has practically admitted that he cannot stop the export of liquor from this country. But the truth is that the Mackenzie King Government itself instituted a thorough inquiry into the whole matter with the object of tackling the problem in dead earnest. It is now known that information was "smuggled" from Inspector Duncan to Hon. H. H. Stevens who, without any regard for honor and thinking only of political advantage, stampeded the whole investigation. As it turned out, the most guilty parties proved to be Conservative appointees. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King has recently stated that "What is needed and what alone will satisfy the people of Canada is a Royal Commission composed not of one judge, but of three judges, who will be required to conduct the inquiry in all parts of Canada where there is suspicion of smuggling or irregularities of any kind, and before whom any and every person whose conduct may be in question shall be brought, and made to answer to any charges that may be laid from any responsible quarter. That and that alone will enable the public to get at the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the importance not alone to the reputation of individuals, to the effective administration of one of the departments of Government contending with a great social menace and evil, to to our honor as well."

The vital question to be asked by voters is whether we may expect improvement along these lines from Mr. King or Mr. Meighen. It may be politic to "assume a virtue if you have it not," but will the Canadian people be deceived by the mock sanctimony of Hon. H. H. Stevens and other prominent Tories who profess to be shocked with holy horror at the Customs revelations.

Hon. W. E. Raney, Progressive, and former Attorney General for Ontario, exposes the sham righteousness of Mr. Meighen and his followers when he reminds electors that it was the first Meighen Government which was responsible for debauching the Customs service of Canada by forcing the association of the Customs officials with the international outlaws who were carrying on the rum running business. Mr. Raney also points out that new regulations introduced by Hon. H. H. Stevens will divert rum running from highways to motor boats, and to use his own words, "the effect of this change will be the loss of millions of dollars of revenue to Canada."

Further evidence that the Meighen Government has assisted smuggling since usurping office last spring is submitted by Rev. Ben Spence, who states that "Recent changes in the Customs regulations of Canada provide a double relaxation of the restrictions on bootlegging and actually facilitate the business of the bootleggers. First they lift the restriction as to the manner in which liquor may be shipped. They permit it to be handled in bags inside the cases. What is that for? It may fairly be assumed that it is to make it easy for the bootlegger to handle. Second, they relax the restriction on shipment, which provided that proof must be given of arrival at the point of destination. Now it is sufficient to provide mere proof of shipment.

Another remarkable phase of the liquor-shipping situation came to light in a wire from Vancouver, stating that a letter of the Deputy Minister of Customs, dated July 3, ordering the stopping of the packing of liquor in bags be stopped, was received there. It is evident that the deputy minister was overruled later on the bagging of the bottles was permitted."

Mr. J. J. Duffus has given his pledged word that if sent to Ottawa he will do everything in his power to solve this whole problem satisfactorily.

Progressive M.P. for South-East Grey, says Mr. King knew what was going on.

(HANSARD, TUESDAY, JUNE 29TH, PAGE 5343.)

"Now I come to something which pains me exceedingly; I wish I could get out of saying it and I have come to the place where I almost wish I had gone to Europe the other morning; it would have been much more comfortable. I have, however, IN AGONY reached the conclusion that the late government was well aware for quite a period of time —possibly from March to November— that all was not well in the Customs Department. It is possible that they knew that Bisaillon was the head of the Montreal underworld and chief preventive officer at one and the same time. I AM AFRAID IT IS TRUE THAT IT WAS NOT UNTIL THE STEVENS MOTION WAS MOOTED that the eleven charges which had been laid against Bisaillon were investigated, and I believe it is true that Mr. Duncan was able to secure the arrest of Mr. Bisaillon four days after he was really given authority to do so."

"IN AGONY" Miss McPhail voted against her former friends, the King Government.

MILLINERY

SECTION

Miss Gillespie and staff have just returned from a visit to the style designers among the wholesale makers of everything that's new in hats.

They made extensive purchases and now have the pattern hats on display and are ready for orders for fall and winter millinery.

Noticeable features are that large hats are coming in again; velvet is to be a much used material, and the reliable velour is still a leader in the ready-to-wear hat.

Shoppers are invited to pay a visit of inspection to our showrooms.

READY-TO-WEAR

SECTION NEWS

Mrs. Hurley has paid an extended visit to the leading style centers, and returns with her stock of made up garments very materially added to.

The new Fall and Winter Coats are the most important item and make a distinctly impressive showing. Prominent among them is the ASCOT COAT, of long wearing, all wool tweeds and plaids and trimmed with fur of evident quality.

Some of the Coats are fur lined throughout, and promise a comfortable winter to the wearer, while at the same time they are unexpectedly light in weight.

Other materials are needle point Marvellas, and all wool Duvetynes.

The Coats are now on display, and an inspection is invited.

GRADY—KENNEDY

The wedding was quietly solemnized at Newman Hall Chapel, Toronto, on Wednesday, September 8, of Ethel R. Kennedy of Toronto, daughter of Mr. J. J. Kenedy, Chicago, and Dr. Fred V. Grady, Sault Ste. Marie. Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Grady of this city. Rev. Father A. Malone officiating.

The bride looked charming in a French frock of flesh and rose georgette with pastel trimmings, white shoes and stockings and white fox fur. She wore a Paris model hat of sand panne velvet with facings of flesh georgette, and a corsage bouquet of ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Gertrude Egan of Toronto, was gowned in a very becoming dress of pale orchid georgette with Alic blue trimmings, over a flesh colored slip, silver shoes and stockings and large black velvet and satin hat. She also wore a cinnamon fox fur and her corsage bouquet was of swetheart roses.

Mr. Jack Grady of Toronto atgeorgette with Alice blue trimings.

Following the nuptial ceremony a dainty breakfast was served at the Carls-Rite Hotel to the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, after which the happy couple left by motor for Niagara Falls en route to New York and other American cities, finaly taking a boat trip from Detroit to the Sault.

The bride's travelling costume was of claret crepe romaine with blonde vestee and collar embroidered in gold, blonde shoes and stockings, small camel felt hat and cork shade coat with large coon collar.

PLEDGES OF PERPETUAL PEACE GIVEN BY GERMANY AND FRANCE AS LEAGUE ENTRY TAKES PLACE

Dramatic Scenes in Assembly as European Reconciliation is Made.

AVE ENOUGH GLORY.

ill Settle Difficulties By ague Methods in Future, Say Spokesmen.

NEVA, Sept. 10 (Canadian .)—Germany was received into eague of Nations to-day, amid of European reconciliation in their fire of enthusiasm been unexampled since the ce. Germany and France, th Foreign Ministers Stresema nd Briand, committed themse to perpetual peace and solemn engaged the honor of their tati henceforth never to draw the s d but to settle disputes by arbitra n or compromise.

Thre things stood out dramatically on his historic day. The first was D Stresemcan's picture of present y Germany as gripped only by lofty ideals, determined to dedicate her energies henceforth to internat al co-operation based on a high i ellectual and moral plane. This spirit, he said, had entered into the very conscience of the German peop .

The second feature was the remarkable oration of M. Briand, whose declaration that Germany and France have had enough glory in the past and need no further demonstration of heroism, and whose proclamation that the guns had been silenced drew tumultuous applause.

The third outstanding incident was the scene of almost delicious jubilation throughout the vast auditorium when Sir George Foster of Canada arose as M. Briand was resuming his speech and, waving high a Union Jack, called for three cheers for France's eminent leader.

Instantly every man and woman in the hall stood and joined in an uproar of applause, which lasted several minutes, and which seemed a spontaneous expression of joy that the two principal protagonists in the Great War had sworn henceforth to abandon the use of arms

Held For Attempted Murder Man Begins Hunger Strike

GUELPH, Sept. 10.—Charles Roberts, held in the county jail on a charge of attempted murder, is reported to have gone on a hunger strike. It is said that for the last two days he has absolutely refused to touch food of any kind, and is continually brooding over his confinement. He was sent to the local jail several months ago, following his committal for trial for wounding. Stanley Burns, a C.N.R. yardman, in the thigh with a revolver bullet.

M'COSKEY TO STAND CHARGE

Will Be Tried For Murdering Turnkey at Portsmouth Penitentiary.

INSANITY PLEA.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—Convict Thomas McCoskey was this afternoon committed for trial on the charge of murdering Guard M. E. Jenkins of the Portsmouth penitentiary on August 28th. He will come up for trial at the supreme court sittings before Mr. Justice Logie on Sept. 21st. Crown Attorney T. J. Rigney conducted the prosecution while Cecil G. Frost, of Lindsay, appointed by the attorney general, defended McCoskey in the preliminary hearing and the questioning which Mr. Frost put to witness seemed to indicate that insanity may be the plea entered.

Only one witness, Convict Davis, could swear that he actually saw McCoskey hitting Guard Jenkins on the head with the crow bar. Another witness, convict Bomphon, stated that a few days before the slaying McCoskey had suggested getting the warden's car and escaping. The suggestion was treated as a joke by the witness.

MOTHER TRIES TO TAKE CHILD

Lad Has Lived With Uncle Ever Since His Father's Death.

ATTEMPT FOILED.

ORANGEVILLE, Sept. 10. — A sensational event occured on Broadway here yesterday afternoon, and for a time the large crowd in town for the monthly fair witnessed a mother trying to recover her child. In 1918 Mrs. James Stewart lost her husband, who was killed overseas. She was left with three children; one, a boy, James, aged three years. A brother of Mrs. Stewart, Armour Robertson, agreed to take James, and did so. Last week while attending the Toronto Exhibition the mother saw her brother and tried to retain him. Failing to do so, she yesterday hired Henry Dickson, Maple Leaf Drive, Toronto, and motored to Damascus in East Luther Township. As the boy was leaving the school at noon she invited him into the car and started for Toronto. Robertson was notified of the boy's going away, and telephoned Chief of Police Marshall of this town, who held Dickson until Robertson arrived.

After much arguing the boy decided to go home with is uncle, and the mother will take legal action to recover her child. A crowd of nearly 500 listened to the controversy.

MINISTERS SUE TORONTO PAPER

Names of Murphy and Elliott Added to List of Plaintiffs.

ALLEGE LIBEL

OTTAWA, Sept. 10 (Canadian Press)—Senator the Hon. Charles Murphy and the Hon. John C. Elliott, former Minister of Labor, are named as two other plaintiffs in the $250,000 action for alleged libel which has been taken on behalf of the Right Hon. W. L. M. King et all against the trustees of the estate of the late John Ross Robertson, publishers of the Toronto Evening Telegram.

The writ which has been filed in the office of the local master of court, shows that in addition to the amount of damages asked for by the three plaintiffs, they also seek to secure an injunction and an interim injunction.

The statements in the Evening Telegram of which complaint is made were in relation to the present federal political campaign.

PANGALOS' ARMY ATTACKS ATHENS HEAVY FIGHTING

Attempts To Defeat Regulars When Ordered To Disband.

RAISE WHITE FLAG.

Leaders Escape When Men Surrender To Superior Forces.

ATHENS, Sept. 10 — Serious fighting with many casualties, took place in the outskirts of the city yesterday between regular troops and two corps of republican guards supporting General Pangalos, the ousted dictator.

These guard corps, which Pangalos had formed to insure his dictatorship, had been ordered disbanded. Colonels Zervas and Dertills, in command of the corps, refused to obey and withdrew them with three armored cars to the outskirts, at the terminus of Kifishia Boulevard.

The Government sent officers to demand their surrender before 11 o'clock in the morning, but the mutineers ignored the ultimatum and advanced along the boulevard, intending to enter and occupy the city.

Government troops took up positions behind fortified barricades in the streets and opened fire on the advancing rebels, and a regular battle followed.

The ammunition in one armored car exploded, destroying the car and killing or wounding a lieutenant and twelve soldiers.

Severe firing on both sides continued and Government airplanes joined in bombing the mutineers. A Chalkis regiment reinforced the Government troops, and about 1 o'clock in the afternoon the mutineers, realizing the futility of their attempt, raised the white flag.

Both Corps Surrender

The two corps, numbering about 1,000 men with officers, surrendered, and both Colonels Zervas and Dertilis were placed under arrest. It was decided to transfer them at night fall to Salamis Arsenal, the Government declaring that it feared they might be lynched by the populace, which displayed indignation against the mutineers.

Further trouble developed when crowds of demonstrators parading the streets seized an armored car and an attempt by the soldiers to recapture it led to a clash, but order was eventually restored.

Premier Kondylis announced that the mutineers had surrendered unconditionally, and that the loss had not been ascretained, but were not severe. The newspapers, however, estimate that 50 mutineers were killed and many wounded. Th casualties among the regulars and citizens are not known.

UNION HOSTILE OVER TELEGRAM

Will Not Countenance an Intolerable Interference Into British Affairs.

REFUSE REPLY.

BOURNEMOUTH, England, Sept 10 (Canadian Press).—Two sensational incidents occurred yesterday at the meeting of the Trade Union Congress, which is sitting here this week. Strong resentment was displayed by the British trade union body at the attempt of M. Tomsky, a Moscow Labor delegate, whom the British Government refused to permit in England, to impose the Soviet standard of criticism on the conduct of the late general strike. The second was the hostile reception by the miners' delegates of the railway representative, J. Bromley, although he was put forward to plead their cause.

The Tomsky incident arose out of the circulation among the delegates of an abusive telegram, signed ostensibly in behalf of the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions by Tomsky, attacking the British Government, which it accused of admitting representatives from Amsterdam and the United States Federation of Labor while denying admission to representatives of the Soviet workers, who were "giving their last penny to help their class brothers in this great fight."

The General Council of the Trade Union Congress, attached to the document a rejoinder, declaring that it would not reply to "this ill-instructed and presumptuous criticism."

J. H. Thomas and other British trade leaders were also attacked in the Soviet telegram. The General Council declared emphatically that it would not "countenance an intolerable interference in British trade union affairs," nor would it permit the position of a fraternal delegate to be "degraded into a tirade against representatives of the British movement."

Still smarting with resentment in the belief that the railwaymen failed to support them when the general strike was called off, the miners' delegates raised a loud outcry which prevented Mr. Bromley from speaking and caused the suspension of the proceedings of the congress for a full hour. On the resumption of the meeting, having made their protest, the miners allowed Bromley to speak.

EX-NATIONALIST LEADER DENIES THAT QUEBEC IS INTERESTED IN PRESERVING PROTECTIVE TARIFF

Would Oppose Any Tariff If It Increased Cost of Living.

LARGE FAMILIES.

Henri Bourassa Discusses Constitutional Question at Political Mass Meeting.

MONTREAL, Quebec, September 10. — Canadian Press. The Conservative claim that Quebec is intensely interested in preserving a protective tariff is utterly wrong, declared Henri Bourassa, the former Nationalist leader, at a mass meeting here yesterday. Quebec was a province of large families and for that reason French Canadians had the best right to oppose any tariff that would effect an increase in the cost of living.

Mr. Bourassa's address was the first he has delivered in Montreal for some time and the meeting was largely attended. He reviewed the economic structure of Canada, emphasized Canada's relations with Great Britain and the rest of the empire, spoke on the "constitutional question," which he designated as the dominant issue in the present campaign, and surveyed the Alberta lands measure,denouncing the Orange influences within the Conservative ranks for their opposition to the "saving clauses" which had been inserted in the Natural Resources bill last session.

With regard to the tariff Mr. Bourassa felt that it was necessary to protect the industries which improved the natural products of the Canadian soil, their capital investments, and Canadian man-power. But, he declared, he had always denounced the "abusive regime which allows speculators to create artificial industries, to over-capitalize them, and to exploit the consumers by selling to them the necessities of life at enhanced prices, thanks to the operation of a policy falsely characterized as "national."

He criticized the two major parties for having toyed with the tariff and found fault with the Conservatives for denouncing the British preference while in opposition, but being inactive with regard to it while in power.

Mr. Bourassa had a great deal to say about the automobile industry, and defended Mr. Robb's budget in this respect. Parliament had tried to correct the system, he said, of United States factories using Canadian centres solely for assembling points, and selling their products to Canadians at a price which surpassed the price of the same motor car in the United States by the exact amount of duty imposed on it by Canada.

Touching on "Mr. Patenaude's theory" that protection would prevent emigration to the United States, Mr. Bourassa urged that it could be argued with equal force that the protectionist regime had created artificial industries which contributed to drawing thousands of workmen to urban centres, and these had become the playthings of economic currents, according to the caprice of industry.

The speaker turned to the matter of imperial affairs and treated the de-

CHARACTER OF JAPANESE LIKE THEIR CLIMATE

Prevailingly Gentle, But Suddenly Stirred To Fierceness, Says Speaker.

AT KIWANIS CLUB.

Rt. Rev. Arthur Lea Tells About Re-awakening of Race and Progress Since.

"Sidelights on Japan" might well have been the title of the address given today at the Kiwanis luncheon by Rt. Rev. Arthur Lea, Bishop of Kyu Shu, Japan.

Japan had an interesting mythology, said the speaker, which had its counterpart of Adam and Eve, in Izanagi and Izanami, two heavenly deities who created the Japanese Archipelago by stirring the bottom of the Pacific, the congealed water becoming land. This Japanese Adam is credited with formulating the principle of secondary place of woman.

Only one thirteenth of Japan is arable land.

Nature in Japan was subject to sudden changes. The weather was often very beautiful but typhoons sometimes came with terrific rapidity—just like the Japanese character—normally, gentle; but when stirred up, unspeakably fierce.

There were no swear words in the Japanese language. The worst epithet one man could apply to another was "fool." The Japanese language was also very polite, the individual extolling the possessions of his hearer, and depreciating his own.

An important event in Japan's wonderful history occurred 350 years ago with the landing of Xavier, the Roman Catholic missionary through whose labors 300,000 were brought within the church. In some way the newly established religion became involved in politics and the missionaries were exiled and thousands of their converts slaughtered. Japan shut her doors for 300 years on the rest of the world. This point was emphasized by the speaker, who said that had Japan not gone to sleep just at the time the Western nations were expanding, the Western portions of North America might now have been occupied entirely by the yellow races.

Japan re-awakened 50 years ago, and made rapid progress. A great factor in Japanese advancement was the rediscovery of the Emperor, who for 350 years had been in seclusion while the power was vested in the Shogun, a military ruler, and some fifty powerful barons.

In recent years, things had gone somewhat against Japan. Contributing factors to prevailing Japanese depression, were the cessation of the alliance with Great Britain, the racial discrimination of the United States in immigration, the great earthquake of 1923, the fall in the currency, the attempt two years ago to assassinate the Crown Prince, the entrance of Bolshevik ideas, and the consciousness that education had failed to put moral stamina into the people.

The thanks of the club were expressed by Kiwanian J. Wearing.

Kiwanian J. A. McKone voiced the general regret of the members at the impending departure of George Henderson, one of the charter members of the Club, and presented him with a pipe, the gift of the club. Mr. Henderson, in his reply, urged the club to go forward, refusing to be satisfied with present attainments, high though these were.

Today's guests were Mrs. Lea and Mrs. J. J. Craig.

D.R.O.'S SHOULD ASSIST PRESS

Chief Electoral Officer Says They Should Issue Results Early.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 9.—(Canadian Press.)— In reply to a request that he should assist the Canadian Press in securing as promptly as possible complete and accurate returns of the vote on Election Day, O. M. Biggar, K.C., the Chief Electoral Officer, said:

"The returns do not reach me till long after polling day and even returning officers only receive them by mail; they may not have them for several days after the poll. Every election officer, and particularly every deputy returning officer and poll clerk, should however do whatever he can to furnish as early in the evening as possible to Canadian Press agencies, newspapers and their accredited representatives, accurate statements of the result of the vote at every polling station.

"On the completion of the count at a polling station, the deputy is required to complete several statements of the result. One of these is transmitted to the returning officer in the ballot box and constitutes the primary official record of the vote at the poll in question, but the deputy retains a duplicate in his own possession. Similar statements are at the same time furnished to each of the candidates' agents at the poll and sent by mail direct to each of the candidates personally. Immediately upon these statements being completed, the information they contain is public property, and every deputy and poll clerk, as well as every candidates' agent, should do what lies in his power to notify the figures to the press and to the candidates' organizations with the least posible delay."

GETTING READY FOR FAIR WEEK

Tents Being Placed, Wires Strung and Whitewashing Done.

GROUNDS CLEAN

Workmen from J. J. Turner & Sons were busily engaged in the erection of tents on the Exhibition Grounds today. Wiremen from the Utilities Commission were putting into position the colored lights that have added to the attractiveness of the illumination of previous years. Work within the buildings is also under way in preparation for the exhibits, which will begin to arrive tomorrow.

The grounds are scrupulously clean and the grass looks fresh and inviting after the recent rains.

The whitening of the fences and walls of the buildings is almost complete and will be quite finished to-

LITTLE ELECTION TALK IN STIRLING

Campaign Very Quiet in Village on Boundary Line.

STIRLING, Sept. 10.—Election talk is now heard since it is settled that there is to be a contest in both ridings which Stirling forms a part of. Messrs. Embury and Trummon held a joint meeting in the Opera House last Saturday night, which was a quiet affair, with the hall comfortably filled. Several from here attended the nomination meetings in Marmora and Belleville on Tuesday and report good meetings in each case. Mr. W. E. Trummon, the late member, is again the Conservative banner-bearer, and Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater for the Liberals are the candidates in South Hastings, and Dr. A. T. Embury, of Bancroft, the late member, with Mr. John Marshall, of Stirling, as his opponent, are fighting for the seat in Hastings-Peterboro. The interest will surely have to increase in this section if a large vote is polled in either riding.

The prize lists of Stirling Agricultural Society's Fall Fair, which is to be held on Sept. 28 and 29, have been mailed this week.

New planking has been placed on the county bridge at the dam. The old covering was badly rotted.

Good progress is being made on George Rosebush's house, also on Mr. Harlow's, both on Mill street east.

Mr. George Heagle, of South Henry street, has exchanged his farm with Mr. John Stiles, near Wellman's Corners. Mr. Stiles intends to become a resident of the village.

The harvesting, although held up by wet weather, is nearly completed, and the threshers are now busy, with a good yield of grain in every case.

Ploughing is now under way, with the intention of a large acreage of fall grains being sown.

The milk supply at the cheese factories keeps up well, although the price of cheese has declined. The local creamery is also doing a good business.

Next week the Bacon Hog Fair for Hastings County will be held here. This will be the second event of the kind to be held here, and a lively interest is being shown by those who are growing and feeding hogs. No doubt on Thursday, Sept. 16, there will be a large attendance of exhibitors as well as onlookers if the weather is favorable.

Mr. Robert Rollins, while visiting his sister, Mrs. George Post, at West Huntingdon, last Saturday, was taken suddenly ill. A doctor was hastily summoned and relief obtained. Since then he has been improving and was brought home on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. D. Bissonnette, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. A. Bissonnette.

Miss Volume and Mrs. Nellie Gallagher and son, Logan, were Friday and Saturday visitors with their cousin, Mrs. M. W. Sine.

Mr. Donald Ross, son of Brigadier-General Dr. A. E. Ross, of Kingston, has left for Kingston, where he will enter the Royal Military College. He has resided here with his aunt, Miss Parker, for a number of years and will be greatly missed by his associates at school and elsewhere.

Miss Dorothy Bailey, after spending her holidays with her sister, Mrs. J. G. Butler, has returned to her home in Toronto.

Mr. Gilbert Keith and two sons, of Detroit, were callers in the village on Tuesday. Mr. Keith's family formerly resided in the 6th concession of Rawdon at Vandervort's Corner. The family removed to Essex County 56 years ago, and this being Mr. Keith's first visit since, he found very few of the acquaintances of his boyhood days left.

Mrs. Mary Scott has returned to her home in New York after spending several weeks with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ford, after a brief visit with friends, returned to their home in Detroit on Sunday.

Miss Geraldine Coreley, R.N., of Toronto, who visited her mother, Mrs. Agnes Coreley, recently, has entered Toronto University to study public health nursing.

PUT IT OVER.

Tomorrow, Saturday, September 11, The Examiner would urge citizens, especially in the business section, to display their flags prominently so that more interest may be stimulated among our rural friends who will be in town tomorrow.

We are all proud of our city, of our Exhibition Board and of the privilege of being part of the Exhibition, our city's enterprise.

The grounds never looked better, the number of exhibits promises to be larger than ever, the grandstand attractions and midway will surpass everything seen here.

So tomorrow put out your flags to impart a gala appearance to the city as the Exhibition draws near.

With favourable weather it will be a joyous and profitable week for Peterboro.

THE ADVANCE POLL.

His Honour Judge Huycke, the revising officer in this riding in connection with the Federal election, is making it very convenient for commercial travellers and railway employees who are permitted, owing to the fact that they will be absent from the city on election day, to vote at the advance poll.

The law requires that such voters must secure a certificate from the revising officer before they can be given a ballot, and Judge Huyke has decided to assist them very materially by being present at the City Council Chambers where the advance poll is being held, thus enabling those entitled to vote to secure their certificates and use their franchise.

The advance poll will be held from 7 to 10 o'clock on Saturday night, and also during the same hours on Monday night.

His Honour has announced that he will be in attendance tomorrow night, and has intimated that should it be necessary he will also attend on Monday.

Those entitled to vote have thus merely to go to the Council Chamber where they can secure the necessary certificate and mark their ballot.

A PLEA FOR THE BACK ROAD.

A writer in The St. Thomas Times-Journal suggests that Ontario motorists are missing some of the most picturesque and beautiful scenery in the Province by failing to get off the main roads.

"Let's quit erecting so many signs on our international speedways and nail a few on the back roads," is his advice, and there is a great deal in it.

How many Peterboro car-owners know the back roads of this district intimately?

How many use their cars to reach some of the many beauty spots that lie a little bit away from the highways?

The truth is that this section of Ontario abounds in scenic beauty, much of which is lost because we stick slavishly to the main roads and thus throw away our chances of seeing Ontario in all its loveliness.

It would richly pay some of our motorists in planning their week-end outings to stray away from the highway and explore the minor roads, where if a little more care may have to be taken in driving there is a splendid recompense in the wealth of scenic charm unfolded to the eye of the visitor.

THE DUTY OF VOTING.

A remark that is being heard much too frequently in Peterboro just now in regard to the election is, "I don't believe I'll bother to vote at all."

Such an attitude is merely shirking the duty of a citizen.

Canada is choosing her Government next Tuesday; vital policies will hinge upon the verdict registered; important issues have to be decided.

The responsibility of choosing Governments and deciding policies and issues rests upon the shoulders of all, and the elector who refuses to recognize that responsibility and who fails to make a conscientious use of his franchise is guilty of neglecting his duty as a citizen.

Compulsory voting is advocated by some people, who point to the success of the Australian experiment.

Yet no citizen worthy of the name should have to be made to discharge his responsibility through fear of a fine.

The verdict to be given Tuesday should be the verdict of the whole people, not merely the decision of a portion of the electorate, and Peterboro voters who are talking about not going to the polls would do well to reconsider their decision.

MAKING SLEEP UNNECESSARY.

To any one who is willing to regard human existence as a mere complex of chemical reactions the suggestion that the therapeutic effects of sleep may be obtained in the future from something still to be discovered that will prove better than sleep should not be particularly startling. If the mind that dwells within that busy laboratory, the human body, can contrive a method which will make unnecessary the suspension or even the slowing down of those laboratory processes from one year's end to another, the mind itself might produce extraordinary results that are now impossible. Then again, it might not.

Irenee du Pont, addressing the American Chemical Society the other day, dwelt upon the possibility that an antidote would be found for the poisons in the human system that induce sleep. That form of relaxation is necessary now for the eradication of those poisons. If sleep should become unnecessary to man his capacity for productive effort and for recreation presumably would be greatly increased.

Setting aside such minor questions as the number of meals that would be required every twenty-four hours by the human mechanism if it never closed down the works, one may reasonably inquire whether the mind that runs the works would be able to stand the strain of constant application to its job. If living is to be all effort, then it should be all joyous effort. The forgetfulness of sleep has proved itself an inestimable blessing to sorrowing humanity. Whoever banishes sleep by producing an approved chemical substitute should be required also to banish human grief, which sleep, that "balm of hurt minds," helps to make endurable.

While inspired chemists search for the magic formula suggested by Mr. du Pont, less heroic persons will fervently say with Sancho Panza: "Blessing on him who invented sleep—the mantle that covers all human thoughts, the food that appeases hunger, the drink that quenches thirst, the fire that warms cold, the cold that moderates heat, and, lastly, the general coin that purchases all things, the balance and weight that equals the shepherd with the king, the simple with the wise."—Chicago News.

GERMANY IN THE LEAGUE.

Yesterday Germany was elected by unanimous vote of the Assembly a member of the League of Nations, and by virtue of a similar vote takes a permanent seat in the Supreme Council of that organization. This means that she is received on an equal footing with the other States into the concert of nations and will enjoy privileges identical with those exercised by Powers of the first order in influencing the decisions and directing the policies of the Society at Geneva. With the announcement of the Assembly's action, the German delegation, which had already been appointed and of which Foreign Minister Stresemann is the head, left for Geneva to take its place in the League Council. Germany's entry into the organization was the inevitable result of the understanding arrived at by Great Britain and France, and of the pressure exercised by them to prevent any failure such as marked the conference in March last.

Europe accordingly has signified its willingness to relegate war to the background in the settlement of disputes and to make the cultivation of peace its great purpose for the future. Further to eliminate the probability of discord among the States, approval was given by the League Assembly to an increase in the number of non-permanent Council seats from six to nine, and to make that measure impossible to rejection it was linked with the election of Germany, despite the protests of a number of delegates. This increase in the number of Council seats is designed to satisfy the ambition of several States which had laid claim to consideration similar to that accorded Germany, and it is fully understood that the nations to which they have virtually been allotted will be permanent members of the Council in fact, if not in name.

The objects of the conference have thus been achieved with completeness and despatch, and the absence of all manifestation of opposition once more demonstrates the advisability of leaving nothing to chance when international issues have to be arranged, but of settling all points of controversy beforehand.

That Europe will gain immediately and substantially from yesterday's action by the League cannot be doubted. A measure of confidence imperatively needed in the work of restoring old conditions and freer intercourse among the nations will at once be felt. The success of the conference means the final consummation of the Locarno agreement, which was hailed as the first promise of real peace in Europe. Germany as a member of the League is specifically pledged to the policies of the Powers hostile to war. She has thrown in her lot with them, and the danger of any too close accord between her and Russia—the only European Power remaining outside the League—is now removed. The prestige of the League, too, has been enhanced, and its continued existence and influence assured. Had the present meeting developed the difficulties and defeat which characterized that of last March it would have been calamitous; it might, indeed, have proved fatal to the League's very existence. The added reputation which the Society of Nations will gain should enable it to enter on a larger measure of usefulness if the rivalry between the Powers can be restrained and the disposition of the great nations to coerce the smaller ones can be kept within bounds. That the League has already given proof that it possesses vast capabilities for good cannot be denied. But it probably will be the generally entertained opinion that it can display that usefulness in no way more advantageous to the world than in safeguarding the interests and welfare of the smaller States from the evils flowing from the intrigues and rivalries of the Great Powers. A freer hand, too, might well be given the League in international affairs, while the nations devote their attention to internal affairs which in every country in Europe are clamoring for adjustment.

Canada's interest in the result at Geneva is not less than that of any of the non-European members, and a feeling of satisfaction will prevail in the Dominion at the happy result of the conference. A despatch from Paris yesterday stated that some of the British Dominions were urging Canada to claim one of the non-permanent seats on the Council. But this is doubtful. The British Dominions will doubtless be content to allow Britain to act for them in a situation which is peculiarly European. When the time arrives that Canada can be of service to the world and herself by acting on behalf of the Empire as a member of the Council of the League she will not hesitate to submit her claim, which will readily be endorsed by the Mother Country.—The Globe.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Only a few more days in which political speakers can be "misquoted" by the press.

Just now it is difficult to hear the real issues discussed on account of the clamour of both parties claiming they are going to win.

The Exhibition and the election should provide plenty of excitement for Peterboro folk next week.

In case you may be doubtful about the dates, the Peterboro Exhibition opens on Monday night next. The election is on Tuesday.

May The Examiner again remind all deputy returning officers that they are expected to help the press secure the election returns as quickly as possible.

Nobody is using last year's election slogan, "Vote as you like—but vote." And yet it seems more necessary than in 1925.

Can the Peterborough Industria Exhibition reach the 40,000 mark? The answer must be given by the people of the city and district.

Mr. Hocken couldn't get a hearing at the nominations in his Toronto division. But he was probably right when he claimed he would have a four figure majority nevertheless.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Sept. 10.— Cattle trade yesterday was very light and mostly in stockers and feeders, for which there is a fair enquiry and demand, though the comparatively high prices at which they are held slows up the outward movement. Four loads of good type western stockers and feeders were shipped in by Mr. C. McCurdy, from Calgary. These were cleared at steady prices prevailing during the week's marketing. Good quality feeders around 900 lbs. sold from $6.20 to $6.50. The lighter stockers from $4.50 to $5.75.

Two or three loads of mixed butcher cattle from Ontario sections comprised the day's delivery of fresh killers, and these were cleared at steady prices, according to quality, with nothing of importance offering.

Calves steady, $12 to $13 for tops. Grassers, $5.50 to $6.

Hogs, firm, $12.75 off cars; $11.75 f.o.b., with a premium of $2.42 per head for selects.

Lambs choice $13 tops. Buck lambs, $10.50to $11. Culled lambs, $9 to $10.

Sheep are steady at $3 to $8 a cwt.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (Canadian Press)—All grains averaged higher yesterday on the board of trade, short covering for a house with eastern connections being responsible for liberal buying of wheat which carried that grain up grade. Corn and oats followed wheat, largely because of unfavorable weather conditions. At the finish wheat was up 1 to 1 5-8c; corn had gained 3-8 to 1 5-8c; oats were 1-4 to 3-8c higher, and provisions finished at the same as yesterday's close, to 17 1-2c advance.

Sentiment in wheat was generally bearish. Despite reports of clearing weather in the northwest with prospects of resumption of field work and threshing, the Winnipeg market was firm, which feeling helped to lift values here. Anticipation of a bullish Canadian crop report Saturday was credited as a factor in the northern market. Considerable evening-up for the American report which is due late tomorrow, is expected in the local market.

Wheat in all positions was in demand for export, the seaboard reporting close to 1,000,000 bushels, taken, while local houses were said to have sold 76,000 bushels to exporters.

Corn was sluggish, much of the day, and was a disappointment to friends of higher prices, the outside trade being slow. On the breaks, however, there was a fair demand from commission houses.

There was little activity in oats, which merely followed other grain. A fair demand gave strength to provisions.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10 (Canadian Press)—Cattle, 12,000; fat steers active, 15 to 25c higher; numerous loads light steers and yearlings $11.35 to $11.50; finished heavies $11.25; bulk fed steers $9.50 to $10.50; she stock and bulls very slow; spots unevenly lower; vealers draggy, mostly steady; bulk to packers $13.00 to $13.50; stockers and feeders active, strong.

Hogs, 25,000; generally steady to 15c higher; pigs strong; top $14.25; paid for 180 to 210 pound weights. Most 220 to 260 pound butchers $13.00 to $14.00; 270 to 325 pound butchers $11.75 to $12.90 mostly; bulk better grade packing sows $10.00 to $11.00; lightweights to shippers up to $11.25 and above; shippers took 6,000; estimated holdover 10,000.

Sheep receipts 19,000; fat lambs steady to 25c higher than yesterday; natives $14.50 to packers; sheep closing strong; bulk fat ewes $6.00 to $7.00; feeding lambs strong at $14.00 to $15.00 mostly.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 10 (Canadian Press)—While there was a good demand from English importers for Canadian grain here yesterday, there was little business transacted owing to the fact that the bids were out of line with local exporters views. The bids for Canadian spring wheat were fully 4 1-2c per bushel below cost, and barley three cents per bushel lower.

The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also very quiet, but the tone of the market was steady.

The market for spring wheat grades for flour was without any new feature to note, prices being firm and the local and export business fair. The winter wheat trade was fair and values were unchanged.

Considerable trade was done in all lines of millfeed and the undertone was firm. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats showed some improvement and the feeling was steady.

Under a good demand from all sources, prices for fresh and storage eggs were firmly maintained. The receipts were 2,028 cases.

The undertone to the butter market continued easier owing to the small demand. The receipts were 2,939 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade and values were fractionally lower, the receipts were 7,763 boxes.

The market for beans was steady with a moderate trade passing in car lots of choice white hand-picked at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., September 10.—(Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 1-4.

Sterling cables $4.84 3-4.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"INVITED GUEST."

A correspondent asks whether the term "invited guest" is correct. "It seems to me," she writes, "that when one is a 'guest' one must be 'invited,' otherwise one is not a 'guest' at all. But, of course, I have heard the term, 'unwelcome guest.'"

A "guest" is, according to the dictionary, a person to whom the hospitality of one's home, club, etc., is extended. Necessarily, therefore, a guest must be invited, so the phrase "invited guest" is incorrect.

Some authorities call "invited guest" a vulgarism, but that seems too harsh a term to apply to it. It is better to call it an example of tautology, that is, needless repetition of words.

As for "unwelcome guest," why not say "unwelcome visitor," about which there cannot be any doubt?

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:

For some time there have been protests by veterans, as at Vancouver, B.C., against Mr. Meighen's Hamilton speech promising that Canada should have a war general election before being committed to any share in defence of the Empire. It has been made plain too that Quebec Conservatives do not agree with Mr. Meighen in this respect at all and both The Gazette and The Montreal Star have spoken in the matter. Now, however, The Montreal Star quotes "Le Soleil", a French Nationalist sympathizer, which demands that Mr. Meighen repudiate the rumor circulating in the West to the effect that Mr. Meighen was compelled to give the English-speaking members of his cabinet a straight promise in writing that he would not be bound by his war promises to the Nationalists of Quebec. It will be observed that nobody, not even Mr. Meighen himself, denies that he made the promise, but the expected has happened and loyal Canadians have rebelled at last openly against it while the crafty Nationalists are challenging him to repeat the promise with a repudiation of all rumors to the contrary, in order, no doubt, to place Mr. Meighen wholly in power of the Nationalists in the event of their common victory at the polls. Mr. Meighen is now reaping the reward of his extraordinary act and the result is bound to be that public, especially Conservative confidence, will be so shaken in him that an explosion in parliament will be the outcome if not indeed before that time. With the Empire Conference in London on October 18th and with warnings from both Australia and New Zealand as well as from Great Britain it looks as if Mr. Meighen will suffer the reward of his pledge of the Conservatives of Canada and himself to the separatist policy of the Nationalists and the Reds.

A large number of Conservatives will abstain from voting in the hope that another election in the spring will give them another and a more loyal leader.

THE PARTY

It wasn't long: another year
Had passed, another birthday here,
And Sonny begged, as children do,
To have a party, just a few
Like Dick and Don and Bob and Ben,
Just five or six or eight or ten.
Well, that means candy, cream and cake,
And things to fix and things to make,
As mothers know. So Mother said,
"I tell you what to do instead:
Invite a few nice boys you know
And take them to the picture-show."
Then Sonny hugged her good and hearty,
"Oh, that's much nicer than a party!"
But Mother smiled, for Mother's sly,
And looked at Dad, and winked her eye.
The door-bell rang from two to three,
And she was busy as could be
Locating caps, and tying ties,
But Mother smiled, for Mother's wise.
And then they started off in style,
And there was peace a little while,
But soon outside she heard a yell,
And in they poured, full-tilt, pell-mell,
With "My, we're hungry! Mother, fix
Some sandwiches, and, Mother, mix
Some lemonade!"—and then they played,
And stayed and stayed and stayed and stayed,
And Father laughed, laughed long and hearty,
And said, "This may not be a party,
But as for me, well, I would say
They had the party anyway."

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

LOVE

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Probably the most important crisis in any individual's life is whenre or she falls in love.

This is the most intense experience to which humanity is subject.

It has more to do with the happiness of one's life, more to do with the making or unmaking of one's character than almost anything else.

Most of us do not live in our intelligence, but we live in our emotions. We live by sentiment. And the experience of falling in love stirs the deepest emotions of the human heart.

It is doubtful whether any creative work is ever undertaken unless under the stimulus of this passion. We know that the finest in poetry, in music, and in literature owes to it its inception.

It is more important for a man rightly to pick out the kind of woman whom he is to love than to make any other decision. And it is well known that love plays the most important part in every woman's life.

Love has been responsible for most human happiness and for a great part of human tragedy.

There is no crisis in one's career where he needs to use more judgment and guiding intelligence than in this crisis.

Love is one of those inspirations that come from we know not where. The Buddhists think that they can remember some occurrence in a former career. Perhaps that is as good an explanation of it as any. For when love comes it carries all before it.

It is curious to reflect that this matter is in the hands of the comparative young people. In other words, the decision of a subject that is most important in life does not depend upon the old or the mature, but upon the young and impulsive.

The speakers besides Mr. Fraser were: Mr. Flynn and Mr. Burgess of Belleville, Mr. Sam Clarke, M. P.P., who has just returned from the West, Mr. Fred Slade, Centreton, and Mr. Harry Field and Dr. Adam Watson, Cobourg.

CHURCH "AT HOME"

NORHAM, Sept. 10.—About sixty ladies and several men from the congregations of Bethany, Meyersburg and Norham gathered on the lawn at the parsonage here on Wednesday, and participated in the "At Home" given by the members of the Norham congregation in behalf of the other members of the circuit. During the afternoon the following programme was given: Opening selection, Hymn 154; prayer by Robert Ryckman; Scripture lesson, Ruby Everson; address of welcome, Rev. J. F. Everson; solo, Miss Connors of Campbellford; reading, Mrs. John Dinner; duet, Mrs. Samuel McCall and Mrs. John Loomis; reading, Mrs. Alfred Wilson; solo, Miss Connors; The National Anthem.

A noted visitor who attended was Mrs. Joseph Devilin, of Brighton, who lived at Norham over fifty years ago and who attended her first Ladies Aid function 64 years ago and who since that time has been present at meetings of 110 different Ladies Aids.

FADS OF THE FAMOUS

EARL OF BALFOUR

If a man of so many parts as Lord Balfour has a hobby, his hobby is tennis. He has always been a great lover of the game, and while he has never entered Wimbledon as a player, he may be seen there every year studying the style of the champions.

Lord Balfour has played tennis since his childhood. He has a private court at his country seat in Scotland and usually invites his guests to play a match with him. During the winter months he spends much of his time on the Riviera and enjoys nothing better than a vigorous match with his friend, the King of Sweden.

Lord Balfour knows tennis perfectly and plays after the manner of Billy Johnston, with a shuffling movement across the court, although as an admirer of Johnston he probably would not admit the comparison. He has a good forehand drive, and his celebrated "philosophical doubt" never intrudes in his play.

WHEN YOUR POOR OLD STOMACH GROANS WITH GAS

When Sourness, Pain and Bloating Follow Every Meal.

MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST

No matter about diets, special food programs or the dozen or more medicines you have tried without success. If you really want stomach comfort—quick, certain and lasting relief from the usual after-eating distress—just make this simple NEVER FAILING test today!

For only a few cents get from any good druggist a little pure Bisurated Magnesia — then, immediately after your next heavy meal take a teaspoonful of the powder or four of the tablets and drink a glass of warm or not iced water.

This is a simple, pleasant and inexpensive test that may be absolutely depended upon to prove its value in less than five minutes and, in most instances, relief comes almost instantly.

Bisurated Magnesia is a pleasant, harmless, non-laxative form of old-fashioned Magnesia that, when taken after meals, cleanses, sweetens and neutralizes the dangerous stomach acids that cause 95 per cent of stomach ailments. Be sure and get BISURATED Magnesia at your druggist's today!

SIR GEORGE FOSTER ADDRESSES LEAGUE OF NATIONS ASSEMBLY AWAITING GERMAN DELEGATION

Says League Has Receded From High Mark of Idealism.

IS APPRECIATED.

Several Representatives Speak on Multitude of Problems Confronting League.

GENEVA, Sept. 10 (United Press).—Germany and the imminent appearance of her accredited delegates in the assembly hall of the League of Nations engaged the consideration of every one at Geneva yesterday. In the interim, until Foreign Minister Stresemann and his colleagues actually present themselves at the essembly door and are conducted to the seats provided for them six months ago, representatives to the seventh assembly spoke yesterday on some of the multitude of problems confronting the international society.

There was speculation, too, regarding Germany's intentions with respect to certain explosive questions which must be discussed at Geneva sooner or later. For one thing, Germany will be in a position to broach the question of "war guilt" as soon as she has taken her place with the league.

Sir George Foster, of Canada, in his speech yesterday, said the league had receded from its high water mark of idealism, but the idealist goals were now being approached along a practical route.

"It is most important that a voice be heard here from a not unimportant part of the North American continent," said Foster.

On Canada's Behalf

"There was a time in the past when the attention of all the world in behalf of that continent was appropriated by the United States. But that situation has changed. I purpose to say something in behalf of ourselves, but without presuming to speak in behalf of the entire continent.

"Various hopes have failed, such as the project for mutual assistance and the protocol for arbitration, security and disarmament. But these were the high-water marks of league idealism. Locarno has brought this idealism back to a practical basis, with the result that the league now is appreciated by the entire world. The Hague court especially is one of the greatest instruments in the league for the organization and maintenance of peace, while reconstructed Austria and Hungary add fresh laurels to the league's crown."

Germans Arrive

GENEVA, Sept. 10.—Cheers welcomed the German League of Nations delegation to Geneva yesterday.

Foreign Minister Stresemann, the head of the German delegation, stepped from his train and bowed appreciation of the welcome provided by approximately 1,000 persons, who had gathered to watch the arrival of the first German representatives accredited to the league.

Mme. Stresemann and her youngest son, Wolfgang, had arrived, earlier from their vacation in Montreux, and because none of the other principal delegates of the great powers were accompanied by their wives, it was expected that Mme. Stresemann would play a very prominent social role during the period of her stay.

The attitude of Spain toward the league still served yesterday to intrigue every one in Geneva. It was asserted that no communication had been received from Madrid regarding Spain's resignation or a policy of aloofness because of the declination to give Spain a permanent seat in the council.

Clings To Hope.

A report that the resignation existed, even though it had not been delivered to the league officials,

CANADIAN CLUBS ELECT OFFICERS

Capital City Selected as Fitting Place For 1927 Convention.

APPOINTMENTS MADE.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10 (Canadian Press).—E. J. Tarr, K.C., of Winnipeg, was chosen president for the ensuing year by the Association of Canadian Clubs in session here yesterday afternoon. Ottawa was selected as the place for the 1927 convention, although Calgary made a strong bid for the honor. The date is to be fixed by the national committee.

Officers elected were: Honorary Patron, Lord Willingdon, next Governor-General. (He will be asked to accept when he arrives in Canada). Honorary Presidents, W. Sanford Evans, Winnipeg, and Lieut.-Col. C. R. McCullough, Hamilton; President, E. J. Tarr, K.C., Winnipeg; Vice-President, Mrs. Charles H. Thorburn, Ottawa; Honorary Treasurer, C. A. Gray, Ottawa. The Council is composed of the following Provincial Vice-President: New Brunswick, Lieut.-Col. E. C. Weyman, St. John; Quebec, Ross Clarkson, Montreal; Ontario, A. R. Lansfield, Hamilton, and Dr. Philip, Toronto; Manitoba, Mrs. Claude Nash, Winnipeg; Saskatchewan, Dean Ling, Saskatoon; Alberta, L. F. Clary, K.C., Calgary, and Mrs. W. D. Ferris, Edmonton; British Columbia, W. C. Ditmas, Vancouver. The Nova Scotia representative has not been appointed yet.

A resolution was passed appointing Graham Spry, a Rhodes scholar who has been doing work in connection with the League of Nations at Geneva and former newspaper man of Winnipeg, as Secretary of the Association for the next year at a salary of $3,000. Mr. Spry, who is a resident of Calgary, will have his headquarters in Ottawa.

In view of the stand taken by Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver clubs in favor of the plan, the Association passed a resolution recommending support of a research in connection with juvenile imigration to Canada by the national council on child welfare. The amount of the contribution is to be decided by the national committee.

CHEMICAL WARS DON'T THREATEN WHOLE CITIES

U. S. Army Chemists Say Fear of Terrible Agents Is Unfounded.

MOTORS A DANGER.

Carbon Monoxide Gas Is Becoming Serious Menace in Large Cities.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press).—Cities in wars of the future need have no fear of being wiped out by chemical warfare, it was asserted yesterday at a meeting of reserve officers of the chemical warfare service of the United States army, held in connection with the American Chemical Society convention.

Fear of chemical warfare weapons more terrible than those used in the world war was unfounded, Col. C. E. Brigham, executive officer of the chemical warfare service of the army, told the gathering.

"Mustard gas used in the late war," he said, "produced only 20 casualties for each ton used, and of these only one death was caused for every ton and a half used.

Idling automobile motors are costing American motorists $80,000,000 annually, and also fast creating dangerous health conditions in the large cities, delegates to the congress were told.

The menace from carbon monoxide exhaust fumes is assuming serious proportions in the congested traffic centres. Prof. Alexander Silverman, head of the Department of Chemistry of the University of Pittsburgh, told the congress.

Cure For Diabetes.

A cure for diabetes was the possibility visioned before the Society by Professor Gabriel Bertrand, director of the Biological Chemical Laboratory of the Pasteur Institute, Paris. He told the division of chemistry of medical products, experiments with nickel and cobalt have produced encouraging results in treatment of the disease. These two metals have been found present in the human body, Prof. Bertrand declared, especially in the pancreas gland.

"We have found that cases of simple diabetes, excluding the consumptive type, may be benefited, sometimes to the extent of the complete suppression of the sugar output," he declared.

Oh Henry!

the Dollar Quality for 10¢

Oh Henry! shattered more traditions than bobbed hair and short skirts. It proved that fancy boxes and gold labels have nothing to do with quality—and that 10c buys as fine candy as a dollar bill.

Nine million bars a month—this is Oh Henry's record—and made on sheer goodness and flavour which have never been equalled in the form of a candy bar.

Milk chocolate, smooth as satin—Caramel, made of whole milk—crispy, crunchy Spanish nuts—with a Butter Cream center that fairly melts in the mouth.

This is Oh Henry! for 10c—the best candy you ever tasted. Try it. Order a few bars at your grocery, drug or candy store.

"Sixty Ways of Using a Fine Candy"

Mail 10c (stamps or silver) for a copy of the Oh Henry! Book of Recipes. Try several of them for cakes, salads, summer dainties. After that, you will keep Oh Henry! in the pantry like chocolate.

SAW NO LACK OF PROSPERITY

U. S. Secretary of Treasury Has Concluded Tour of Europe.

TALKS IN LONDON.

LONDON, Sept. 10 (Canadian Press).—"I certainly saw not the slightest sign of any lack of prosperity," said Andrew M. Mellon, United States Secretary of the Treasury, referring to his European tour, in a talk yesterday with a representative of The Evening Standard, which that newspaper carefully notes was not an interview, but "a private conversation."

Mr. Mellon, who is sailing for home on the Berengaria on Saturday, has steadfastly declined to be interviewed in London, as he had in other cities where he had stooped in his swing around the Continent.

Mr. Mellon has called on British Treasury officials and many other persons of importance in London, but he said all these visits were merely courtesy calls, with no serious official purpose. Whatever Government work he has done in Europe, Mr. Mellon said, has been simply the formal carrying out of policies devised before he left home.

Mr. Mellon's comment regarding the prosperity of Europe, which The Evening Standard printed in italics, is the only summing up of Mr. Mellon's tour that has appeared in print here.

Many women motorists nowadays can repair as well as drive their own cars, but it is safe to say that very few of their number can make their own spare parts as well. One woman who does is Lady Eustace Percy, wife of the present Minister of Education, who has a real workshop in her country-house, where she makes use of the knowledge she gained while a munition-maker during the war.

ROSENEATH NEWS

ROSENEATH, Sept. 10.—The King's Mission Band held its meeting on Saturday afternoon in the old Presbyterian Church. For all the weather was rainy and very disagreeable the attendance was fairly good. The meeting was conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Lovelace, and opened with singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Scripture lesson was read by Miss J. Johnston, Matthew 28, 16-20, and Roman 10, 9-15. Prayer by Mrs. Lovelace. The minutes of August meeting were read and adopted. Mrs. Lottie Nichol read a missionary story for the young of a motherless and fatherless little girl called Mary Ann. Hymn, "I Love to Tell the Story," was then sung, after which Mrs. Lovelace gave a short story and closed the meeting by repeating The Lord's Prayer in unison.

Then the gathering held an indoor picnic in the church shed. The older boys having it fitted up for to hold their sports, and a jolly good time was spent indoors while the rain drops seemed to be having as good a time out of doors. Chairs were taken to the shed for the grown-ups to be comfortable while the younger generation made the sport.

The boys' three-legged race was won by Keith Brown and Eddie Turner. Girls' three-legged race was won by Joy Morrison and Bessie Turner. Little tots' throwing the ball the farthest, Frank Mouncey. Boys' hop race, Keith Brown. Girls' hop race, Berenece Dainard. Little girls' straight race, Myrtle Hogg and Beatrice Lovelace, even. Big boys' straight race, Preston Hall. Big girls' straight race, Joy Morrison. Small boys' race, Allan Pacey. Little boys' race, Melville George. Little girls' race, Lavine McMillan. Special race for boys, Stewart Nichol.

After the games a good substantial lunch was served, also candy was given to each one present. The candy was donated by Mr. George A. Dawe and was a great help to making the children who did not receive a prize in the sports feel they had won something, as many of them said, "Well, we got candy anyway."

Mr. Milton E. Maybee and Mr. Arthur R. Willmott, B.A., were expected to speak at the Conservative meeting on Saturday night last, but the heavy storm and bad roads coming from Harwood detained them, until it was too late to give their address at the meeting.

Next Friday night, Mr. W. A. Fraser, the Liberal candidate, will speak to the people at 8.15 o'clock in the Town Hall.

Stable Government Canada's One Great Need

Study these figures:

At the 1925 election—

1. The Conservative members increased from 51 to 116.
2. The Liberal members dropped from 117 to 101.
3. The Progressive members dwindled from 65 to 24.
4. The Conservatives gained in 8 out of the 9 provinces.
5. The Progressives lost in every Province where they had any members to lose.

The total Conservative vote rose from 945,671 in 1921 to 1,484,318 in 1925, the Conservative vote in the Province of Quebec alone increasing by 123,311.

There is no chance of a Liberal majority. The choice is between—

1. A Conservative Government with a good working majority, now almost attained;

OR

2. A temporary combination of Liberals, Progressives, Independents, Socialists, etc., such as we had in the last two Parliaments.

The Conservatives need only 7 more to give them a majority over all.

NOTE:—The following table shows the number of members elected by the various political parties in the Dominion elections of 1921 and 1925.

PARTIES	1921	1925
Conservatives	51	116	Gain 65
Liberals	117	101	Loss 16
Progressives	65	24	Loss 41
Independent, Socialists, etc.	3	4	Gain 1

SYNOPSIS

Don Juan's disillusioned father warns him: "Destroy women or they will destroy you. Take their love scornfully—and forget!" This advice has made Don Juan the greatest lover of all time. Lucretia Borgia, at the height of her infamous power in Rome, falls in love with Juan. Exquisite Lady Adriana, coveted by Donati, Borgia's kinsman, becomes interested in Juan also. So that Adriana will be left alone at their mercy, the Borgia's attempt to slay her father. Juan thwarts them, and engages in a deadly sword fight with Donati.

CHAPTER V (Continued)

He was amazed to find that this opponent of his was even better than he. After a moment he realized that he was fighting for his life, a thing he had never before been forced to do.

From the shadow of the bushes Adriana, her maid and her father watched breathlessly. And Varanese, realizing what would have happened if this new friend had not come to their rescue, gave thanks to his God for the entrance of the young Spaniard into his life.

Juan's cape was still fastened across his chin; his hat was still drawn low over his eyes. Donati had no idea who this man with such demoniacal skill might be, but he knew that it was not Varanese, as well as he knew that the man was quite likely to make short work of him.

Varanese realized that, too, yet he was glad that the men who had been carrying the palanquin had run ahead to his palace to bring help. In the distance he saw the flicker of a torch. They would come soon now.

A sharp exclamation from Donati as his sword clattered to the ground. He stood holding his right hand, which was bleeding. And Juan had drawn the cape back from his face and snatched his hat from his head and stood there in the bright moonlight, smiling, but there was no mirth in his smile, only a bitter humor.

"Pretty speeches—sometimes—have points, my lord!" he was saying to Donati.

Furiously Donati lunged towards him. In that moment he would have torn Juan to pieces with his bare hands had it been possible. But torches, borne swiftly down the road, were mingling their light with the whiteness of the moon, and he realized that safety for him lay only in flight. He turned and ran to his horse, followed by all but one of his hired murderers. That one lay on the ground mortally wounded.

Adriana and her father ran to him, the girl to stammer her thanks, the man to try vainly to express his. Juan belittled his own efforts in their behalf quite sincerely. To him, so far as the danger of it went, it was merely another interesting adventure.

But something that was not danger had entered into this affair. Looking down at Adriana, unable to tear his gaze from her lovely face, Juan longed to thank her and her father instead of letting them thank him for this moment that had brought them closer together.

He did not know then that he loved her. Yet she was more than just another lovely girl whom he would take for his own. Had he thought for an instant that he was really to care for her he would have rushed from the spot even more wildly than Donati had.

One of Varanese's men spoke to him just then, and he turned away. Adriana looked straight up into Juan's eyes. Her lovely voice trembled with emotion as she said:

"My lord, is there not something I can do to prove my boundless gratitude?"

Into his eyes came the expression that had brought him the hearts of many women. His lids drooped heavily, his eyes smiled a little caressingly.

But Adriana did not read the meaning of that gaze. Her innocence came between her eyes and his.

"You have but to name it," she urged. "I pledge my word."

Juan smiled, a little smile that flickered over his lips, a smile that had in it something of the look on a cat's face when it sees a saucer of cream. As Adriana's innocence kept her from reading his eyes, so his lack of faith in all women kept him from understanding what lay behind her words.

"Later—" he whispered, meaningly.

Wide eyed, she replied to him.

"At any time," she said, and the loveliness of her face should have told him then that at last he had met a girl who was different from any other he had known. He took her hand in his, raised it to his lips, his eyes still on her face. And somehow he could not help feeling a bit regretful that she could not have remained as fair and illusive as the moonlight in which he had first seen her instead of being just one more women who would fall into his arms the moment he asked.

Had anyone warned him that he was mistaken and that the mistake might tear from him what would be more precious than life itself he would have laughed.

Varanese returned to his daughter's side at that moment. Juan glanced at her significantly, bade them both farewell and calling Pedrillo took his leave.

He was smiling as he left them, and Pedrillo, noting that smile, smiled also. How well he knew what lay just ahead, he told himself? Amazing the way all these women, without any exception at all, fell for Don Juan! Pedrillo wished that he had half the luck!

Meanwhile Lucretia Borgia, impatiently pacing the floor, could hardly believe the truth that was so ugly and so startling. Never before had a man treated her as this Juan had. Never before had she been the one kept waiting when a rendezvous had been arranged. Impossible that this should happen to her, Lucretia Borgia, the most powerful woman in Europe and the most beautiful, according to what everyone told her. She grew more and more angry. Her favorite dog, a delicate looking little Italian greyhound, left his embroidered silken cushion to run to her. Hardly pausing, Lucretia lifted one shapely foot in its long, pointed slipper and kicked him viciously. Then angrily she strode down the long room, turned and went out onto the balcony and searched the courtyard with her eyes.

But nowhere was there any sign of Juan.

Adriana, too, was walking about her bedroom. But she moved peacefully, dreamily. Her room was painted the blue of the sky, and all across the ceiling stars of pale gold were painted. Tall candles burned in heavy golden sticks, and although the hangings were drawn back so that the night air poured in across the balcony, the scented air of that spring night moved so gently that the candles' flames flickered not at all.

Rina, Adriana's maid, removed the lovely white gown with its weight of pearls, smothering a yawn as she did so. Instantly Adriana came out of her dreams for a moment.

"Go to bed," she urged the girl. "I would sit alone awhile."

Rina, who had cared for her young mistress so many years that she dared be familiar, smiled as she spoke.

"I, too, think the Spaniard is most handsome," she remarked slyly, and then scurried away to her own bed.

Adriana flushed almost guiltily, then, left alone, went straight to her mirror. Was she beautiful? she asked her reflection. How had she looked to the gallant young Spaniard?

SIR GEORGE FOSTER

continued to evoke great interest. It was recalled that M. Palacios, head of the Spanish delegation, always had contended that Spain's attitude could be announced only when all hope of election to a seat was definitely lost.

The matter of the reorganization of the council still must be discussed by the assembly and it is considered that Spain would be acting in a logical manner should she withhold officially dispatching her resignation until the assembly debate has terminated.

Latin-America.

It is considered quite likely that the European statesmen will endeavor to have pan and Brazil retain their adherence to the league in order to preserve the organizations character of universality. At yesterday's session of the assembly Francisco Urrutia, of Colombia, on behalf of Latin-America, began the movement by voicing the hope that the two countries would continue in the future to keep within the fold. It is admitted, however, that any prediction as to what Spain will do would be extremely hazardous owing to the uncertainties of the situation in that country.

Reports from Berlin indicate that the election of Germany to membership in the league failed to arouse enthusiasm on the part of the newspapers, except the Nationalist press. Most of the organs seem skeptical that the position of Germany has been greatly improved.

EX-NATIONALIST LEADER DENIES

sire throughout the empire to accord to the young nations a full measure of autonomy.

"In this return to truth," he said the large audience, "Shall we be behind? Shall we accord our confidence to the men who have been the most ardent and the most stubborn in making us drink the cup of the great war to the dregs; to those who in 1922 were "ready, aye ready" to bleed us white upon the simple desire of one or two London politicians? Shall we not sooner lend ourselves to those who to-day are trying to guide us back along the path of sane traditions and to put a check upon the empire-mongers?"

"This was," he declared, "and it continues to be my principal purpose in supporting Mr. King and his party, purged of the bad elements that have dominated it from 1899 to 1917, in preference to Mr. Meighen, dominated by the Tory-Orange clique, whose howls in the supreme council of the present Conservative party drown out the plaintive chants of Mr. Patenaude. It was because Mr. King has given us tangible proofs of his truly Canadian patriotism, it is because he has given salutary warnings to both Ottawa and London, that I accord him my loyal support."

He was ready to-morrow to turn against Mr. King should the latter fall into the same errors as his rivals and predecessors.

The speaker reviewed the Alberta lands questions and drew attention to the inclusion in the bill by the late government of the saving clause which stipulated that the Alberta government must observe the law of 1872, which created the reserves, and also the organic law of 1905 which guaranteed to the minorities their proportional part of all moneys applied to public instruction.

This clause has been denounced by Hon. Dr. Edwards, Grand Master of the Orange order and a former member of Mr. Meighen's Cabinet, and also by Mr. Hocken, owner of the Orange Sentinel, and a Conservative member from Toronto. They had found occasion, he declared, "to denounce in their affiliated press, and that comprises almost all the newspapers at present devoted to the national policy of Mr. Meighen and Mr. Patenaude, the Separate schools, the French language, the Roman Catholic hierarchy and their fanatical partizans—Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Bourassa."

"That, he said, "is the manner in which the party of national unity so dear to the candid soul of Mr. Patenaude operates."

Mr. Bourassa dealt briefly with the customs enquiry and reiterated that it was unjust to condemn people until the investigation was complete. While the investigation had made a great show of smugglers it had done nothing against those merchants who defrauded the treasury of thousands of dollars, thanks to the ease with which the authorities passed their goods, sheltered under false declarations.

He reviewed the "constitutional issue," quoting statements in support of his position that Lord Byng's refusal to grant dissolution to Mr. King was unconstitutional. He denounced Mr. Meighen's "illegitimate ministry, forced to live an irregular life, and characterized the present administration as a menace to the social order.

WEDDING BELLS.

DOHERTY—KEENAN.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 10. — A very quiet but pretty wedding took place in St. Mary's Church on Wednesday, at 7.30 a.m., when Mary Kathleen, younger daughter of the late John Keenan and of Mrs. Keenan, Rear street, became the wife of Mr. J. Leo Doherty, of town. The bride looked lovely in a gown of white crepe, white shoes and stockings, veil of georgette and orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of roses. The bride had as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. Thomas Callory, of Trenton, who looked charming in a gown of pink georgette, large black picture hat and carrying a bouquet of roses. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Phelan in the presence of a large number of friends.

After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Doherty left on a motor trip to Montreal, the bride travelling in sand crepe dress, sand coat and hat and shoes to match.

On their return they will reside in town.

On Monday evening a large number of their friends met at the home of the groom's parents and presented the young couple with a sum of money and offering them many expressions of congratulations.

WHITE—MONCRIEF.

FRASERVILLE, Sept. 10.—A wedding of great interest took place when Miss Margaret Mae Viola Moncrief was married at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Moncrief, on Wednesday, Sept. 8, at one o'clock, to Mr. John White, of Ebenezer. The Rev. H. W. Taley performed the marriage ceremony in the presence of the members of both the interested families, as the happy groom and bride stood under a floral arch upon the spacious lawn. They were unattended, except that little Elmer Hogg and Lenore Monerief carried baskets of flowers. After the wedding luncheon in the dining-room, the bridal party left amid a shower of confetti and good wishes by C.P.R. for points west.

Miss Moncrief was one of Fraserville's most popular young ladies and will be very much missed in church and social circles. Her friends met to give her a shower at the home of her brother, Mr. Percy Moncrief, on Monday evening, when a host of beautiful gifts were presented to the bride by her Sunday School class, the young people of the league and many individual well-wishers. The flowers in the home decorations were presented to the bride by the church where great bouquets of flowers were used last Sunday in "flower Sunday" services.

Miss Moncrief sang in the choir, taught in the Sunday School and was an officer in the Y.P.L. All join in sincere wishes for all happiness to her in her new farm home in West Cavan.

CROWLEY—MEADE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral, by Rev, Father Butler on Tuesday morning, when Mary Helen Meade, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Meade, became the bride of David Crowley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Crowley, of Otonabee.

Theresa Meade, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid while Mr. John Michaels supported the groom.

Miss Lillian Hurley sang very sweetly during the nuptial mass.

The happy couple left on the 7.35 train for Toronto and other points, and on their return they will reside in Otonabee.

OBITUARY.

CLAUD PORTEOUS

CAVAN, Sept. 10.—Mr. Claud Porteous died on Wednesday morning as a result of injuries sustained while operating his tractor. He is survived by a wife and five children.

The sympathy of the community is with them in their sad bereavement. Interment will take place on Friday afternoon.

MRS. WILLIAM SMITH.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 10. — The death occurred early Monday morning of Mrs. William Smith, of Booth street, in her 81st year. The deceased, whose maiden name was Mary Ann McDonald, was born in Ireland, coming to Canada as a girl. She married William Smith about sixty years ago and lived in Seymour until a few years ago, when she came to town to reside.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, four daughters — Mrs. Frank Glenn, of Seymour; Miss Eva, at home; Mrs. Thomas Walker, of Hoard's Station; Mrs. Sanford Anderson, of Hoard's — and three sons—Ernest and George, of town, and Henry, of Toronto.

The services were conducted in Christ Church on Tuesday afternoon by Rev. G. C. Clarke, and interment made in Christ Church Cemetery.

The flowers were beautiful and testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held by her many friends.

The pallbearers were Messrs. D. J. Lynch, F. W. Wood, George Nicol, G. S. Potts, James Johnston and N. Thompson.

MISS LUCINDA GIRDWOOD.

STIRLING, Sept. 10.—Miss Lucinda Girdwood, one of the older residents of Stirling, passed away on Sunday. She suffered a heart attack in the morning and did not rally, although all possible medical assistance was given. Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Girdwood and was in her 74th year. She is survived by a brother, Robert, of Stirling, also two sisters, Mrs. George Wilson, of Chicago, and Miss Diana, of Stirling. The funeral took place on Tuesday, Rev. C. W. Barrett being in charge. The burial was in Stirling Cemetery.

DESERVED.

Old friend, I pity you.
Why?
I have bought my wife a new gown and she has just gone to show it to your wife.—Klods Hans, Copenhagen.

CANADIAN CLUBS

It was decided to cable King George an expression of the continued loyalty of the Canadian Clubs of Canada.

Another resolution endorsed by the Association stated that the Association of Canadian Clubs affirmed its faith in Canada and pledged its best efforts to promote the welfare of the country and to do its part in cultivating a spirit of unity among the people of all sections, creeds and races in the Dominion. It was recommended that the Canadian Clubs' ideal be the one promoted in the hope that a truly national movement would be developed among the citizens of Canada.

Publishers of Canadian newspapers, magazines and books were commended for their encouragement of Canadian authors.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

MILTON MAYBEE EXPLAINS POLICY OF THE TORIES

Will Build Up Industries and Provide Employment to Canadians.

CONSERVATIVE RALLY

Several Speakers Give Addresses at Mass Meeting in Campbellford.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 10.—"I say candidly that the policy of the Right Honorable Arthur Meighen is the only policy that will build up our industries, provide employment at home for our people, and protect our agricultural products so that they will bring to the farmer the returns he should receive," declared M. E. Maybee, Conservative candidate in Northumberland at the party's rally with a full house in the Regent Theatre last night.

"The great fiscal policy of the Conservative party," Mr. Maybee continued, "is practically the same as last year. It is not unchangeable, however, like the laws of the Medes and Persians. It is sufficiently flexible to be adapted to conditions as they arise. It is not necessary to explain to you the effects which a policy of that kind will have on this country, on our industries, on our people. You are well aware that industry has not been thriving as it should be in Canada Factories are shut down; many are running on part time, our young men have been drifting away from us. The aim of the Conservative party is to provide work at home for our people."

Mr. Maybee said that in 1922 when the Fordney-McCumber tariff went into effect in the United States, Canada's tariff should have been raised at the same time. Later, the Australian trade agreement was like adding insult to injury because of the low rate at which Australian agricultureal products were admitted.

"Australia can produce more cheaply than we can because of climatic conditions, and under that agrement their goods come in at almost nothing. In my opinion the King administration fell down lamentably in dealing with that condition."

Mr. Maybee dealt with the King Government's career, ending with the dissolution of Parliament with Arthur Meighen in power.

"The King administration is before you as electors for your judgment and a most serious responsibility rests upon you. Are you going to condone or condemn them for malfeasance of office? If you condone their acts, you say to future governments 'go ahead as you like!' Another question before you is whether you appreciate our British connexion or are content to drift slowly away from the Mother Country, and become independent or annex to the United States."

Mr. Maybee denied that he had ever charged the Liberals with disloyalty, "but," he supplemented, "the tendencies of Mackenzie King and some of his followers are certainly along those lines."

The Liberal leader's dependence on the Progressives and other groups for support in government, and his attempted fusion with the Progressives in this campaign were conditions which could not but be detrimental to the whole country.

"I can't understand how one man can represent all lines of thought as found in the independent groups," said Mr. Maybee. "The policies of the Western farmers have nothing in common with the farmers of the other provinces. The Westerners declare that they want export markets, while the farmers of the East want a flourishing home market with industries for the working men to create that market. The Westerners look at it from a sectional and provincial standpoint.' But if Canada is to become great we must be an united people. The Western Progressives can't exist without the other provinces. We have built transcontinental railways for them and mortgaged ourselves to provide them with other requirements. I can't see how an opponent can represent all these lines of thought. I have nothing to say of my opponent, but I ask you to think of the responsibility placed on your shoulders, and decide whether you want a clean honest administration, a policy best suited for the farmer and workingman, and whether you want Canada to retain her status in the British Empire."

Other Speakers.

Mayor G. A. Kingston presided, and also introduced the other speakers, Mrs. Fallis of Peterboro, A. J. Anderson, K.C., of Toronto, and Major Belford. In her first appearance before a local audience Mrs. Fallis made a very favorable impression. She emphasized the statement that this was the first election which peculiarly called to women, because it was stated when women were enfranchised that their influence would be for purity in politics, and that influence was needed now.

W. R. Widdess.

"The reason there is no election excitement in the country is because the people are satisfied with the Liberal policies," declared Mr. Widdess. The King Government had brought about a much needed change, he said, and he was satisfied that the tide of public opinion had now turned towards Liberalism. He eulogized the Liberal candidate, Mr. Duffus, declaring that in him the people of Peterborough West would have a man of whom they would have reason to feel proud.

W. F. Huycke.

"The present Conservative talk about scandal in the various departments is simply a smoke screen to cover their inability to produce a policy for the people," declared Mr. Huycke. The speaker dealt with the Customs scandal and denounced in no uncertain terms some of the men who were now members of the Conservative party, and who, he said, had been put out of the party by Sir Robert Borden for various offences while they were in office. He also criticized Mr. Meighen's tariff policy, saying that he had talked "no tariff" in the west, a reasonable tariff in the east, and a tariff built brick by brick for Ontario. "Just what is his tariff policy?" asked Mr. Huycke. Dealing with what he termed "the so-called constitutional issue, Mr. Huycke said that the Liberals were not opposed to Baron Byng, but they were, he declared, "opposed to Meighen for leading Byng to beleieve he could form a cabinet."

In conclusion, said Mr. Huycke, "if you vote for Mr. Duffus you will vote for the continuanc of the policies laid down by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and under which Canada saw its best times."

UNITED LADIES' AID REGULAR MEETING

Plans for Financing Church Improvements Are Discussed.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 10.—The September meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the President, Miss M. E. Needham, with a good attendance and an active interest manifested in the programme of work for the fall and winter months.

The chair was taken by the President, who has been absent from home for some months, and Miss Needham took occasion to thank the two Vice-Presidents, Mrs. A. J. Brown and Mrs. J. McKnight, for the capable manner in which they had conducted the business of the society while she was away for such an extended length of time.

The report of the Treasurer, Miss M. Dunan, included among other items the complete returns from the strawberry festival given in July, over $100.00 having been cleared at this event.

After discussion it was decided to hold the usual fowl dinner in connection with the church anniversary, Tuesday, October 19, being the date this year. A committee was appointed to prepare the programme for that occasion. Arrangements for canvassing for supplies for the dinner will be made at the next meeting.

The final payment on the church improvements, for which the Aid is responsible, comes about November 1, and it will be necessary to add to the funds on hand before this becomes due. The annual bazaar will be held early in December, and the congregation will be reminded of the donations urgently asked for to make this sale as successful as in other years, in the immediate future. Donations will not be called in until near the date of the bazaar, but that work may be going on the reminder will be given.

The Aid will not have any special activity on Fair day this year, other plans for increasing the finances being well under way.

A pleasant social hour was enjoyed at the close. The October meeting will be held at the parsonage on the first Tuesday in the month, and all committees, with their conveners, will be appointed in connection with the fowl dinner so that immediate action may be taken.

SCRUTINEERS NAMED

Havelock Conservatives Are Ready for Election Day.

HAVELOCK, Sept. 10.—A meeting of the Havelock Conservative Association was held on Wednesday evening in the Orange Hall for the purpose of appointing scrutineers in the coming election. The following are the officers:

Ward 2—Poll 1, inside scrutineer, Mrs. A. McColl; inside scrutineer poll 2, Rice Wannamaker; outside scrutineer, David McAdam.

Outside workers to assist in getting out the voters—R. Sanderson, R. McCutcheon, James Craighead, W. Copp, R. Crawford, E. Fennell, P. Haig, L. Youmans, W. Woodbeck.

OTTAWA, Ont. (United Press).—More than $300,000,000 worth of agricultural products will be marketed co-operatively by farmers' organizations in Canada this year, according to estimates of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

KITCHENER HOAX ALL EXPLAINED

Coffin Never Left England, Says Home Office Report.

MOCK FUNERAL.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—(Canadian Press.)—The Home Office has issued an official statement summarizing its investigations into the alleged finding of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener's body in Norway, and its return to England. The story of the whole affair as arranged and set forth by Frank Power, British newspaperman, is declared to be absolutely without foundation.

The investigation proved, according to the Home Office, that Power purchased the coffin, in which Kitchener's body was supposed to repose when it reached England, early in 1926, and that the coffin never left British shores, but was stored at Newcastle until Power removed it to London. Every transference of the coffin in the interval is accounted for.

Further, Power never applied for the necessary permit to open a grave in Norway, were Power asserted he found Kitchener's body, and nothing is known of any such opening, although Power arranged for a mock funeral at Stavanger with an empty coffin, which was put aboard a steamer. This was later returned to the local undertaker from whom it was hired, after film pictures were taken.

PECK'S SUPPORTERS VISIT ENNISMORE

F. L. Hughes, of Toronto, Discusses Bureau and Bisaillon.

A goodly crowd of Ennismore voters assembled last night in St. Martin's Hall to hear the Conservative viewpoint expounded by E. A. Peck, V. J. McElderry and Frank J. Hughes, a lawyer from Toronto, and a boyhood friend of Mr. McElderry.

J. K. Galvin was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting, and after some introductory remarks called on Mr. McElderry to speak.

V. J. McElderry.

Mr. McElderry spoke at some length on the Customs probe. Bisaillon, the chief officer of Customs at Montreal, made large sums of money by his dealings with the smuggling underworld. Bisaillon had two farms, one on each side of the border. He had a large barn erected, and through this barn stuff was smuggled from the United States. This smuggling was not the petty thing Mr. Dunning and other Liberal speakers declared it to be. It was an immense commercial enterprise, with rogues, bootleggers and corrupt officials in partnership. The fact that the Government knew of this and did nothing to stop it was what caused the King administration to lose support from the Progressives.

E. A. Peck

Mr. Peck opened his address with a tribute to the qualities of his opponent, J. J. Duffus. He then proceeded to define his stand on Old Age Pensions. Liberal speakers had said the Conservatives voted down the Old Age Pensions Bill. This statement had been made at the Liberal rally on Saturday last, and one of the Liberal speakers had added that Mr. Peck voted against the Old Age Pensions Bill. This was untrue. The bill passed the House of Commons unanimously, but was said he believed in Old Age Pensions, but even if the bill had passed the Senate, it would have been an empty act until the various Provinces passed Old Age Pensions Acts. Mr. Peck read the most important clause in the bill, providing for a grant from the Dominion towards any Old Age Pensions allowance that might be passed by any of the Provinces. In a sense, he said, the bill of the King Government was putting the cart before the horse because no province had yet adopted any Old Age Pensions bill.

F. L. Hughes

Mr. Hughes, in arraigning the King Government's administration of the Customs Department, read some correspondence between Bisaillon and Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs in the Liberal Government. In the letter, Bisaillon informed Mr. Bureau, that he had taken for himself a car which had been seized by officers of the department. The letter stated that as the manufacturer's serial number had been filed off, there would be trouble with the insurance company. The fact that the serial number had been removed was, said Mr. Hughes, sufficient evidence that the car had been stolen. It would have been a simple matter to find out the number by the indentation on the plate, and after that to trace the owner. As a matter of fact this procedure was followed in the case of the very car under discussion—but this was done after Bisaillon was lodged in jail!

Declaring that the so-called constitutional issue had no existence, Mr. Hughes said that last year Mr. King approached the Governor-General for a dissolution, on the ground that he had not a sufficient majority, and the people would have to decide who would govern. After the people, by returning a reduced Liberal following, had decided King should not govern, he then said he would ask Parliament to decide. It was the people first, then the Parliament. Now he had again come round with the declaration that the people would have to decide.

STORM IMPROVES LAND FOR TILLAGE

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 10 — Saturday's and Sunday's storm enabled the farmers to get their land in good condition for sowing their fall wheat, and also to get their summer ganging done.

There was considerable grain and second cutting of alfalfa still in the fields, but it is generally considered that no great amount of harm will be done to the crop still remaining in the stooks in the field.

The travelling threshing outfits are now busily engaged in attempting to keep running full time to get their jobs completed.

The Provincial highway, which is being macadamized to Fraserville from Bailieboro, is now almost completed with the exception of the final surface, and the road is now in splendid condition for motoring. There was a very heavy car traffic on the highway over the holiday.

There is still considerable ditching to be done on the highway, as the road is being properly drained.

Personals.

Roy Dawson has returned to his home from Nichol's Hospital, Peterboro, where he recently underwent an operation. He is recovering very favorably.

Mr. W. Reid of Toronto spent the holiday the guest of his sister, Mrs. George Eagleson.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perrin of Oakwood spent the holiday as the guests of friends in South Monaghan.

Miss K. Barnard of the Bell Telephone, Toronto, spent the week end as the guest of her parents.

The public and continuation schools here opened on Tuesday. Miss Wallace of Port Ferry and Miss Mary Earle are the teachers for the ensuing year.

The boys who went west with the harvesters from this district, report that farm help is very scarce there, and that the merchants and business men from the towns and cities are going out to assist in taking the crop. The boys state that when they stepped off at the railway stations the western farmers were there to get the men as soon as they arrived.

STEAMER SINKS

Floating Mine May Have Caused Disaster Which Drowned 40.

RIGA, Latvia, Sept. 10 (Canadian Press). — The coasting steamer Neibade sank last night in the Gulf of Riga, with the loss of all aboard, ten sailors and thirty passengers. The cause of the disaster is not known, but it was possibly due to the explosion of a floating mine.

The ship foundered in a heavy storm that prevented any rescue.

J. J. DUFFUS SPOKE AT TWO MEETINGS

Delivered Addresses at North Monaghan and in May's School House.

Two meetings, one at North Monaghan and the other at May's school house, last night, in the interests of J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate.

Mr. Duffus spoke at both meetings and was assisted by W. R. Widdess, W. F. Huycke, W. I. Scollard and A. E. Guidal.

W. J. Byers was unanimously chosen as chairman for the meeting at May's school house.

J. J. Duffus.

Mr. Duffus stated that if he was elected to represent the Riding he would give the Old Age Pensions his unqualified support. This act, he said, meant a great deal to the older people in the country who, through age and infirmity, were prevented from earning enough to keep them decently. Dealing with the subject, Mr. Duffus drew a pathetic picture of what he termed "one of the black marks on the fair name of Canada," namely old men, forced through circumstances beyond their control, to appear in police court and ask a magistrate to send them to jail in order that they might keep body and soul together. It was a common occurrence, he declared, especially at this time of the year and it was only fit and proper that the act should be put into operation without unnecessary delay. He characterized the Conservatives as being false prophets in their claim that Canada would go to the dogs under a Liberal Government. Their platform last year, he said, was nothing but blue ruin and economic disaster; this year it was a campaign of slander, false statements, and the dragging of names of public spirited men into the mire; all for the sole purpose of staying in power. On the other hand, he declared, the Liberal administration had brought prosperity. They have worked constantly to the advantage of the masses of the people. The speaker dwelt at some length on the Customs scandal claiming that Conservatives as well as Liberals were responsible for the state of affairs that existed.

W. R. Widdess.

"The reason there is no election excitement in the country is because the people are satisfied with the Liberal policies," declared Mr. Widdess. The King Government had brought about a much needed change, he said, and he was satisfied that the tide of public opinion had now turned towards Liberalism. He eulogized the Liberal candidate, Mr. Duffus, declaring that in him the people of Peterborough West would have a man of whom they would have reason to feel proud.

W. F. Huycke.

"The present Conservative talk about scandal in the various departments is simply a smoke screen to cover their inability to produce a policy for the people," declared Mr. Huycke. The speaker dealt with the Customs scandal and denounced in no uncertain terms some of the men who were now members of the Conservative party, and who, he said, had been put out of the party by Sir Robert Borden for various offences while they were in office. He also criticized Mr. Meighen's tariff policy, saying that he had talked "no tariff" in the west, a reasonable tariff in the east, and a tariff built brick by brick for Ontario. "Just what is his tariff policy?" asked Mr. Huycke. Dealing with what he termed "the so-called constitutional issue, Mr. Huycke said that the Liberals were not opposed to Baron Byng, but they were, he declared, "opposed to Meighen for leading Byng to beleieve he could form a cabinet."

In conclusion, said Mr. Huycke, "if you vote for Mr. Duffus you will vote for the continuanc of the policies laid down by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and under which Canada saw its best times."

Proud of Record.

Mr. King tells you he is proud of his record in the last five years. If any one is proud of Moses Assiz, the notorious bootlegger, who was twice in jail, and released the third time because he was such a precious help to the Liberals, of Baldy Robb, who was sentenced to five years for stuffing ballot boxes, or of the election scandal in Athbasca, where three or four officials are now in jail, if any persons are proud of that record will you tell me what record they could be ashamed of?"

In Oxford County Mr. Lapointe never mentioned the customs scandal and Mr. Dunning tried to make a joke of it by asking those in the audience who never smuggled, to stand up, and no one stood. Smuggling was common; everybody smuggled, he said.

With that reference, Mrs. Fallis said: "If you think it is a joke that the treasury should lose millions of dollars every year through smuggling - that Jacques Bureau, who debauched customs officials from one end of the country to the other, should be elevated to the Senate, that women of the underworld should be allowed to bring in drugs to drag innocent young girls to their own level, if you think these things are a joke, vote for the return of Mr. King and Mr. Robb and Mr. Dunning, and they will give you an exhibition of the peculiar sense of humor they seem to possess."

Since the Big Wind.

Major Belford, speaking of Mr. Fraser and his methods said: "There has not been so much hot air let loose in Northumberalnd county since the big wind."

Mr. Fraser's campaign was marked by bombast and self glorification, said Major Belford.

"Are you going to throw aside a quiet unassuming man of usefulness, like Mr. Maybee, for that little balloon,' he asked.

He dubbed Mr. Fraser little Napoleon, and laughed at last night's Liberal meeting in Wooler. From the anouncements of it Major Belford satirically remarked that there would no doubt be a big explosion and great carnage there.

As to temperance he asserted that the Ontario government could do nothing effectively with a Federal government that connived at the flooding of this country with liquor.

LADIES' MEETING HELD IN LAKEFIELD

J. J. Duffus Speaks on Customs Probe and Record of Party.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 10.—A meeting of lady voters was held in the Queen Street Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, in the interests of J. J. Duffus, Liberal candidate for West Peterborough, with a fair attendance. Mrs. W. M. Graham, chairman of the Liberal Ladies' Committee of the village, was in the chair, and introduced Mr. Duffus.

Mr. Duffus pointed out that the Liberal party always has worked in the interests of the industrial workers, whether in agriculture or in other industrial pursuits. The policy of protection is a good one in principle, but when used as a screen to allow the big interests enormous profits, it is an abuse. A certain amount of protection is necessary, some industries needing it in a greater degree than others. It is the Liberal policy to reduce the tariff on such industries as would not be harmed by it. For example, the reduction of the tax on automobiles brought a large delegation from Oshawa who were frightened by the threat of Mr. McLaughlin of General Motors to close up at once. They were received by Messrs. King and Robb, who explained the situation, but refused to be stampeded. What is the result? Did the General Motors Close? No, they are doing a greater business than ever. The effect of the Robb budget in the automobile business in Canada can be seen by official figures. In the first six months of 1925 there were 93,000 motor cars manufactured in the border cities of Canada, and in the corresponding time of 1926 there were 124,000 cars manufactured, which shows a huge increase.

The tariff was first put on manufactured articles to prevent free entry of American-made goods and to protect infant industries. This was the work of Sir John Macdonald, one of the ablest Canadian statesmen, and the father of the national policy in 1878. This protection has in some cases been taken advantage of, and many firms are reaping exorbitant profits. The Liberal party doesn't want to hurt any industry, and it will not do so. Many articles are on the free list, for example, binder twine which comes in from the States duty free, but the industry is prosperous and profitable in Canada and a large quantity is exported.

The so-called Customs scandal has occupied a great deal of attention, and the Conservatives are trying to establish the culpability of the Liberals in this regard. It is an unfortunate episode certainly, but it has been going on for at least twenty years, becoming increasingly profitable and being facilitated by the high power motor boats, trucks and motor cars.

The Commercial Association asked for action of the Liberal Government on this question, and a bill passed the Commons making the smuggling of more than $200 worth of goods a prison offence, with no option of a fine. This bill was held up in the Senate, which has a Conservative majority, and its effectiveness reduced so as to render it practically useless, and the Conservatives in the House of Commons raised not a hand to influence the Senate to pass the measure.

Smuggling is going on still, and a large cargo of poisoned liquor smuggled in from the States in the past few weeks caused the death of nearly a score of Canadian citizens, and this under Conservative administration. One does not wish to blame the Conservative Government for these deaths, but it goes to show how hard it is to stop smuggling, and also how inconsistent it is to blame the Liberals alone. H. H. Stevens, who is Minister of Customs under the Meighen administration, tried to put pressure on the smuggling, but Conservative candidates in the border constituencies have insisted on its being lifted or they would lose their seats, so the smuggling goes on more than ever, for it is a profitable business.

The late Mr. Boivin, who was Minister of Customs for the Liberal Government for some months previous to the dissolution of Parliament, asked the Premier, Mr. King, to assist him in cleaning up the Department, and when the investigation was at its height the data was confiscated in some way and some of the worst offenders escaped from the country. The matter was divulged by Mr. Stevens as a political game. It was the Liberal Cabinet who asked for the investigation, and which is now being blamed. In 1916 and 1917, in a certain part of Western Canada, there were large shipments of farm implements coming over the border, for which duties were collected by an honest officer, an appointee of the Liberal Government, but just previous to the 1917 election he was made to refund these duties by the Conservative Government. Is that corruption on the part of the Conservatives?

Mr. Duffus referred briefly to several Conservatives, now accredited candidate for election, who were put out of the party by Sir Robert Borden; among these are Hon. Robert Rogers in Winnipeg, Foster in Nova Scotia, and Garland in Carleton, Ontario. Garland made $9,000 in three weeks as a profit in selling drugs during war time, and yet on Ottawa bill-boards is the sign, "Vote for Garland and reduce corruption." Is it consistent?

Mr. Duffus referred to enormous tax reduction of the Liberal regime, which includes the reduction in postage, tax on cheques and receipts and income tax, and the lowering of the automobile prices. All this met with strenuous opposition from the Conservatives. Mr. King and his colleagues, who found the country in a terrible condition in 1921, when he became Premier, has, by hard work and persistency, made conditions better and increased the prosperity. He (Mr. King) has promised, if returned, further tax reduction, and that tariff matters will be handled by the tariff board and not made a matter of politics.

Mr. Duffus also gave an illuminating account of the Old-Age Pension Bill which was passed by the Liberal Government, but like the bill to enforce the Customs regulations, thrown out by the Senate.

Mr. Duffus appealed to the ladies for their support as the unanimous choice of the Liberals of West Peterborough, and by no request of his own. If elected he promised to use his best efforts for the good of the people. He urged all to vote and to vote early. He would rest his case on the record of the Liberal party and on his own personal record and experience.

Mrs. Graham spoke for a short time, giving a few statistics to show that the blue ruin cry could not now be applied to Canada, as all industries showed a marked increase. The flour milling industry alone has increased 130 per cent. in the past ten years, she said.

Miss Jobbitt, president of the Liberal women's organization in Peterborough, spoke a few words of encouragement to the ladies in their work, and assured them of the genuine worth of the candidate, who is well and favorably known throughout the riding, rural and urban alike.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

WILLYS-OVERLAND HOLDS FALL CONVENTION

Dealers and Salesmen From All Parts of Ontario and Quebec Attend.

The Crystal Ballroom at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, September 2nd, presented as fine a picture as can be imagined. Well over 200 dealers from all parts of Ontario and the Province of Quebec met to receive at first hand, knowledge of the extensive programme and plans for the Willys-Overland organization in Canada for the 1926-27 selling season.

Following a very splendid luncheon, Mr. T. A. Russel, President of Company, addressed the dealers and congratulated them on their splendid business achievement during the past year. With each model and every body style in the line completely modernized to meet the present trend, together with the untiring effort of the sales organization, a very large increase in their sales over any previous year had resulted, he stated.

Mr. Russell touched lightly on the outstanding mechanical qualifications of the Willys-Knight models now being built, and in closing emphasized to those present that the 1926-27 selling year should hold for them an even brighter future than what the past had. He based his forecast on general business conditions, the trend and the forecasts of other leaders in the world of commerce, finance and industry.

Having just returned from Europe, where he attended the introduction of the Overland Whippet in that area, Mr. Russell was in a position to give those present first-hand knowledge of conditions as they exist at the present time on the Continent. He stated that indication pointed to a general improvement in all lines of industry.

Following Mr. Russell's address, Mr. Leduc, Sales Manager for the Company, spoke on the great possibilities and the bright prospects ahead of the organization. He stated that this year their sales had been 50 per cent higher than they were one year ago. This, in view of the fact that the dealer organization was without a four-cylinder car for over 60 days during the height of the selling season, was a remarkable achievement.

With the introduction of the Overland Whippet last June, sales increased tremendously and outgrew the anticipations of the most optimistic at the factory. He stated that although the factory had been working day and night to keep up with the demand for this new type car, there is still a very large waiting list and arrangements are again being made to provide facilities for increasing the production on this model.

Other executives of the Company, upon conclusion of Mr. Leduc's address, spoke to the dealers on matters pertaining strictly to their business development.

At the close of the meeting, the dealers were requested to be the guests of the Willys-Overland Sales Co., Limited, at the Canadian National Exhibition.

LIBERAL MEETING HELD AT MADOC

C. D. Mulvey and Candidate Address Hastings-Peterborough Electors.

MADOC, September 10. — A meeting in the interests of the Liberal party was held in the Empire Theatre yesterday evening. Mr. E. C. Tufts acted as chairman in a very able manner.

The first speaker was Charles D. Mulvey of Ottawa, who gave a clear and concise outline of the platforms of the two parties. He said that the Liberal party stood for the constitutional status of Canada as a nation.

In speaking of the Conservative platform the speaker said that the Conservatives claim they should be returned to power on the strength of the King government's maladministration of the Customs department. In Mr. Meighen's address in Hamilton he said that before Canada participated in an empire war there should be a general election. Such a procedure would be inadvisable, Mr. Mulvey said, because it is wrong in principle. He scored Conservative tactics in this campaign as attacking not only parties but principles and individuals.

Mr. McIvey discussed briefly the question as to whether a governor-general of Canada can refuse dissolution of Parliament. He quoted Professor Heith of Edinburgh University, who said that Lord Byng in refusing dissolution of Parliament as advised by Mackenzie King, had relegated Canada to a colonial status, which she was thought to have outgrown long ago. He recalled the honor conferred upon Canada when a Canadian, Senator Dandurand, was made president of the League of Nations. "If we are a colony," said Mr. Mulvey, "we are not entitled to a seat in the League of Nations."

Old Age Pensions.

Mr. Mulvey next spoke of the Old Age Pensions, and the defeat of the bill in the Senate, which, he said, is a Conservative senate. Old people who have given their strength and energy to the up-building of Canada, have a right to be looked after in their old age by the country they have served he said.

In closing Mr. Mulvey said he would be able to welcome John S. Marshall as representing this constituency in Ottawa and appealed to the audience to put away all prejudices and vote for the side that seems strongest and best.

Mr. Marshall's entry toward the close of Mr. Mulvey's speech was the signal for renewed applause. In introducing the candidate Mr. Tufts remarked: "We don't know what we can do in this constituency until we try, and we have not tried yet."

John S. Marshall

Mr. Marshall began by saying he thought he was a little different from some other politicians because he was able to see some good in men of both parties, and he did not believe in mud slinging. The people, he said, must decide between the platforms of the two parties as to which is the best one for the country. He then proceeded to outline the Liberal planks, the first of which is Low Tariff. He cited the Robb budget and its effects, and illustrated by the Robb budget of 1924 with its resultant drop in price of agricultural implement. Massey-Harris, he said, have never had such business as they have had since the 1924 budget.

At the announcement of the present Robb budget a howl was put up by the Tory papers that General Motors was closing down and moving away. They closed one day and opened again the next day, and have been open ever since. Since the budget passed they have seen the greatest period for the auto business and the greatest dividends in their history were paid in June. General Motors have just finished a large addition to their plant, hurried through in one month. "Why have more cars been sold? Because the price was lowered. Reductions began immediately after the tariff changes."

Mr. Marshall then discussed at some length the Australian Treaty and the cheese business in general and particularly in Hastings County The member for South Hastings had said in a speech in the House concerning the Australian Treaty: "It has ruined the cheese business in my county." Mr. Marshall says it did not ruin it. The cheese business was never more thriving than in 1925 and 1926. During the war a little higher price was paid, but the cheese business is in better condition today than it ever was before in its history. He spoke of the preference given in the treaty to automobiles General Motors, he said, preferred to bring their parts over to Canada from the States, make up their cars, and ship to Australia to get the benefit of the 12 per cent tariff.

The candidate spoke of the few unemployed men in Canada just now as exemplified in the scarcity of men to help bring in the harvests of the west. Winnipeg, he said, has a number of unemployed but these men were offered eight dollars a day and their board to work in the harvest fields and refused.

Mr. Marshall referred next to the changes in the tax exemptions; and of the orderly markets. He discussed the Co-operative Cheese Company and the good work being done, and the grain growers' marketing system, the greatest in the world. He then passed on to the pulpwood embargo.

Mr. Marshall said he would not argue the question of the depletion of the pulpwood forests, but he did not believe there was much danger. They had been warned, he said, that there was only enough to last 125 years, but the timber being cut today is 35 years old. If the trees can be grown in 35 years, three or four crops can be grown before the allotted time is over. Mr. Meighen, he said, was in favor of the embargo for the sake of employment, but the speaker said it would not increase it because they are manufacturing every pound of paper they can now.

Smuggling Problem.

He then referred to the smuggling problem. High tariff, he said, is an incentive to smuggling. Smugglers and rum-runners are twin brothers, said Mr. Marshall. The rum-runner lands his cargo of liquor and is tempted to bring back a load of narcotic drugs or of silks or some commodity on which there is a high tariff.

The candidate said that there were a number of men in the Meighen Cabinet of whom Sir Robert Borden had not approved, and had had the courage to drive out, but they had come back in again.

Mr. Marshall referred to historical incidents to show the trouble industries had encountered because of high tariff. He mentioned farmers' movements and the apparent decline of the Progressive party. He praised the Progressive movement, but he said: "It may die out, until there is not a Progressive in Parliament except Agnes McPhail, and she will be there as long as she lives." (Laughter).

In closing, Mr. Marshall said: "I would say to you here to-night, if you would rather have low tariff than high tariff, vote for me!"

WOMAN FALLS THOUSAND FEET

Volunteer Drops When Parachute Remains Attached To Plane.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN.

LEICESTER, England, Sept. 10.—Dorothy Cain, the young wife of a Leicester hotel-keeper, volunteered yesterday to make a parachute descent from an airplane, but the parachute remained attached to the plane and the woman fell from a height of 1,000 feet. Her fall was witnessed by 2,000 persons who had assembled to watch a series of exhibition flights.

Last week an expert parachute jumper made a successful descent, and invitations were extended to local aspirants, and several young women offered to try. One of them made a successful descent on Sunday.

The pilot of the plane, Captain Muir, says that exactly the same precautions were taken yesterday, and he ould not explain the cause of the accident.

Smuggling is going on still, and a large cargo of poisoned liquor smuggled in from the States in the past few weeks caused the death of nearly a score of Canadian citizens, and this under Conservative administration. One does not wish to blame the Conservative Government for these deaths, but it goes to show how hard it is to stop smuggling, and also how inconsistent it is to blame the Liberals alone. H. H. Stevens, who is Minister of Customs under the Meighen administration, tried to put pressure on the smuggling, but Conservative candidates in the border constituencies have insisted on its being lifted or they would lose their seats, so the smuggling goes on more than ever, for it is a profitable business.

The late Mr. Boivin, who was Minister of Customs for the Liberal Government for some months previous to the dissolution of Parliament, asked the Premier, Mr. King, to assist him in cleaning up the Department, and when the investigation was at its height the data was confiscated in some way and some of the worst offenders escaped from the country. The matter was divulged by Mr. Stevens as a political game. It was the Liberal Cabinet who asked for the investigation, and which is now being blamed. In 1916 and 1917, in a certain part of Western Canada, there were large shipments of farm implements coming over the border, for which duties were collected by an honest officer, an appointee of the Liberal Government, but just previous to the 1917 election he was made to refund these duties by the Conservative Government. Is that corruption on the part of the Conservatives?

Mr. Duffus referred briefly to several Conservatives, now accredited candidate for election, who were put out of the party by Sir Robert Borden; among these are Hon. Robert Rogers in Winnipeg, Foster in Nova Scotia, and Garland in Carleton, Ontario. Garland made $9,000 in three weeks as a profit in selling drugs during war time, and yet on Ottawa bill-boards is the sign, "Vote for Garland and reduce corruption." Is it consistent?

Mr. Duffus referred to enormous tax reduction of the Liberal regime, which includes the reduction in postage, tax on cheques and receipts and income tax, and the lowering of the automobile prices. All this met with strenuous opposition from the Conservatives. Mr. King and his colleagues, who found the country in a terrible condition in 1921, when he became Premier, has, by hard work and persistency, made conditions better and increased the prosperity. He (Mr. King) has promised, if returned, further tax reduction, and that tariff matters will be handled by the tariff board and not made a matter of politics.

Mr. Duffus also gave an illuminating account of the Old-Age Pension Bill which was passed by the Liberal Government, but like the bill to enforce the Customs regulations, thrown out by the Senate.

Mr. Duffus appealed to the ladies for their support as the unanimous choice of the Liberals of West Peterborough, and by no request of his own. If elected he promised to use his best efforts for the good of the people. He urged all to vote and to vote early. He would rest his case on the record of the Liberal party and on his own personal record and experience.

Mrs. Graham spoke for a short time, giving a few statistics to show that the blue ruin cry could not now be applied to Canada, as all industries showed a marked increase. The flour milling industry alone has increased 130 per cent. in the past ten years, she said.

Miss Jobbitt, president of the Liberal women's organization in Peterborough, spoke a few words of encouragement to the ladies in their work, and assured them of the genuine worth of the candidate, who is well and favorably known throughout the riding, rural and urban alike.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

WILLYS-OVERLAND HOLDS FALL CONVENTION

Dealers and Salesmen From All Parts of Ontario and Quebec Attend.

The Crystal Ballroom at the King Edward Totel, Toronto, September 2nd, presented as fine a picture as can be imagined. Well over 200 dealers from all parts of Ontario and the Province of Quebec met to receive at first hand, knowledge of the extensive programme and plans for the Willys-Overland organization in Canada for the 1926-27 selling season.

Following a very splendid luncheon, Mr. T. A. Russel, President of Company, addressed the dealers and congratulated them on their splendid business achievement during the past year. With each model and every body style in the line completely modernized to meet the present trend, together with the untiring effort of the sales organization, a very large increase in their sales over any previous year had resulted, he stated.

Mr. Russell touched lightly on the outstanding mechanical qualifications of the Willys-Knight models now being built, and in closing emphasized to those present that the 1926-27 selling year should hold for them an even brighter future than what the past had. He based his forecast on general business conditions, the trend and the forecasts of other leaders in the world of commerce, finance and industry.

Having just returned from Europe, where he attended the introduction of the Overland Whippet in that area, Mr. Russell was in a position to give those present first-hand knowledge of conditions as they exist at the present time on the Continent. He stated that indication pointed to a general improvement in all lines of industry.

Following Mr. Russell's address, Mr. Leduc, Sales Manager for the Company, spoke on the great possibilities and the bright prospects ahead of the organization. He stated that this year their sales had been 50 per cent higher than they were one year ago. This, in view of the fact that the dealer organization was without a four-cylinder car for over 60 days during the height of the selling season, was a remarkable achievement.

With the introduction of the Overland Whippet last June, sales increased tremendously and outgrew the anticipations of the most optimistic at the factory. He stated that although the factory had been working day and night to keep up with the demand for this new type car, there is still a very large waiting list and arrangements are again being made to provide facilities for increasing the production on this model.

Other executives of the Company, upon conclusion of Mr. Leduc's address, spoke to the dealers on matters pertaining strictly to their business development.

At the close of the meeting, the dealers were requested to be the guests of the Willys-Overland Sales Co., Limited, at the Canadian National Exhibition.

SWEET BUTTER.

Sweet butter absorbs odors and flavors of other food more readily than salted butter and should therefore be kept tightly covered in the refrigerator.

LIBERAL MEETING HELD AT MADOC

C. D. Mulvey and Candidate Address Hastings-Peterborough Electors.

MADOC, September 10. — A meeting in the interests of the Liberal party was held in the Empire Theatre yesterday evening. Mr. E. C. Tufts acted as chairman in a very able manner.

The first speaker was Charles D. Mulvey of Ottawa, who gave a clear and concise outline of the platforms of the two parties. He said that the Liberal party stood for the constitutional status of Canada as a nation.

In speaking of the Conservative platform the speaker said that the Conservatives claim they should be returned to power on the strength of the King government's maladministration of the Customs department. In Mr. Meighen's address in Hamilton he said that before Canada participated in an empire war there should be a general election. Such a procedure would be inadvisable, Mr. Mulvey said, because it is wrong in principle. He scored Conservative tactics in this campaign as attacking not only parties but principles and individuals.

Mr. McIvey discussed briefly the question as to whether a governor-general of Canada can refuse dissolution of Parliament. He quoted Professor Heith of Edinburgh University, who said that Lord Byng in refusing dissolution of Parliament as advised by Mackenzie King, had relegated Canada to a colonial status, which she was thought to have outgrown long ago. He recalled the honor conferred upon Canada when a Canadina, Senator Dandurand, was made president of the League of Nations. "If we are a colony," said Mr. Mulvey, "we are not entitled to a seat in the League of Nations."

Old Age Pensions.

Mr. Mulvey next spoke of the Old Age Pensions, and the defeat of the bill in the Senate, which, he said, is a Conservative senate. Old people who have given their strength and energy to the up-building of Canada, have a right to be looked after in their old age by the country they have served he said.

In closing Mr. Mulvey said he would be able to welcome John S. Marshall as representing this constituency in Ottawa and appealed to the audience to put away all prejudices and vote for the side that seems strongest and best.

Mr. Marshall's entry toward the close of Mr. Mulvey's speech was the signal for renewed applause. In introducing the candidate Mr. Tutfs remarked: "We don't know what we can do in this constituency until we try, and we have not tried yet."

John S. Marshall

Mr. Marshall began by saying he thought he was a little different from some other politicians because he was able to see some good in men of both parties, and he did not believe in mud slinging. The people, he said, must decide between the platforms of the two parties as to which is the best one for the country. He then proceeded to outline the Liberal planks, the first of which is Low Tariff. He cited the Robb budget and its effects, and illustrated by the Robb budget of 1924 with its resultant drop in price of agricultural implement. Massey-Harris, he said, have never had such business as they have had since the 1924 budget.

At the announcement of the present Robb budget a howl was put up by the Tory papers that General Motors was closing down and moving away. They closed one day and opened again the next day, and have been open ever since. Since the budget passed they have seen the greatest period for the auto business and the greatest dividends in their history were paid in June. General Motors have just finished a large addition to their plant, hurried through in one month. "Why have more cars been sold? Because the price was lowered. Reductions began immediately after the tariff changes."

Mr. Marshall then discussed at some length the Australian Treaty and the cheese business in general and particularly in Hastings County The member for South Hastings had said in a speech in the House concerning the Australian Treaty: "It has ruined the cheese business in my county." Mr. Marshall says it did not ruin it. The cheese business was never more thriving than in 1925 and 1926. During the war a little higher price was paid, but the cheese business is in better condition today than it ever was before in its history. He spoke of the preference given in the treaty to automobiles General Motors, he said, preferred to bring their parts over to Canada from the States, make up their cars, and ship to Australia to get the benefit of the 12 per cent tariff.

The candidate spoke of the few unemployed men in Canada just now as exemplified in the scarcity of men to help bring in the harvests of the west. Winnipeg, he said, has a number of unemployed but these men were offered eight dollars a day and their board to work in the harvest fields and refused.

Mr. Marshall referred next to the changes in the tax exemptions; and of the orderly markets. He discussed the Co-operative Cheese Company and the good work being done, and the grain growers' marketing system, the greatest in the world. He then passed on to the pulpwood embargo.

Mr. Marshall said he would not argue the question of the depletion of the pulpwood forests, but he did not believe there was much danger. They had been warned, he said, that there was only enough to last 125 years, but the timber being cut today is 35 years old. If the trees can be grown in 35 years, three or four crops can be grown before the allotted time is over. Mr. Meighen, he said, was in favor of the embargo for the sake of employment, but the speaker said it would not increase it because they are manufacturing every pound of paper they can now.

Smuggling Problem.

He then referred to the smuggling problem. High tariff, he said, is an incentive to smuggling. Smugglers and rum-runners are twin brothers, said Mr. Marshall. The rum-runner lands his cargo of liquor and is tempted to bring back a load of narcotic drugs or of silks or some commodity on which there is a high tariff.

The candidate said that there were a number of men in the Meighen Cabinet of whom Sir Robert Borden had not approved, and had had the courage to drive out, but they had come back in again.

Mr. Marshall referred to historical incidents to show the trouble industries had encountered because of high tariff. He mentioned farmers' movements and the apparent decline of the Progressive party. He praised the Progressive movement, but he said: "It may die out, until there is not a Progressive in Parliament except Agnes McPhail, and she will be there as long as she lives." (Laughter).

In closing, Mr. Marshall said: "I would say to you here to-night, if you would rather have low tariff than high tariff, vote for me!"

WOMAN FALLS THOUSAND FEET

Volunteer Drops When Parachute Remains Attached To Plane.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN.

LEICESTER, England, Sept. 10.—Dorothy Cain, the young wife of a Leicester hotel-keeper, volunteered yesterday to make a parachute descent from an airplane, but the parachute remained attached to the plane and the woman fell from a height of 1,000 feet. Her fall was witnessed by 2,000 persons who had assembled to watch a series of exhibition flights.

Last week an expert parachute jumper made a successful descent, and invitations were extended to local aspirants, and several young women offered to try. One of them made a successful descent on Sunday.

The pilot of the plane, Captain Muir, says that exactly the same precautions were taken yesterday, and he could not explain the cause of the accident.
